

CONCENTRATION URGED BY EPISCOPAL BISHOP

President Campbell Sends University Message

"Keep away from the border line of mediocrity," was the warning contained in the address given by Bishop Walter Taylor Sumner at assembly yesterday. He advised the student of today to "dare to do mighty things" with the chance of failure rather than to belong to the great band which neither enjoys nor suffers much because it knows neither victory nor success.

Bishop Sumner characterized the present day as a period of receptivity in which there is a tendency for the individual not to exert himself in self-expression, because he can get with little effort that which is much better, perhaps, than he himself could produce.

"We are constantly receiving," he said. "When we go to church we are prayed for and preached to—and we do nothing but sit tight. We forget the other half of the obligation, which is to make use of a productive ability in self-expression."

Professor Hopkins Quoted
The speaker criticized the attitude of what he called "pseudo-philosophers" in assuming that it does not matter what a man thinks of religious matters. "You can not live on the border line and find it either satisfying or helpful," he said.

"Nothing is more important than a conviction," he declared. He quoted Professor Hopkins of Dartmouth as saying that one of the greatest problems facing students today is that the student body is not thinking.

Bishop Sumner did not consider the controversy between religion and science, which is occupying so much attention, to be essentially important. "Certain truths do not contradict religion," he declared and added, "Do not be disturbed by arguments belonging in the realm of speculative thought. Concentrate your attention on things that are worth while in life."

Bishop Sumner upheld the youths of today, attributing much criticism of them to a difference in ideas of ethics and morals. "Each generation establishes its own morals and customs," he said, "and we must change our ideas of what conventionality is. I do not think you stand for lower things because you are less conventional as measured by the old standards."

Message From President Given
However, the speaker believed that conventionality is necessary as a safeguard when youth approaches the negative side of the border line of ethics and morals.

Bishop Sumner paid a high tribute to President Campbell, and delivered a message to the students from the head of the University.

"When I spent an hour with him one afternoon this week," Bishop Sumner continued, "he said to me, 'I wish you would say something to the young people for me. I wish that the young people could realize that all that is art, and all that is beautiful is being expressed in the department of art in this institution; and that what we are trying to carry out in other departments of the University might appeal not only from the practical side but might appeal to them as of value from a moral side.'"

Buying Better at Home

Humming along the road back home, there's undeniable satisfaction in knowing that the money paid for the things you bought in town was well invested.

The ability of money to buy economically and profitably in this Store has been well established. At no other place—in or out of town, over the counter or by mail—can money be made to go further for the things you need daily.

It has been conclusively proven that the extensive cooperative purchasing power of the Nation-wide institution of which this Store is a unit, is saving the people of this community a great many dollars annually.

We recommend your buying at home not because you should take pride in supporting home industry but rather because you can buy better at home.

The great, broad service this Store tenders you enables you to buy better at home. Place us to the test in any way you desire.
