Gracious Words

THE DAY after elections the Editor of the Emerald was stopped by a student on the campus and congratulated on the passing of the $5 perpetual fee amendment, the student saying that without the Emerald's support it would have been impossible to accomplish such a beneficial action. The Editor, being human, accepted the compliment gracefully, both for the daily and for himself, but he could not help feeling just a trifle awkward while the sweet words fell upon his hungry ears.

The reason he felt just a little foolish is simple. He knew way back in the far recesses of his mind, where sits the Court of Justice and where the bailiff has orders to bar the door against the Ego, that the Judge was frowning all the time whilst the student was saying his graceful words and all the time whilst the Editor was modestly bowing thanks. After a congratulatory handshake and a parting between the student and the Editor, the Judge delivered sentence, to wit: "That justice must be done, and imprisonment in the Cell of the Guilty Conscience must be served, until the sin has been expiated."

To be serious, the Editor wishes to express for the student body of the University and for himself appreciation to Randall Jones, Associated Student president, for the untiring, unselfish and sincere work which has marked his participation in a far-vised plan.

It was Randall who first proposed the idea and who worked in the face of innumerable obstacles before he even gained backing for the proposal, which he knew, if adopted would mean so much to Oregon in the years to come.

When students crowd the tiers in the new pavilion, cheering the Oregon basketball varsity on to victory, they will also be cheering for Randall, because it will have been he who made that victory possible. When the Homecoming thousands surround the gridiron, sitting comfortably in the big grandstand, eagerly leaning forward as the two elevens fight for yardage, it will have been Randall who was chiefly responsible for the adequate provision for the spectators. When the students enjoy the great benefits of the Student Union, and it has become a reality some three years hence, instead of remaining but a far off dream, it will have been Randall who transmuted that filmy cloud into brick and mortar.

The attainment of this one plan ranks as high or higher than the achievements of any previous administration. As building after building rises, with foundations resting firmly on the solidity of this plan, they will be permanent monuments to the vision of Randall Jones.

In closing, the Editor cannot refrain from telling who the student was that stopped him on the campus the day after elections. The student who stopped the Editor and so generously attributed the attainment of the building fee plan to the Emerald, was none other than Randall himself.

The University Accepts

IT HAS just been learned that C. O. Peterson, proprietor of the Eugene Excelsior company, and former mayor of Eugene, has given to the University a strip of land between 30 and 40 feet long and two feet wide along the south side of the mill race. Mr. Peterson is owner of the mill race right-of-way, and gave the land so that the curve could be taken out of the north edge of the platform when it is extended. This gift comes as a welcome addition to that of Frank L. Chambers, who has donated the piece of ground now occupied by the bleacher seats and extending some distance along the south bank of the race. And the University is happy to accept the gift in the spirit of the giver.

Communications

Letters to the EMERALD from students and faculty members are welcomed, but must be signed and worded concisely. If it is desired, the writer's name will be kept out of print. It must be understood that the editor reserves the right to reject communications.

CRITIC OF COMMUNICATIONS HIMSELF CONTRIBUTES

Dear Editor: In view of the fact that economy seems to be the best bet around the campus, I would like to venture a suggestion.

Since news on the campus is so scarce that the Emerald staff must resort to a daily "wind jamming", contest of three or four columns to fill the paper, why not make the Emerald a tri-weekly and cut out the communications column. It costs money to print that stuff, yet who can imagine that it is worth even the time it takes to read it. The column in question might be considered good filler in a high school paper, but is certainly disgusting in a University daily. Good old "boiler plate" does not cost as much and is at least as interesting reading.
