Show A Winning Team

From the forensic committee of the Executive Council come a recommendation that student body funds ranging between $500 and $800 be appropriated for an Eastern tour by a University of Oregon's women's debate team. The tentative plan includes a tour of twelve to fifteen prominent mid-eastern and southern universities, the trip to be made in the latter part of the winter term.

Two benefits will accrue from the trip, it is pointed out. Women's debating at the University will be vastly stimulated; and the University will receive a great fund of publicity and advertising, largely because of the unique nature of the venture.

The prospect of an Eastern trip would no doubt stimulate women's forensic activities, and would probably have an appreciable effect of the same nature in a great many other universities. Women, for the most part, are crowded out of intercollegiate activities, and a venture such as the proposed tour will undoubtedly find enthusiastic support among a good portion of the women. Athletics last year, mostly men's, cost the student body approximately $13,000 in cash. From that angle, $800 for a women's intellectual activity does not loom extremely formidable.

In considering publicity gained the University, one is tempted to question the value of the proposition. No doubt press notices a plenty will flood the country. And while all advertising, if of the right nature, is beneficial, we are told, nevertheless one wonders if mere headline publicity does not make a good part of the gain.

The effect of publicity—granted that it is desirable,—will be gauged largely by the impression the women debaters make on the tour. If they come home with a fair collection of victories the publicity will probably be favorable, and worthwhile; and debating, incidentally, will have been stimulated. If universal ill-fortune is to be their lot, the trip had best not be undertaken. If the debate coach can demonstrate now, or after the preliminary debates with coast colleges, that Oregon can be assured of vigorous representation by a formidable team—let them go. If not, wait until a later time.

Two O'clocks—Recommended

The fall term of the University year might properly be said to be a series of vacations with a little schooling interspersed for variety.

First of all comes rush week, which puts about a third of the University student out of commission for the first week of school. Open house, as an anti-climax serves to mutilate a few.

Now comes the trip to Portland. Half of Friday gone, all of Saturday, all of Sunday, and Monday as well as gone, not to mention the after effects.

Homecoming will get the major portion of a week for a good many students, a full week-end for all, and the freshmen men, with their bonfire, won't even know they are attending a University.

After that comes Thanksgiving, with a good portion of us heing ourselves to Seattle. Then back to school full of turkey and inertia.

Finally, after exams, we go home, completely exhausted, tear around all vacation, and return again, utterly worn out for the new term.

Incidentally, if you are interested in getting an education—go to your two o'clocks tomorrow. The Rally committee has agreed with the faculty that all students will at least go to school until 3:05 p. m.

Communications

Recently we had the privilege of reading an article in the editorial column entitled "Hearty Response from the Younger Folk." In this, we find the freshmen women belabored for not responding to the old "Hello" tradition. It is true that we have, in the freshman class this year, a large number of co-eds whose opinion of their own importance forbids them to speak to any who might possibly be considered by them on a slightly lower plane than their elevated one.

BUT, do you not think, Mr. Editor, that there is a far greater "Hello" crime than that of these snobbish few in the freshman class? Let me cite to you a little incident: 'Freshie,' trying hard to help the old OREGON SPIRIT along, although he is in a hurry, although his vocal chords may seem to refuse to work, nevertheless manages to utter a cheery "Hello" to a pair of upperclass women as he passes them. He receives no response. Time and time again this has happened on the Oregon campus this year. The girls just don't care to exert themselves.

Why, Mr. Editor, use your mighty energies to give naughty "babes" a spanking when your own upperclassmen willfully and maliciously violate the rules and traditions of our alma mater? FROSH.

Theatres

McDONALD—First day: Gloria Swanson in "The Coast of Folly;" a new Witner "Face-maker" comedy, "The Great Decide," with Alberta Vaughn; Oregon own "Webfoot Weekly;" Frank D. C. Alexander, master of melodious music.

SEVEN SEERS ALL HAIL TOOLE

Upset of upsets! Shades of the old Oregon comeback! Overturning the dope—spilling the succotash, so to speak, Clarence "Pug" Toole, tied for last place day before yesterday in the Seven Seers Beauty Contest, put in a hard day of campaigning yesterday with the result that 168 votes were polled for him, sweeping him far and beyond his nearest competitor, Bill Dills, darling of a thousand co-eds. Bill ran easily, and increased his stride toward the end of a day of frenzied balloting, but failed in the last quarter when Pug raced under the wire, a belated but complete victor.

The second big surprise of the day was the entry of Joe Bates, pink-complexioned, sandy haired, dainty dark horse, who for a time seemed about to nose ahead of the field. His effort, however, fell short, netting him 136 votes.

Bill Dills, favorite during the early balloting, and over-confident of victory, slowed noticeably in the later stages of the race. However, he put up a game fight and was only beaten by the unprecedented rally of Toole. "The best man won," he said when interviewed this morning, "but I lay my defeat to the fact that Pug bought a new necktie day before yesterday. I'm not kidding, understand, but I wish the Seers would compare the handwriting on those 168 ballots with Toole's."

The final standings in the contest were as follows:
Pug Toole ..... 168      Milt Rice ..... 31
Bill Dills ..... 144      Wilbur Wester ..... 29
Joe Bates ..... 136      Abbie Green ..... 27
Abbot Lawrence ..... 107      Bob McCabe ..... 26
Jim Robertson ..... 63      Jim Forestel ..... 26
Dick Godfrey ..... 38      Gene Shields ..... 24
Clybert McClellan ..... 36      Merts Fols ..... 23
Freddie Martin ..... 32      Bud Parson ..... 23

Mr. Toole, resting at his country home and awaiting the final returns of the election, today declined to make any detailed statement other than to say: "It was a good race, and I am sure the best man won. After I return from Portland I may have something to interest for Seers fans. I wish to thank all those who supported me." Soon the Seers will have autographed photographs of the doubly-distinguished Adonis for distribution to his admirers.

"Today is Thursday, tomorrow Friday. The next day, Saturday. . . ."—Editorial in yesterday's Emerald. Marvellous, Eddie, and now tell the class what is two weeks from day after tomorrow?

NEW ASSOCIATE MEMBERS

Bob Gardner      Bill Hayward
Ma Ferguson      Ted Becker
Vic Wetzel      Camille Remington

The following three candidates for associate membership into The Seers were found unsuitable by the galloping black walnut Black Ball at the election last night, for the following reasons:

Jack Dempsey, because he threw several conscientious sparring partners out of work when he signed a life contract with a movie queen.

Keats and Shelley, because we couldn't locate them personally and a smart young freshman told us they came from some downstate place we never heard of. Anyhow, they probably wear Oxford bags.

The Southern Pacific, because we have a friend at Springfield, and because one of their brakemen, totally lacking in a sense of perception and the appropriate, threw us off the 1 o'clock freight seven miles outside of Junction City.
