

RECORD CROWD VIEWS GIGANTIC TORCH PARADE

Pajama Clad Rooters Open Homecoming Festivities With Noisy Celebration

By Arthur Prialux

A flare of lights on Skinner's butte, a burst of brilliant-colored fireworks that spread over the city of Eugene like a thousand rainbows, the sudden outburst of flames, and the spectacular, awe-inspiring, torchlight procession of pajama-clad Oregon men had started down the long path from the blazing "O" on the summit of Skinner's butte. Twenty thousand people crowded the sidewalks and streets along which this gigantic, red-colored, serpent-like line of men headed by the Order of "O" men marched.

Sky Rockets Used

Twenty-thousand hearts beat a little faster as the long red line slipped down the hill, the heart beats increased as the red flares drew nearer, each time a colored sky rocket was sent heavenward or a piece was started by the pajamarino band the spirit in the hearts of that crowd increased. The serpent continued its crawl on through town out east and finally arrived at the campus, pulses quickened, a ripple of tense excitement ran around the huge assemblage like a prairie fire.

Then as if touched off by the head of the red serpent as the high torch procession swung on to Kincaid field a mighty roar was heard as if a hundred gun salute had been fired and torches held in readiness were applied to the corners of the shapeless pile of material forming the Homecoming bonfire.

The climax was fitting. Almost immediately a mass of flames interspersed with green flares shot skyward. As the fire gathered volume and spread out to the corners of the huge bonfire, so did the Oregon spirit, which had been fomenting and rumbling, come to the surface and spread like mad throughout the crowd of twenty thousand people.

Oregon Spirit At Height

Oregon spirit came back last night with the first small flare on Skinner's butte.

Pronounced by many grads, who have seen every one of our thirteen Homecomings, to be the most effective and the most spectacular parade they have ever seen, the pajamarino will take its place in Oregon traditions.

Packed to the ceiling, floor, walls and rafters crowded with frenzied Oregon men and women shouting and singing, was the spectacle presented at the Woman's building after the last embers of the huge fire had died out. Oregon spirit had not gone out however with the fire but seemed to take on new life as the program of rally and pep stunts, speeches and yells progressed.

Oregon men and women, Oregon grads and alumni experienced a new sensation last night when that old time pep and spirit was born again in their hearts. They are going out to Hayward field today with that spirit uppermost in their minds, they will back their team—Oregon's team to the limit.

Oregon spirit has returned—bigger, stronger and more enveloping than ever.

FORMER GRAD IS WRITER

William James Russis, graduate of 1921, now a professor of history at the University of Chicago, has had several of his articles published in recent numbers of the Greek Review. One being the translation of a French thesis which he wrote while he was on this campus.

NEW WICKER FURNITURE BOUGHT BY DISPENSARY

Even the dispensary is celebrating Homecoming. It is all dressed up in a new set of wicker furniture, tan with cushions of wide, colored, striped cretonne. Two long settees, besides several straight chairs and rockers, beckon one with a promise of comfort. There is a little writing desk in one corner of the room, too, for those who care to write, and plenty of magazines permit no one an excuse to sit and do nothing because there is nothing to do. A library table completes the set.

Gayly colored and patterned cretonne drapes at the windows, a new coat of gray paint on walls and ceiling, and floor covering of brown linoleum all play their parts in making the dispensary up-to-date.

PROFESSORS TO SPEAK AT PRESS CONFERENCE

The District Press association of Northern Oregon has invited professors Ralph D. Casey, W. F. G. Thacher, and Raymond Lawrence to be held at Sheridan, Thursday, and to discuss high school journalism. Mr. Thacher will speak on some phase of high school advertising; Mr. Lawrence will speak on the subject of news writing; while Mr. Casey has not decided his subject. Delegates from the high schools of Hillsboro, Sheridan, McMinnville, Forest Grove, and Newberg will be present.

HIGH SCHOOL CLASS ELECTS

New officers elected by the Junior class of the University High School are Thurston Shell, president; Fred Huntington, vice-president; Sylvia Kerle, secretary; and Doris Hardy, treasurer. These officials will serve for a period of six weeks.

gon teams through many battles. Shields is out.

The line is composed of heavy, experienced men. Harry Leavitt, a powerful fullback of last year, will take the guard berth vacated by a recent injury to Gene Shields, while Kert Kerns, a tackle, holds down the other guard.

Al Sinclair and Homer Dixon at tackle are both big powerful men. Dixon weighs over 200 and Sinclair tips the scales around 180.

Captain Bob Mautz and Sherm Smith handle the wings and the defense of the team will depend a lot on them, for the Aggies will probably unleash their strong passing attack. Both men have improved wonderfully this season.

Carl Johnson handles the pivot job. Light but a sure passer and a sturdy defensive player, he is a mainstay on the line.

Coach Paul Schissler will send his best backfield into the fray. Wes Schulerich, 199 pound halfback, the triple threat man with an educated toe, Web Edwards, slippery quarterback, who has proven to be a wonderful broken field runner, Paul Snider, 185 pound fullback, two year veteran, Red Denman, completed the backfield.

In the line lies the weight of the team. Big Jim Dixon, 210 pound tackle is on the left side of the line and Lewis Dickerson, 200 pounder, on the other side. Flody Balcom is the 185 pound center. The guards, Rickert and Olmstead are comparatively light. Johnny Logan and Dallas Ward on the wings are exceptionally light, but they make up for it in speed.

ANN DARLING:

Homecoming! Everyone is getting ready for it. The great event of the term! And you can never imagine who I have a date with for the upperclass dance. Well, it's the campus cherub, Walter Malcolm. And I had to get a new compact—Woodworth's Karess powder in a blue enamel case to go with my blue dress I am wearing. The Red Cross Drug Store where I got it has a marvelous display of Woodworth's articles.

And the big yellow chrysanthemums! A whole dozen came this morning from Raup's Florist Shop just for me. One really gets quite a thrill around this place when a man sends flowers. But of course tradition seems to hold forth in the sending of yellow chrysanthemums to wear to the game.

Back to back Oregon! And all ready to do it with my slick new haircut. The Co-ed Barber Shop, next door to the Co-op, is the place where I got it, because it is so quick to run down there between classes, and they always cut everyone's hair in the best possible way. Those barbers certainly know their business, and they work unusually fast, too.

Hasting's Sisters do give the best water waves, and Tippie says the same for marcel. Must be true, then, if we claim it ourselves, because we have had good T. L.'s on them. Have made an appointment for you with them for Saturday morning.

Bought the dearest velvet hat in wood brown at the Style Shop yesterday. They are having a special November clearance sale, with all the hats reduced, and most of them at half-price. I did need the hat for Homecoming, with my man coming from Portland. Frances is going to buy a small felt tomorrow, because in all this rain, we certainly need them; and the style Shop has some that are so jaunty—just like Frances.

You remember my new winter coat with the gray squirrel collar? Well, I have planted a bouquet of dark blue violets on the collar, and the effect is quite stunning. I bought the violets at Wetherbee-Densmore's, next to the McDonald. They have beautiful corsages also, and single flowers, besides loads of other things.

Of course we want everything to be the best for our Homecoming guests, so we are getting an extra supply of meat at The Palace Market, on Thirteenth, close to the campus. Everyone compliments us so much on our good meats, which we always buy there. Beth bought some cold boiled ham and horseradish from them last week, and maybe it wasn't good!!

I have been doing a little Christmas shopping while my money lasts, and I did get the cleverest brass fruit bowl set in a black teak wood stand at the Little Shop Around the Corner from the McDonald. I don't know who to give it to, but it certainly should be received gracefully by anyone.

Underwood & Elliott are preparing a feed for us in their kitchen, which they run in connection with the store. They will cook anything you order just the way you want it, from delicious pies and cakes, salads and meat, to hot coffee—We're not worrying any more about having the right thing for our big Homecoming feed, although we've no time to work on it ourselves Saturday. Waiting anxiously to see you at the game.

Always yours,
CAROL
