

CONCERT SERIES WILL BE VARIED

Metropolitan Grand Opera
Soprano to Appear Here;
Anna Case Here Before

Paul Kochanski, Violinist, Ignatz Friedman, Pianist,
to Appear on Program

This year's concert series promises to be unusual in its brilliance and variety, according to the committee in charge of its selection. There will be four concerts given on the artists series as well as the glee club and orchestra concerts, the whole of which presents a notable array for the campus music lovers.

The first concert comes December 1, when the A. S. U. presents Anna Case, Metropolitan Grand Opera Company prima donna, a soprano with a "voice of gold, a personality of compelling magnetism and a charm of portraiture that is beyond compare," according to a New York critic. Her appearance here two years ago endeared her to her Eugene audience. Her personal charm and beauty captivated her hearers before she began to sing, and from her first number her audience was completely won.

The second number on the series is Paul Kochanski, violinist, who appears January 27. Kochanski introduced Szmanowski's Violin Concerto with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Leopold Stokowski. The New York Times said of his playing, "Kochanski, whose performance made mock of technical difficulties, met the composer more than half way and was repeatedly recalled." In 1921, he was engaged by Walter Damrosch as assistant artist, and his success was electrical, causing him to be engaged for five additional performances in five weeks. He promises to be one of the outstanding successes of the series.

On March 12, Ignatz Friedman, Polish virtuoso, will be presented. Few pianists who have been heard in this country have created the sensation that Friedman has. It is acknowledged that he is the last of that illustrious quartette of Polish pianists who have variously startled and delighted the public, Paderewski, de Pachmann, Hofmann and finally, Friedman.

April 26 is set for the appearance of the Little Symphony under the direction of George Barrere, who founded the organization. The personnel consists of fourteen musicians composing an organization of the choir of wind instruments, flute, oboe, clarinet, horn, trumpet and bassoon, with an adequate balance of the stringed instruments. The New York World says of the concert: "Mr. Barrere's little orchestra, by its tone, its balance and its refinement of expression was irresistible." Barrere himself is a master of the flute, and this alone is a rare attraction, combined with the Little Symphony, the concert promises to be unique and is very enjoyable.

The glee clubs and orchestra concerts, which are scheduled for the spring term, have as yet no definite dates. These will be announced later.

APPOINTMENTS MADE TO OLD OREGON STAFF

Fall Edition to be Off Press
First Week of October

With a few changes in the staff of "Old Oregon," alumni magazine, edited by Miss Jeanette Calkins, material is being rapidly assembled for the fall issue which will be off the press the first week in October.

Betty Cady, editor of the 1926 Oregonian, is taking the place of Margaret Morrison as reporter and editor of the campus news section. Dick Syring, sports editor of the Oregonian and sports writer for the Emerald, will take charge of the sports section of the alumni publication, succeeding Webster Jones, who has been in charge for two years.

Many of the articles in the issue will be memorials to Dr. P. L. Campbell, late president of the University, and will be written by people prominent in the state as University workers. The All-Oregon 1925 Exposition, to be held in Portland, October 5 to 10, will be discussed in the magazine. Announcements will appear, stating the results in the election of members of the Alumni Council, which was held by ballot during the summer.

Among the contributors in the fall number are Harold Young, president of the Alumni Association and Grace Edgington Jordan, former editor of the magazine. The Homecoming issue will appear about November 1.

FRESHMEN DIRECTED IN USE OF LIBRARY

Instruction Given to 1,000;
Staff Personnel Changes

More than one thousand freshmen entering the University of Oregon this fall were conducted through the library during registration week, according to an announcement made today by M. H. Douglass, librarian. Groups of fifty met at the library every half hour and were given lectures on library work by Mr. Douglass. They were then divided into divisions and taken on an inspection tour, learning the uses of files, reference work, filling out call slips, drawing books and other necessary knowledge in connection with library use.

Thirty beautiful books have been added to the Pauline Potter Homer collection during the past summer with one half of these books being gifts to the library. In addition a number of sets, including the Cornhill magazine, volumes one to forty-six, and the Annual Register, volumes one to 146, have been placed in the stacks. Large groups of fiction and books for class use are being added daily.

Miss Emma Stephenson, head of the order department of the library and Miss Evelyn Foster, head of the periodicals, both of whom have been connected with the library department of the University of Oregon for the past seven years, are leaving in November to accept positions in other states.

Miss Stephenson will go to Spokane to take charge of the order work in the Spokane Public Library and Miss Foster will go to Cleveland, Ohio, where she will accept a position on the faculty of the Western Reserve University Library School.

covering of the old bleachers. This will make it possible for the visitors to be accommodated in an excellent manner for a much larger crowd to attend the grid battle.

Game is Big Attraction

With the prospects for a championship contending football eleven at Oregon this year much in evidence, and with an equally aggregation of grid talent for the Aggie team, this year's game will be an unusually exciting event. The fact that these two teams will fight for the supremacy of the state on November 14, alone is an attraction that will bring many former students throughout Oregon, here to witness the battle.

The general plans of entertainment are much in line with that of last year. On Friday, the freshman bonfire will start the week-end with the parade and pep rally following. On Saturday, the alumni will renew acquaintances at the luncheon and then attend the game. In the evening, there will be the annual homecoming dance. It is expected that the dance will have to be divided in much the same manner as last year to accommodate the large crowd. The alumni and upperclassmen will probably hold forth in the women's building, while the underclassmen will no doubt meet down at the armory.

The full plans for the week-end will be announced in the near future, according to Leake, so that all the committees can start immediately in preparing the entertainment.

HALE GOES BEFORE COURT ON BOND CASE

Dean William G. Hale of the law school returned to Eugene last night from Salem, where he has been aiding the university counsel in re-arguing the Eugene Bond issue case involving the validity of the city's bonds voted last spring to provide a $50,000 auditorium for the university. The case is being considered before the supreme court.

Early last spring, Eugene voted the bond issue of $500,000 for the auditorium, and the trial court decided the bond issue was illegal. The case has now come before the supreme court bench, where the university counsel is attempting to reverse the decision of the smaller court.

Besides Dean Hale, the University counsel consists of attorneys, P. B. Foster of the firm of Potter & Foster & Foster, and Mr. O. C. Bean of the firm of Williams and Bean, both of this city.

STUDENT LOAN FUND PROVES SUCCESS HERE

Students borrowing money to enable them to obtain an education are an appreciative and conscientious group, and almost never fail to return the finances they borrow, Dean Walker, dean of men, who has charge of the student loan fund, said yesterday.

The student loan is offered to any undergraduate and a very large number of people receive their university training by this means. Freshmen are allowed $50, sophomores $100, juniors, $200; and seniors, $300. Last year a gift of $10,000 enabled the university to meet the demand for aid, but at the present time there is little money on hand to be used for this purpose.

The scholarship of those who take advantage of the loan is above that of the average student.

Dean Walker urges all students expecting to receive aid before time to pay their fees, to arrange for it immediately as it will be several weeks before the applications can be considered.

OPEN HOUSE WILL BE HELD SATURDAY NIGHT

Coming as the first social event of the school year, open house will be held Saturday night by all sororities and living women's organizations on the campus for "their boy friends."

Open house at Oregon is a tradition of long standing, being designed primarily to get the new students on the campus acquainted with each other. This is accomplished by the declaration of an open evening for visitors at which time the various fraternities and mens clubs make social calls in force. According to precedent the visits generally last about fifteen minutes during which time old friendships are renewed, and one made. Dancing is always in order and eats never out.

Plans for the affair this year are in the hands of Hilda Gould and Bill James, who are busy making out schedules for the procedure of the mens' organization. From all indications this year's Open House will be the biggest in Oregon's history.
