President Campbell

A sun among the planets, thou dost draw
The hearts of men by influence benign,
And lines of living power, by spirit law,
Compel their souls to unison with thine.
From thy light spreading presence shine
Radiant compulsions melting cold and strife;
Men's hearts are warmed old hates dissolve away
And new desires leap quickening to life.
And so men's minds are greated, and the sun
Of deeds is multiplied, and at thy smile
Shy, hidden kindnesses blossom tremblingly;
Winners are made for victories to come,
And joy expands the hearts of men, the while
They move in planetary harmony.

A Young Poet

(To those blind to my inner soul)

He seems too proud
When he companions with his friends;
But his eyes cloud
With gray humility
Each time he bends
Above a flowery elod.

—W. E. CONRAD KIDD.

The Flirt

It was poor work for her
Whose pale exquisiteness
Outshone the stars in beauty—
grave-digging:
rough, dirty, moist, graves—
one in the heart of every man she met.

—ETHA JEANNE CLARK.

Immigrants

Departure at dusk,
Sad adieu is given;
For a land filled with gold
Their good ship is driven;
Riotous seas,
Gotham's towering spires;
Hope, high in the heart,
'rases thoughts of home fires;
Into the melting pot
Midst the froth and the foam,
In the land of the free
They make them their home.

—MORRIE SPATZ.

To H. C. Howe

What is there now to say when even kings
Must lay their old brocaded robes aside
And all the purple pageant of the world
Drift out across the gray and ebbing tide?

The little gods have come to take your place
With grasping hands and noiseless tread of feet,
The smell of merchantman pervades the air
And dreams are stifled in the city's heat.

What is there now to say when even you
Must put aside the rapier blade and sigh
To prostrate low before these men who come
With just the wares they wish the world to buy.

—ALICE ANN TUTHILL.

To Find

Oh Beauty—I will seek thee in all places, climbing the hallowed stairs of life upon my knees.
Oh Beauty—I will find thy vernal fountain, and quench me at thy cool liquidity.

Oh I will know thee at the swirl of morning
In some far stillness full replete with rest.
Oh I will lay in thy great flowing
After the searing eons of my quest.

—M. J. SHELLEY.

PROF. SMITH WRITES STORY FOR OREGONIAN

Wild Places of Coos and Curry Described in Article

The wild places of the coast country of Coos and Curry were described by Prof. Warren D. Smith, head of the geology department, in an article in the feature section of Sunday's Oregonian. The average lay reader learned many new facts about familiar territory.

For instance, did you know that Long Tom was a yazoo stream? Or, for that matter, how many of us knew what a yazoo stream was? A yazoo stream, of which Long Tom is a good example, is a tributary meandering along parallel to the main river with which it may finally unite. This type of stream, named from the Yazoo, a tributary of the Mississippi, furnishes an interesting problem of drainage to the geologist and engineer.

It is interesting to learn also that Coquille is named for the French word for shell; that coal is mined in Oregon at Riverton and Beaver Hill, coal more like that obtained from the Philippines and Japan than that of the eastern part of the United States; and that Cape Blanco is the westernmost point of the United States. Near Cape Blanco two interesting, if widely different, operations are carried on: a great bed of clams is in process of petrification and the sands of the beach near there are being sluiced for gold and platinum.

ASSEMBLY WILL MEET DAILY DURING SUMMER

Those students who stay over for the summer session this year will find the "regular assembly" a little more frequent than they have been used to. The truth of the matter is that there will be an assembly every day.

The first of these will be held June 23 in the auditorium of the school of music. The assembly will include a program by the school of music.

It is not known definitely who the speakers for the two following assemblies will be, but Friday's assembly will be held in connection with the educational conference which will take place on the campus Friday and Saturday, June 27 and 28.

David Snedden, who will be the most prominent visitor to the campus this summer will probably speak on the 29th and 30th.

The complete program for assemblies for the entire summer session is not finished as yet but it is hinted that the list of speakers will include many noted men.

RUTH AKERS WILL GIVE RECITAL ON THURSDAY

Tomorrow evening, at 8:15, Ruth Akers, soprano, assisted by Bernice Yeo, pianist, will give her senior recital in the school of music auditorium. A comprehensive program will be sung including groups from the Italian, German, French and English schools. An aria from Liza Lehmann's "Persian Garden" will complete the program. Miss Yeo will contribute two charming numbers by Faure.

Miss Akers is well and favorably known on the campus as the possessor of a lovely soprano voice, and has been very active in things musical. She is a member of Mu Phi Epsilon, national musical fraternity, is assistant director of the girls' glee club, and has appeared repeatedly with that organization as soloist. She has also been soloist in the Presbyterian church for several years. She is a pupil of John B. Siefert.

Miss Yeo, who graduates this year, is an accomplished pianist, and has a reputation as a musician of exceptionally high order.
