FOOTBALL TRAINING METHODS EXPLAINED

Football training should last the year round, according to prominent coaches. With this in mind one of Oregon's veteran football backles the last summer using his muscle and beef to good advantage.

Bert Kernshies from Montana and prior to his drive out to Oregon this past summer he kept in perfect trim by taking the buck out of bucking horses and by putting the horns of wild steers on the ground.

According to Bert this is one of the best muscle builders a prospective athlete could indulge in for his summer's pleasure. Work of this type has a tendency to harden a man besides putting him in shape to undergo the hard knocks received in a hectic gridiron contest he says.

New Grandstand to Seat 4,300; Will Be Completed in November building committee, finances at this time prohibit the building of any more units.

Other work being done on Hayward field will consist in the closing in the back of all bleachers. When the football season starts Hayward field for the first time will be a closed athletic stadium.

A new and large press box is to be built on top of the old grandstand and the old grandstand is to be strengthened to take care of the additional weight.

A committee known as the A. S. U. O. building committee has had charge of the building of the new grandstand. Funds for this were furnished from the new $5,000 additional fee voted on last spring. The members of the building committee are Ted Larson, chairman, Dean W. G. Hale, Dean John F. Bovard, Edgar G. Martin and Jack Benefiel, secretary.

Plans for the new structure were prepared by Laurence and Halford, architects of Portland.

California Will Have Veteran Lineup For Fifth Consecutive Year

 they meet. Hyland, the star of the American Olympic Rugby team is holding down the other half. He is a flash with high-knee action and is unusually hard to stop in the open field.

What Stanford needs is a real field general who will keep his team working together and get away from the hit or miss generalship they have used in the past. A possible exception is the fourth quarter of the Stanford-California game last year. But Warner rehearsed every play that was used to Solomon, sitting next to him on the bench, for three-quarters of the game. However, to illustrate my point, in the Notre Dame game Stanford made forty yards on two end plays. Then with first down on Notre Dame's fifteen yard men the quarterback called the same play again, and lost five yards and his chance to score.

Next to these two teams the writer, who is not well acquainted with the Northern teams, favors St. Mary's. For next to California they had the best offense, as far as plays and speed are concerned, last year. They have well timed scoring they know what to do with it. To my mind the backs are even better at clipping than the California backs. When St. Mary's scored on California last year on an end run (from a concealed ball play) Red Strader, the Saint's full back, clipped Thatcher, California's right end, so neatly that it looked like he used a scythe.

U. S. C. has great material but their offense has looked like something the well known cat dragged in. This year under Howard Jones, they may snap out of it but it looks dubious this early in the season.

Oregon meets the Bears the week after the Bears play Saint Mary's, and therein lies Oregon's opportunity. If Oregon gets away to a good start in that game it will be some battle. California does not like a soft field as their plays are all timed for a fast field, so they should not be at their best on Multnomah field.

It is a mathematical certainty that the Bears will be beaten sometime. I do not suppose Oregon would object to Bear meat.

To The Students of Oregon—

Welcome!

We wish that you may have a successful and a very happy college year
