

COOPERATION SOUGHT BY Y. W. ORGANIZATION

World Court Issue Reason Of Consolidation

The Y. W. C. A. World Fellowship committee, under the leadership of Gladys DuBois, decided at a meeting yesterday to co-operate with other campus organizations in providing some means whereby students on the campus may become better informed of the World Court issue.

The group which this committee represents aims to consider problems which are not always directly connected with the University of Oregon, but which are of international interest. Its purpose is to broaden the interests of students.

Anticipating the widespread interest among students of colleges and universities in the World Court issue and the desire of students to make their influence felt in the Senate's decision, the Council of Christian Associations, representing all of the student Y. W. C. A.'s and Y. M. C. A.'s of the nation, suggests that a student vote on the question be taken and submitted to the Senate before December 17. It asks that students study the question intelligently in order that their decisions will be worthwhile. Literature explaining aspects of the World Court will be distributed on the campus soon.

The World Fellowship group will begin regular discussion meetings winter term.

Get A Shine Today— O. A. C. CHINESE MEET WITH OREGON FRIENDS

Eight members of the O. A. C. Chinese club were guests at a ten course Chinese dinner, served at the Oriental Grill and eaten in true Chinese fashion with chop sticks. The banquet was given by the University of Oregon Chinese club at eight o'clock Saturday evening. Twelve members of the University of Oregon Chinese club and Mrs. C. R. Donnelly, advisor, were present.

A few appropriate remarks on the occasion were made by Ta Lee, president of the Oregon Chinese club, and a response was made by C. N. Lee, president of the O. A. C. club. The purpose of the meeting was to bring about closer and friendlier relations between the two clubs, and it was voted at the dinner to have similar ones in the future. At the close of the banquet the O. A. C. men expressed their appreciation of the affair by giving a yell for Oregon.

Get Your Shine Today— FROSH MOST POPULAR IN RIFLE TURNOUT

"As things stand, the freshmen will be the backbone of the men's rifle team this year." This was the statement made by Captain F. M. Moore yesterday, who deprecates the fact that freshmen are practically the only ones turning out for practice.

The team will be selected after the holidays and will shoot against all the teams in the 9th Corps area, which comprises eight states, Washington, Oregon, Utah, Wyoming, Nevada, Idaho, California, and Montana.

If the team succeeds in weathering this storm, it will be eligible for national competition, and, if also successful in this, will participate in the national intercollegiate shoot.

Get Your Shine Today— TALENTED JAPANESE ARTIST VISITS CAMPUS

Tokio Ueyama, who will be remembered as the artist of the unusual collection of landscape and portrait paintings which was exhibited in the school gallery here about a year ago, is now on the campus renewing acquaintances and accounting for several years of interesting travel and study.

Mr. Ueyama is a scholar as well as a distinguished artist. He received his art training in Japan, the United States, and Europe and has recently returned from a sojourn in Mexico where he studied the different phases of art education in that country and particularly the work of Biviera, the foremost exponent of modern fresco painting.

Mr. Ueyama has been acquainted with instructors in the school of architecture for some years.

PICTURESQUE FRENCHMEN SEEN ENJOYING LIFE TO FULL

Holiday Spirit of Crowds Impress U. H. S. Teacher As Being Typically Un-American

"I have great joy in the things I bought and brought home," said Mrs. Edith Baker Pattee, in speaking of her travels in France, Italy and Spain. Mrs. Pattee, who received her B.A. degree at the University of Oregon in 1913, is now head of the language department in the University high school. Dolls dressed in peasant costumes, pictures of all kinds, fine linen handkerchiefs, in one of which the story of the fox and the crow is wrought in lace around the border, and colorful railway posters are among the odd or beautiful things she has brought back with her.

Wandering through the streets of Paris is a strange sensation, according to Mrs. Pattee. Everything is strange and unnatural until one comes suddenly upon a place often seen in pictures. If one has seen it often enough the spot has a bewildering feeling of familiarity, that gives the illusion of being in a dream. When one passes on, the atmosphere of unreality, still remains so strong that, looking back, it is hard to distinguish what one really saw from what one imagined.

"While in France I tried to get in touch with the people," Mrs. Pattee said. "I deliberately 'stuck around' to hear what the people of the masses said and did. It is fascinating to get in the thick of it.

"If one is in difficulty," Mrs. Pattee continued, "he will find a French crowd curious but sympathetic, for instance, in a train. In France when a train is ready to go, it goes, even if you are in the very act of getting on. But the people who are in the train will pull you in, and someone from the ground will toss in the window any parcels you may have dropped.

"The conductor does not call the names of the stations, and if one does not see the name of the station, it is his misfortune. The crowd, however, always is ready to take special pains to get the name for you, or, if you tell them where you wish to get off, to see that you do so."

Everywhere, Mrs. Pattee said, she was interested in the children. "Clean children, dirty children, natural little people like our own, just as curious about the foreigners as we were about them. Their information is dependable, more so than that of older people. Children are apt to know places and how to reach them—or, if they do not know, they are willing to admit it and go and find out. Whereas older people like to pose as know-issue will be available for general distribution not later than today.

There has been considerable delay this year in putting out the directory due to the fact that the University Press, which annually handles the job, has been disrupted while moving into its new quarters.

The directory this year will follow the style of those of former years. It is a paper bound booklet which contains the names, home and school addresses, telephone numbers of students and professors, and in addition the class and major course of each student.

The names of student body officers, councils and committees are also included in the book. After today the book will be on sale at the Co-op store, according to the graduate manager who has charge of its publication.

ing even when they do not. "For instance," the speaker continued, "I stood on the curb with a group of small boys several times to watch a street fair. The little fellows explained what was going on better than their elders."

There are street fairs, one after another, to celebrate every possible occasion—and sometimes, it seems, just for the pleasure of having them. Mrs. Pattee explained. There is a long row of booths, shooting-galleries, eating places, and places where candies, crepes (French pancakes), and lollipops are sold. Booths in which little implements such as punches for embroidery and a clever device for darning runs in stockings are sold were much in evidence. Chinaware in odd pieces was sold, the feats of strong men and hideous or grotesque cripples were exhibited.

Buyers are tempted with candies made in shapes of fruits or animals, cakes, lollipops or all-day suckers lying in heaps. These dainties gather a great deal of dust—which seems to detract nothing from their popularity. You may take your choice. The crepes are fried, sprinkled with sugar, rolled up, and handed to you with fingers of whose cleanliness there may be some doubt. You take the pancakes and eat them, however, without worrying too much concerning their hygienic purity.

Grown people eat lollipops and ride on the various and plentiful merry-go-rounds as freely as do the children. Everyone has the holiday spirit. "The holiday spirit is in everyone, yes; but the people are not rude or officious," said Mrs. Pattee. "They are familiar, yet kindly and courteous. I went about a great deal alone, yet never was I annoyed in any way."

In these street fairs there are throngs of people in ordinary dress, but even more in the costumes of the different provinces of France. You see winged caps of lace, flat, black hats, brilliant colors; velvet suits with gay sashes; wooden shoes, or slippers with extraordinarily high heels.

Skirts may be very long or extremely short, according to the custom of that province from which the wearer came. Many elaborate aprons are featured. The garb of many religious orders are also noticeable.

"The Parisians certainly must appreciate the beauty of their city," Mrs. Pattee declared. "There are so many good pictures of it. Many excellent ones are in the French exts we use."

ARTICLE BY GRAD PRINTED

"Dress up and Shout," is the title of an article written by Leonard Lerwill, graduate of '24, which was published in the November number of National Printer Journalist. Lerwill is now a reporter on the Eugene Register. The article gives the newspaper policies of Albert Bede, editor of the Cottage Grove Sentinel.

RETURN OF BLANKETS ASKED

Attention, all fraternity and sorority houses! Sergeant A. Powers of the R. O. T. C. quartermaster department requests that all U. S. army blankets that were borrowed by the different houses to accommodate guests during Homecoming be returned as soon as possible. He remarked that houses may be expected to pay the purchase price of the blanket if one is lost.

INCREASE IN WORK AT DISPENSARY NOTED

The infirmary and dispensary are now beginning to "reap the harvest from exposure and sleeplessness" of Homecoming week-end, as Dr. Wilmoth Osborne, of the medical staff puts it. The enthusiasm of certain rooters at the football game Saturday now lies dormant, and just how long it will do so depends entirely on the stubbornness of these same enthusiasts' vocal cords, which refuse to work. Laryngitis is the medical word given to this loss of voice, caused by acute irritation of the larynx, aided by a cold.

La grippe, which includes colds, bronchitis, and pleuresy, is another favored illness, David Adolphe, a junior of the school of business administration, Merrill Hagen, a freshman, economics major, and Donald Rennewanz, a freshman in the school of medicine, all at present being in the infirmary with it.

Get Your Shine Today— FORMER STUDENT DIES

Margaret Mansfield Fims, of Astoria, a graduate of the University in the class of 1921, died suddenly yesterday. She was a member of Delta Delta Delta, was head of Mu Phi Epsilon at one time, and participated in other campus activities. Following graduation, Miss Fims spent a year in the registrar's office.

Get Your Shine Today— SIGMA XI WILL HOLD JOINT MEETING FRIDAY

Sigma Xi will meet at the Eugene hotel Friday, November 20, at 6:30 p. m. The active members from the University of Oregon will entertain as dinner guests the members of Sigma Xi club of O. A. C. and the Portland members of the chapter.

Two papers will be presented by members of the O. A. C. faculty. Dr. Helen Fulton will discuss "The Production of Butyl Alcohol and Acetone by Granulobacter Pectinovorum," and Dr. W. V. Halverson's subject is "Mechanism of Nitrogen Fixation by Nitrogen Fixing Bacteria."

Edwin P. Cox, of the geology department, who has been promoted from associate to active membership in Sigma Xi, will be initiated at the meeting, it is expected.

Dr. Harry B. Yocum, acting head of zoology at Oregon, who is president of the Oregon chapter of Sigma Xi, will preside.

It is requested by Dr. W. P. Boynton, head of the physics department, and secretary of Sigma Xi, that all members on the campus report to him as soon as possible whether or not they will attend the dinner.

COLLEGE ORCHESTRAS OFFERED OCEAN TRIP

College students who play musical instruments are offered the opportunity of taking a 52 day voyage on a trans-Pacific passenger liner according to a message sent to Dean Walker by a Seattle steamship company. The trip includes visits to such Oriental ports as Yokohama, Kobe, Shanghai, Hong Kong and Manila. This company is engaging five piece orchestras to play during the dinner hours and for the dances on their ocean liners.

In order that as many college men may enjoy the opportunity as possible, these orchestras are engaged for one round trip only, or a period of 52 days. Arrangements have been made, however, for both winter and summer engagements.

Officials of the company write that the income on the trip will be sufficient to cover all ordinary expenses. The directors will be paid $60 a month and the other members $50 each. It is also stated that the orchestras generally play ashore in each of the ports, and in this way the salaries are considerably increased.

Orchestras composed partly or wholly of women will not be considered the letter continues.

Those who are interested in the matter or wish to obtain further details in regard to it are requested to see Dean Walker.
