Subsidizing of Productive
Study Is Problem

The University of Oregon graduate school is one of the departments of the University that enjoys little publicity, but which has fast become an important part of the institution since it was established in 1888.

The first master's degree was given in 1891, and since then it has grown until for the 1924-25 school year, under Dean George Rebec, the enrollment for the fall and winter terms is 311, and a total enrollment of 320 for the full year is expected.

The total number of students in one graduate school for the years 1916-17 was 25. In 1917-18 there were 12, and by the 1919-20 school year there was a definite enrollment of 47.

As the enrollment of the University increased there was a corresponding gain in the numbers of students in the graduate school. Each year more and more men and women availed themselves of the opportunities for advancement offered in this department.

Some Comparative Figures

For the current academic year of 1924-25 the attendance of the school shows a growth faster than that of the University as a whole. The figures below are of this year in comparison with 1923-24. This year's statistics, however, extend only through the second term and are therefore incomplete.

Year 1923-24 (Entire Year)
Eugene Campus	81
Campus Summer Session ('23)	91
Portland Center	52
Portland Summer Session ('23)	20
Medical School	14

Year 1924-25 (Fall and Winter Terms)

Eugene Campus	86
Campus Summer Session ('24)	116
Portland Center (two terms)	63
Portland Summer Session ('24)	38
Medical School (two terms)	83
Total (two terms)	311

Total to Reach 92
In the spring term of 1923-24, six persons were enrolled on the campus in the graduate school. If the same number are added in the spring term this year, the total enrollment for the year will be 92, as against 81 for last year.

The graduate school is confronted with problems which greatly affect its future status. One of the most important of these is the question of subsidizing this branch of academic study, so as to attract more desirable students to it, to make it possible for them to conduct their researches, and to reward them as far as possible for their labors. Another of the problems is that of the organization of a competent graduate faculty.

Development Is Rapid

The school is still in its early formative stages and in a process of rapid development. The ordinary routines of administration have to be supplemented by arduous labors of constitution building, of laying down basic policies and planning larger programs. More and more the graduate faculty are becoming a definite and coherent group and are assuming an active legislative function. The planning, supervision, and directing of graduate students is becoming active and stringent, the final examinations for the higher degrees are being more elaborately and adequately conducted, and the school is becoming securely standard.

SUMMER WORK AT CAMP LEWIS TO DRAW MANY MEN OF R. O. T. C.

Recreation Features Include Games, Boating, Trip to Mount Rainier; Intensive Drill Planned

All is in readiness for the departure of the 28 men of the University R. O. T. C. unit who will attend the summer camp to be held at Camp Lewis, Washington, from June 13 to July 23. Special orders have been made out, authorizing the students to go by rail to the camp, and copies of the orders have been placed in the hands of those who will go.

Each student attending the camp is required to pay his own fare, from the institution from which he comes, to Camp Lewis, by the shortest route. Upon arrival at camp each one must turn in a copy of his travel authorization at the place where he reports for registration. After registration has been completed a pay roll is instituted and the money spent for fares is refunded, at the rate of five cents per mile.

The men who will attend the summer camp from the University of Oregon are as follows:

Arthur C. Gray, Levi Ankeny, Lewis Carlson, Francis Cleaver, Roland Eby, Ned French George Hill, Webster Jones, Rodney Keating, Hershel Kidwell, Paul Krause, Henry Maier, Walter Malcolm, Guy Mauney, Herbert Powell, Albert Powers, Warren Small, Kenneth Stephenson, Carl Vreeland, Kenneth Wadleigh, Leland Walker Conrad Weivoda, George Wilhelm, Steele Winterer, Don Woods, Thomas McCambridge, Theodore Slater, and Boyd Yaden.

In addition to these cadets, four of the regular army officers connected with the local R. O. T. C. department will be stationed at the camp. Lieutenant Colonel W. S. Sinclair, commander of the University R. O. T. C. unit, will report at Camp Lewis on June 2, to serve in the capacity of executive officer at the summer camp. Lieutenant E. G. Arnold, who will be supply officer at the camp, has been ordered to report there on June 1, as will First Sergeant F. I. Agule, who will be Lieutenant Arnold's assistant during the summer. Captain F. L. Cullin, executive officer of the local department, will remain in Eugene for the present, but may be detailed to the camp after June 15, if his services are needed.

Unprecedented interest is being shown in the camp this year, and from all indications the 1925 session will be the most successful ever held at Camp Lewis. Every state institution in the Northwest is sending a delegation of students, and increases over the enrollment of last year are considerable. Washington State College alone is sending 80 men.

Throughout the current term those men who signified their intention of attending the camp have been doing extensive practice work in rifle marksmanship, under the tutelage of Sergeant F. I. Agule, of the local department.

SPAIN'S WOMEN STILL IN MID-VICTORIAN ERA

Miss Espinosa Tells of Odd
Social Customs of Land

Miss Carmen Espinosa, instructor of Spanish in the University, although born in the United States, is of direct Spanish descent, as both of her parents came from Spain. Two years ago, while touring Europe, Miss Espinosa spent eight weeks in Spain, visiting relatives in the north and south.

"The Spanish woman of today corresponds with our mid-Victorian woman," said Miss Espinosa. "She never appears on the street or at any public gathering without a chaperon. However, she is allowed to have callers in her home, but the young man of Spain does not call on a girl, unless he has intentions of matrimony. "The only educational centers for women are the convents. Lately, there has been a tendency towards university education for women and woman suffrage, but neither movement is developed."

The higher classes of Spain do not attend the bull fights. The educated people take little interest in the bull fight and women very seldom go. A professor at the University of Barcelona told Miss Espinosa that his wife had never seen a bull fight, although she had lived in Spain all her life.

"Contrary to general opinion," said Miss Espinosa, "the women of Spain do not wear costumes, with shawl and combs, except at festivals or at the bull fight. Only the peasants wear costumes. The Spanish woman orders all of her clothes from Paris and all over the country the women are noticeable for their beautiful dresses. Black is worn more than any other color. Much attention is paid to the clothing of the children," said Miss Espinosa, "they also wear Parisian garments."

There is a decided difference between the customs of northern and southern Spain, according to Miss Espinosa. She said that southern Spain, called Andalusia, is the most beautiful part of the whole country. In Seville, the principal southern city, one very seldom sees a woman on the street. When they do appear, usually on the way to or from church, they wear black lace shawls, without combs, to cover the head. It is still customary in this part of Spain for the men to greet the women and to compliment them on their appearance as they pass by.

Miss Espinosa said that she was astounded at the number of blue-eyed, fair-haired people she saw in all parts of Spain. These people are descendants of the Goths and Visigoths, who were the early inhabitants of Spain. The dark Spaniards are descendants of the Moors, who conquered Spain centuries later.

GEOLOGY CAMP DATE IS CHANGED FROM JUNE 24

The opening date of the geology camp has been advanced from June 24 to an earlier date, probably about June 18, due to changes in the program of the department.

About a dozen University students are expected to attend the camp to be held near Ashland under the direction of Prof. E. L. Packard. Inquiries from students of other institutions indicate that a number of them will increase the enrollment of the camp. Among those definitely planning to attend are Howard Powers, Donald Johnson, Ralph Lupter, Gilbert McAuliffe, John Hulvey, John Bean, Robert Lane, and Herman Meierjürgen.

A Friendly Atmosphere

a glance inside and you sense it. Once you enjoy the Peter Pan's wonderful food and you understand it. A friendly atmosphere of cheerfulness and gaiety awaits you whenever you drop around. It is this feeling that has made the Peter Pan the most popular grill and confectionery in Eugene. We are proud of our standing and watchful that our customers have every reason for keeping their high opinion of our service and our fountain.

For years the Peter Pan has been the meeting place of students, a place to drop in after the show or on Sunday afternoon and be assured of delicious lunches and delightful ices and drinks. This year we have served more college people than ever before and we must say we have enjoyed it very much and thank you all for your patronage.

SO LONG, GANG

We hope you have a fine vacation and we want to see you back next Fall. Remember, the Peter Pan will have the same old glad hand for you when the new term starts, so good luck till we see you again.
