

FORMER OREGON END INSTRUCTS WING MEN

Mart Howard Helps With Early Season Work

The ends of the Oregon varsity have been, for the past week, under the tutelage of Mart Howard, famous Oregon end on the team that played Harvard in 1919. He came down to help with the physical education examinations from the University of Oregon medical school where he is a senior and was engaged to coach the ends in the preliminary work.

Mart Howard distinguished himself in the Harvard game by outwitting the cleverest ends in the east. It was the best game he ever played.

In 1921 the team went to the Hawaiian islands where they cleaned up on everything they met by lopsided scores. Mart Howard, was captain of the team.

Since graduation he has been attending the medical school. He will return to Portland at the end of next week. He has relieved the overworked coaches of much trouble by grounding the ends in wing fundamentals.

California Will Have Veteran Lineup. For Fifth Consecutive Year

after gain using the same play. Finally, with the score 3 to 3, and five minutes left to play, the club had first down on California's twenty yard line. The first play, a buck, netted three yards. On the next play, Campbell, who had played a sensational game at quarter for the club, broke through the line for four yards. He was tackled, and the ball bounced out of his hands right into the arms of Imley, Cal's great half. Imley made a dash up the field for thirty yards before he was tackled.

A few plays, then the substitution of Dixon who threw a long pass to Imley who scored. Call it luck, fight, or California spirit, but it wins games.

Stanford, potentially, has the most powerful team on the coast. The line from tackle to tackle will average close to two hundred pounds and the first string backs one hundred and eighty-five. Nevers and Bogue are great plungers who should paralyze the average line (continued on page four) will be given a chance to get into the scrimmage. The varsity players are to be divided into first, second, third and fourth teams and they will scrimmage against the first, second, third and fourth teams of the first year men.

A new rule made by the physical education department will compel every man signed up for freshman football to keep coming out. In order to get to a terms physical education credit the first year men must stay out for the entire season. According to "Spike" he wants it impressed upon the minds of all men coming out that they are out there to learn

SIDELINES

A WORD OF PRAISE

It was the first scrimmage of the year. Two elevens were lined up for ten minutes to run thru four fundamental plays. The excitement was intense. The improvised varsity was poor and the scrubs were worse. Players lost their heads and charged thru without purpose. Men failed to block and to handle themselves like football players. In a game it would have been called a blow up, but it was only the first scrimmage of the year. After a half dozen plays, however, the ground had cleared of players. The passes were more true and the team showed a little "form".

It was a pat on the back that did it. The word of praise, the quiet admonition to settle down, and the man who did it was Dick Smith. As a handler of men Dick is a master. He believes in the word of praise. He's an encourager. It is not meant that he doesn't drive, but that pat on the back and a word of praise now and then is going to help Oregon's grid team a lot this year.

THE SQUARE DEAL

One is impressed with every practice of the football squad by the spirit of fairness that all the coaches have in common. Every evening you can see Dick, Baz and Bill laboring to teach a scrub some of the groundwork of football. There is always a hope in their minds that he will become a good player, and they work in spite of poor results.

Time is taken in every scrimmage to give every man a chance. Powerful men and veterans in football stand around while scrub elevens go through their paces with many halts and corrections. It's the square deal there. Every man is given a chance to prove himself. The veterans will get the polish to their training intensively later on. Now the sorting process is under way.

Just another word about Dick. Perhaps you've seen him working out on the field, but the Dick Smith you see out there now or have seen out there is not the Dick Smith of this week and a week from now. Watch him when he takes hold of that varsity after this preliminary fundamental training is over. He's going to whip that team into shape in a masterful manner.

WATCH PRACTICES

Don't think that you are not wanted out there when the team is practicing. Every student in the university should watch at least one practice a week. The student in the body must be sold on this team for this is Oregon's year. It's going to help those practices a hundred per cent if you and the rest turn out for practices. The players will know that an interest is taken in them and the coaches will get twice as much effort out of the men. The grandstand is large enough to hold the entire student body.

football and that every one is going to get a fair chance. One of the big reasons for freshman football is to develop men for the varsity. Although green material is confronted by the freshman coach, in more times than one this green player is trained into varsity material.

Schedule for the freshmen has not been quite completed. The game with the O. A. C. Rooks will be played at Corvallis on Friday, November 13. According to Jack Benefiel, graduate manager, a game will be scheduled with the University of Washington freshmen to be played at Eugene and games with several of the strong prep school elevens of the state.

Freshman football started off with a bang Monday afternoon and will continue with this pep throughout the season. Up to last Friday noon, 74 men had signed up for freshman football and at this time there are nearly 106 men turning out for moleskin practice daily. The men signed up to Friday are Clyde Carlson, Harold Manerud, George West, Edgar Slanson, George Burnell, Neil Eddy, Raymond Martin, Sandvall Torn, La Selle Coles, R. L. Herndon, Donald Flynn, E.
