Welcome Home—Alumni of Old Oregon

Alumni of Oregon—the active members of the University welcome you once again. To see you and talk to you and enjoy your companionship once more is giving us the keenest pleasure. If your enjoyment in renewing the friendships of past days is as great as ours is proving to be in meeting you, we know your visit is more than justified; and we rejoice with you.

Oregon is much the same as you left it. Oregon is bigger—always bigger—and some tell us that it is better, this last being a direct result of Dean Straub's frosh classes. As long as Oregon is Oregon, we all know that the University will be better; for the Oregon spirit does not permit of stagnation.

Bigger—yes, very much bigger, and still bigger. To many who have seen the University pass through the various stages of its growth, the tendency to become ever larger and more bulky seems to carry its peril. The larger, the more limited each individual's circle, with a consequent trend to toss aside the democratic traditions that Oregon has long cherished.

Be that as it may, Oregon year by year adds to its enrollment; and the new task that now confronts the University is to inoculate this ever-expanding group with the Oregon attitude. Truly the task is not one to be tossed lightly aside with but a moment's consideration. The situation is here—has been here for some time—and will remain.

Apparently student government is succeeding remarkably well in keeping things as they should be. This fall with a disappointing football season, the students individually and in mass, retain their thoroughly Oregon attitude with never a hint of disloyalty. Oregon undergraduates returned to the University this fall with their heads up and their chest out, and still are carrying themselves in that manner.

We believe that today Oregon is much as she has always been. Of course, crowded sidewalks make the "Hello" impracticable at times. Some miss the significance of that word; but taken throughout the Oregonian of today is the Oregonian of yesterday.

The Oregon of today is anxious to give you returning men and women the chance of looking deep into our newer University, and is doubly anxious that you drink richly of our hospitality. To the extent that you enjoy your stay—learn to know us, and carry away with you a real desire to come again, we shall be satisfied with our part in Homecoming.

The big moment today will be at 1:30 when the kick-off takes place. Some wit has suggested that the championship of two counties is at stake. That may be true enough to one who doesn't know Oregon. However, wit or wits, the Oregon-Oregon Aggie game counts more than can be expressed. One must be present at the kick-off to appreciate the significance of that annual encounter.

"Oregon Will Win," declared the Emerald extra yesterday afternoon. Of course Oregon will win. It is taken for granted that Oregon waxes polite but very rough with our rivals.

The Frosh did well in getting the fire up at the last minute. They are now permitted, by an ancient Oregon custom, to begin thinking up stories to tell the next Frosh class. "Now when I was a Frosh—"

REQUIRED READING LIST OUTLINED BY TEACHERS

A list of books, principally from English literature, but including selections from the classics of other European nations, is being prepared by Dr. Rudolf Ernst and Prof. S. Stephenson, who are in charge of the general literature department, a section of the English department. Majors in the course will be required to read these classics. They will be examined in them at the end of the course, more in criticism than in knowledge of the subject matter. "The purpose is to develop a critical scale in dealing with books. We hope to get the students to acquire some sense of the values in literature; we think that they can best acquire both taste and judgment by doing intensive reading," said Professor Smith.

DIERDORF IN SOUTH DAKOTA
 A letter has been received from Johnny Dierdorff, '22. He is at present working on a campaign for funds for the University of South Dakota. The University is attempting to raise $500,000 for a student union and other purposes. After December 12, Mr. Dierdorff will return to his New York office with Tamblin and Brown, experts in campaigns for money raising.

GATHER AROUND

Today's gallant effort is dedicated to those brave lads and ladies who braved the rains and mud at Oregon when it was deeper than today. To them good old days when a feller could wear peg-top pants, pug-nosed shoes, and funny little hats, when the gals wore garters and gaiters, lifted their skirts to cross a mud puddle, and never smoked anything stronger than a corn cob pipe—we lift our hats and say whoopee-e-e! Welcome back.

The Seers fairly beamed with satisfaction and pride when they gloated over the results of this last Limerick contest. Such bright, witty, intelligent answers, such a fine showing of poetic genius by the students! Truly it was quite remarkable. As an example of the great ability to rhyme something with Margo we quote the following bright ones: Lardo, lumbago, darned if I know, aint it now tho, your pa's dough, hard show, Pajamarino, and Mardi Gras. Clever! However, there were many that showed real wit, and it was harder than ever for us to determine the winners. We hope they keep up the good work and enjoy the show:

First Prize

There was a fair co-ed named Margo,
 Who wanted to go see 'White Cargo,'
 When he gave her an 'ask,'
 She took him to task,
 'Twas a Freshman, that's why the embargo.

Vincent Hill

For he work at the local Wells-Fargo
 Sam Suwol

Third Prize

Because he couldn't make his Star go
 Ed Manning

We will be glad to dole out the (free) prizes to the above lucky ones if they will call for them at the editor's office the first of the week.

PRIZE WINNER FOR TODAY RADIO DEBATE CONSIDERED

Arrangements for a radio debate with a California university have not been completed with the Portland Oregonian, according to Alfred Powers, assistant director of the extension division. In case KGW, and the Oakland Tribune broadcasting station, KLX, are available, he believes the debates will probably be held again next spring.

BUNGALOW TO BE OPEN
 The Y. W. C. A. Bungalow, a cheery fire and a piano will be at the disposal of students and their alumni friends any time Saturday or Sunday.

This graceful yacht with its white sails full, gallantly braving the deep as it rides the waves on the Amazon we donate to Fred Hendrix and Ed Therieau, heads of the rally and parade. We believe that in the last week these two young men have shirked their duty, lain down on the job and in every respect shown themselves to be lazy, shiftless and idle. We give them this boat therefore, not because we feel they deserve it but because we suggest that they get on it.

When a rival provoked Julius Caesar
 He'd give him a bust on the bezer,
 But he fell hard for Cleo;
 He bought her a Reo,
 And went to the limit to please her.
