(Continued from page two) glorious portions of my life and I confess that I must say that the romance and the chivalry had not gone out of warfare at that time. As for being a success as a soldier, I hope I may not appear conceited when I say that I once got a "I" in military, the only "I" to which I have ever fallen heir since attending the University; and since you know how strict the Military department is in grading, you will appreciate how good I really was.

Well, in my sophomore year they started admitting the women to the R. O. T. C. and since I wasn't interested in the fair sex with weapons at hand, I dropped into the back ground, and for all of my second year filled the office of No. 4 in the rear rank. I might add, however, that the new officers did very well, and one time the whole platoon got through review without making any mistakes. My whole point, Mr. Powell and bro. officers, is that I am really qualified to speak on military matters, having had all this experience, especially in the R. O. T. C., and hope none of you will make any more bad breaks by questioning my military ability.

NATION'S NEWSPAPERS ANALYZED BY EDITOR

Differences between eastern and western journalism were discussed by Frank Jenkins, editor of the Morning Register, at an open meeting of Sigma Delta Chi, national profession journalism fraternity, at the Anchorage Tuesday noon. Mr. Jenkins noted the more or less definite division of the field in New York among papers catering to various stages of literacy and intelligence, as contrasted with the western papers' general policy of trying to reach everybody. Decline of the editorial page from its former position of eminence was charged to several factors, a certain deterioration in quality due to publishers' taking it less seriously, an unwillingness of a considerable part of the reading public to think at all, and a disposition on the part of many of the others to think for themselves, without guidance from editorial writers.

Mr. Jenkins returned this week from a month's business trip to the east, during which he visited many states of the east and south. His observation of the newspapers he read closely while away, confirmed him in his belief, he said, that the New York Times is the greatest newspaper in the world. Northwest newspapers in general, however, he rates higher than those of any other region.

Putnam. "First the public must be 'sold' on the student body activities. Second, the principal of the school must be 'sold.' Third, the rest of the faculty must be 'sold.' Fourth, the student body itself must be sold and lastly there must be an efficient way of handling these finances after you have them. "You must prove that the activities are the best you can produce. If you expect public support for any of your activities you must give it the best you have." Dr. Dan E. Clark, secretary of the state debating league, in a brief address urged the representatives of the high schools to carry back to their organizations the plea that debate be recognized and that all schools become members of the league.

Debate Encouragement Urged "Debate in the High School" was the subject of an address by Norman C. Thorne, assistant superintendent of schools, Portland. "I think debate should be as much of an activity in high school as much as football, basketball or baseball," he said. "Debate offers the opportunity to 'break out' mentally. Debate may be a hobby which will afterwards add to a person's life when he gets out into the world. It offers a girl or boy the opportunity to do his best."

Walter Malcolm, president of the Associated Students of the University of Oregon, gave a short address on "Leadership for all." "Is it to our advantage to be interested in school activities?" he asked. "The facts show that it is." "It gives one a chance to associate with other people and it gives one physical, managerial, or business development, depending upon the activity he is engaged in. The great difficulty, he said, is for the students to find time for these activities."

All the brawn of all the workers of the world would fail to supply the power needed for our construction and production requirements. Modern civilization is based on cheap power readily applied to tasks of all kinds.

Machinery works: Man thinks

According to college tests, man develops one-eighth horsepower for short periods and one-twentieth in steady work. As a craftsman—a worker who uses brains—he is well worth his daily wage. But as a common laborer, matching brawn against motorized power, he is an expensive luxury.

With a fifty-horsepower motor, for instance, one man can do the work of 400 common laborers. He is paid far more for his brains than his brawn.

The great need of this and future generations is for men who can plan and direct. There is ample motorized machinery for all requirements of production and construction. But motorized machinery, no matter how ingenious, can never plan for itself.

And that is precisely where the college man comes in. Highly trained brains are needed more and more to think, plan, and direct tasks for the never-ending application of brawn-saving electricity.
