

JUNIOR MAJORS HIGH POINTERS

Sophs Next, Frosh Third In Motor Ability Test

UNIFORM WORK AIDED

System Used First Time; Eight Rank Perfect

The final scores for the motor ability tests, which were taken by all freshman and sophomore women and physical education majors have been computed. The sophomores rank slightly higher than the freshmen, while the majors rank higher than either. Out of a possible score of three, the freshmen and sophomores scored on the average one point, the underclass majors two points, and the junior majors three points.

A comparison was made with the entrance physical examination test, which divided students into A and B groups, the A group being the higher. Students who scored A in this entrance examination, scored higher in the motor ability test than those in the B group.

Uniform Work Aided
The motor ability test was introduced on the Oregon campus by Miss E. F. Waterman, assistant professor of physical education. Miss Waterman spent last year at Wellesley, where this system was used. The test helps to divide girls into squads in their gymnastic work, so there will be uniform development and progress. Students who score highest out of each class are appointed squad leaders and help instructors in apparatus work.

The test consists of four divisions, and it is possible to score three points from each of these, 12 being a perfect score. The first division is running for time, and it is necessary to run at least 75 yards to make three points. Three points are scored in the broad jump, by a jump of at least five feet eleven inches.

The vaulting test consists of four booms, all of which must be cleared in order to score three. The last boom is three feet high. A ball must be thrown 55 yards in the throwing test in order to make three points.

Perfect Scores Made

are: The King, the Queen's husband, conveniently tall and wearing a very ordinary suit. His costume is set off by a crown on his head and an umbrella in his hand. The Queen, the King's wife, is short and necessarily stout; the impression of queenliness resulting solely from a large tiara on her head. She carries a huge leather handbag. Princess Clothilde, the King's pride and the Queen's worry, always outgrows her skirts, and her stockings are frequently out at the knees; The Prince, and another Prince, the twins, all have a part.

K. Kressman in 'Frisco
"The Athlete," written by Katherine Kressman, who is now in San Francisco doing literary criticism and verse, is a tragedy. The scene takes place in the curtained tent of Celertis, by the field where the athletic games are going on. The characters taking part are: Menes, hurler of the discus; Pilus, thrower of the javelin; Celertis, an athlete; and Xora, rubber for Celertis.

The plot of the play is woven around the athlete, and it is to the athlete that wins the race that the hand of the daughter of the king is to be given. Celertis wins the race, and Xora is very jealous, with the jealousy of youth over age. He plans to poison Celertis, and in the end drinks the poison potion himself.

White-Footed Mice, Victims Of Student Trappers

Effect of Climate on Rodent Studied by Zoologists

Long-tailed, white-footed, taupe-skinned field mice are being caught in Eugene just across the mill race near the University campus, by students of the zoology department, who are making a study of the relation of environment to physical characteristics.

Mice from different parts of the country have been collected in order to get a great many varieties to compare. The local field mice are plentiful, as many as 23 being captured one night in 10 traps. The traps used are baited usually with rolled oats or wheat grains, and hold the animals without killing them. Ralph Edmisten, senior in the department, who is making a special problem study of mice, is the chief trapper.

Ernest Thompson Seton, artist-naturalist, contends that a species of animals coming from a larger continent or territory to a smaller will drive out the species occupying the smaller. Dr. Huestis explains that, inasmuch as house mice came to America from Europe and still prowl in dwellings instead of invading the fields and attempting to extinguish the natives there, this rule does not hold in all cases.

Every locality somewhat isolated has a little different type of mice from other neighboring localities. Mice on one side of a river may have shorter tails than those produced on the opposite side.

If the isolation is combined with considerable differences in surroundings and weather conditions, the variations in size and color are more pronounced. Eastern Oregon mice are light tan because of the dry climate.

Several specimens have been obtained from the coast regions. Some of these have tails that are six inches long and bodies two inches shorter. Others have long bodies and short tails.

Northwest Basketball Situation Favorable; Oregon Chances Good

a two year letterman, will occupy one of the sharp-shooting tasks, while two youths with the peculiar cognomens of Henry and Clay are vying for the other.

Montana will have a replica of the gigantic team that put up such a great game of football in the armory last winter. The Grizzlies, like their namesake, are rugged and rough, lacking some of the polish and finesse of the coast teams, but making up for it by the reckless abandon with which they play. Win or lose, they are always tough opponents.

Ted Illman, grid captain, will again be at center, and Russell Sweet and Bill Kelly, the scintillating football duo, will find places somewhere. The remainder of the team will be picked from Coyle, Baney, Berg, and Sterling, lettermen, with Kain, Hodges, Brittenham, Miller, Dragstedt, Graham, and Porter also in the running.

Seven of these men are from the grid squad.

This resume finds Washington and O. A. C. weaker than last year, while Idaho and Montana loom up stronger. W. S. C. may prove to be a dark horse. Oregon has her 1925 team practically intact.

Obak's Kollege Krier

OBAK Wallace, Publisher E.E.J. Office Boy and Editor
Volume 4 SATURDAY A. M. NUMBER 9

Great Scarcity of Muzzles

"Is the University all out of muzzles?" Obak has taken this quotation from the Eugene Daily Guard. It appeared in one of the editorials published in that paper with reference to the right Honorable Glen E. Hoover, who took the privilege of writing to a Portland paper of their ignorance or indifference to the economic truths.

So far as Obak's Krier is concerned no one can accuse the paper of any such conduct as he charged. Nor have we observed any such "flaying" in any of the other papers published in this vicinity.

There's lots of muzzles about the University, the only trouble is, are they properly used?

OBAKS MOURNS
Obaks extends its sincerest sympathies to the flunking 90 who have lately been with us. They were a dear old gang who meant no harm to any one but since the severe faculty can not see fit to tolerate their simple good natured and blissful sedentary life we must bid them farewell. Obaks will always remember them, however, and consider them as alumni just the same.

The spirit of Organization has bitten them and these valiant souls have organized under the name of the "Limping Lions," and have already launched a movement which if successful will enable them to return next year.
