The University Welcomes the Pacific Intercollegiate Press Association

The Emerald considers it a privilege to entertain and act as host to the Pacific Intercollegiate Press Association which is holding its annual press conference at the University this week end. Editors and managers from practically every daily college newspaper on the Pacific Coast are gathered together for the purpose of acquainting one another with the trials and tribulations of their respective publications.

Oregon students are urged to be extremely generous in their treatment of these men—the guests of the Emerald. They may be easily recognized. Many of them bear, on shoulders that are pitifully stooped, nerve wracked heads that are streaked with white and silver locks. Their faces are literally grooved. Their eyes are tired. Their cheeks are sunken and pallid. What might be taken for the effects of extravagant dissipation is simply the aftermath of keeping their respective universities off the rocks. More than a few who, without a doubt, would have been presidents, generals, senators and governors, may be seen in this group of twenty-five men (and one woman), all now prematurely broken from the ravages of their profession.

The Emerald is sorry that such a wet reception is being tendered these men; but unfortunately, even newspapers, with all their profound powers, are not able to stay the onslaught of Oregon mists. It is a firm tradition at Oregon that Homecoming brings not only the grads, but also the rains; and students and alumni from year to year look forward to the time when they may swish around the campus in the dampness. Therefore, visiting university men, pray accept our rain along with our Homecoming festivities. . . . Also, if some fair co-ed says "Hello," don't be frightened—it's merely an Oregon way of explaining that you are right welcome as guests of the University.

Ten Commandments For Homecoming

- The main business of the week end is to insure a rousing good time for returning alumni and guests. Following are a few reminders as outlined by the various speakers in yesterday's assembly:
1. Say "Hello"—always.
 2. Get in the rally Friday night. Men should be in their pajamas at the "O" on Skinner's Butte at 7:00 p. m. The women are expected to be down town to watch the serpentine.
 3. Freshmen—build the bonfire and build it big.
 4. Undergraduates are expected to attend the campus luncheon as soon after 11 o'clock as possible.
 5. Be at the game—everyone—at one o'clock.
 6. After the game the winning students shall serpentine on the field. The losers shall remain—give a cheer for the winners—to be followed by a cheer by the winners.
 7. All fighting by students shall be done at the rally Saturday night.
 8. Don't set off the bonfire until everyone is on hand and the signal is given by those in charge.
 9. Remember that you are Oregon students.
 10. Say "Hello."

Those in charge of Homecoming are to be congratulated upon their attempts to promote amicable relations between the two institutions during and after the game Saturday. Every precaution taken to insure the continuation of the peaceful state of affairs which has existed the last several years is a step in the right direction. It is to be hoped that no unsportsman-like incidents will mar the week end.

Because of the Saturday Homecoming activities which take place too late to receive attention in the regular editions of the Emerald, a special edition will be issued Sunday morning giving a complete account of all the news of the preceding day. This edition will be distributed to living organizations, at the Co-op, and will be sent to all subscribers on the mailing list. Watch for it.

Said James Leake, chairman of Homecoming in assembly: "There never has been a class that has fallen down in building the bonfire and if this class does not produce the right sort of a bonfire it will be the first in the history of the University." How about it Frosh?

SMOKER AFTER RALLY BE HELD FOR ALUMNI

An additional event of the Homecoming this year is the Senior Alumni get-together to be held at the men's gym this evening after the rally. The purpose of this is to afford the alumni a place where they may get together to talk over old times and where they may meet the senior men.

A very interesting program is assured, including boxing and wrestling matches, features, music and good food. All the alumni are to be on hand as well as the senior men who are acting as hosts.

OREGON MAN IN YALE GAME

In the summary of the Yale-Army football game played two weeks ago occurs the notation, among the substitutions, Zimmerman for Buell. The Zimmerman mentioned is Don Zimmerman, Oregon '24, appointed last summer as cadet from Oregon. While at Oregon Don specialized in baseball and basketball, making a letter in each. In his senior year he turned out for football and nearly made the team. Earlier reports from West Point gave the news that the former Oregon student head of the cadet corps was showing up well on the gridiron. In the Yale game he was used at left halfback.

Now is your chance, limerickers, to win brand new passes to the McDonald theatre where next week a galosh-wilting, slicker-roasting James Oliver Curwood picture is playing. Although very humorous lines have been turned in to the Seers via the ballot box in the main Libe, we feel that at least one of the winners is yet to declare himself. The last efforts will be argued over at four-fifteen today, so get your rhymed lines in by four o'clock. Winners will be announced in Saturday's column.

PRIZE WINNER FOR TODAY

"Oh, you beautiful doll!" This is what Jack Herring will cry when he sees this pink-and-white, blue-eyed baby, with its dimpled cheeks and cup-bow mouth. We joyfully give this little beauty to him because of his persistent efforts in obtaining one and because when he does, he insists on robbing the cradle.

THESIS ON H2O
 Rain is wet and as the whole country is raging about how dry every thing is, we're darn lucky to live in Oregon.

When tourists come to Oregon the first thing we show them is Rain, and as it usually is much in evidence during conventions it is never mist.

Rain is the farmer's friend because it makes things green. Freshmen at the University are continually out in the Rain.

It is also the friend of the hair dressers, for it disturbs the waves, and nestles in the curls.

Rain forms the main topic of conversation in Oregon. Viz: Co-ed, sitting on the grass—"Some dew!" Gus Mosier, ditto—"Some dew!" Question: What comes from the clouds?
 Answer: Rain, dear.

Moral: Therefore we know that Xmas is coming.

Rain is an important factor in Oregon's Homecoming. It gives the co-eds a chance to wear their native garb, sweat-shirt, slicker and galoshes. It keeps the Phi Del house from going up in smoke during the Frosh bonfire. It prevents the football players from becoming over heated, and helps to revive them when they pass out. It has never failed to put a wet-blanket on the opponent's luck. It prevents inter-scholastic fracasces by cooling hot-heads. It makes the Grads and ex-students feel at home again by welcoming him back with an atmos-
