

"GARGOYLES" SECTION FEATURES OLD OREGON

Sketches of Professors Will Appear Soon

The first issue of "Old Oregon" will come off the press the first of next week. This number of the alumni magazine, edited by Jeanette Calkins, alumni secretary, will start again the series of academic portraits and personality sketches grouped under the title of "Under the Gargoyles." Prof. James D. Barnett will be the subject of the first sketch of the new series. The sketches were formerly limited to deans alone but has expanded now to include other faculty members.

A story on the new football coach, John J. McEwan, has been contributed by Raymond Lawrence. The article is accompanied by a picture of the coach on his arrival in Portland being greeted by Walter Malcolm, Virgil Earl and F. H. Young.

An article on the experiences of Clair Holdredge during his two years in Africa will appear in the magazine. Holdredge was connected with a diamond mining project and the article is entitled "Africa Without Lions."

Malcolm Epley, campus journalist, is the author of "What Happens to Football Captains" an article telling of the occupations of all Oregon captains from the first to Bob Mautz, captain of 1925. Lawyers, ministers, and business men are among the former athletes.

An appreciation of Earl Kilpatrick, has been contributed. Kilpatrick was dean of the Extension Division and recently resigned to take up Red Cross work.

Evelyn Schenk has sent in a poem, written for one of Mrs. Ernst's classes, entitled, "The Pioneer."

"Old Oregon" will have the usual departments of sports, edited by Dick Syring, Campus News, Alumni Notes and the "Family Mail." Rolf Klep, cartoonist, has made a new head for this department.

The cover of the magazine will be a campus scene at sunset.

Dr. Bowen Explains Department's Views On Requirements

haven't sensed the full value of it in all phases of college education, it is the duty of the different departments to impress that value upon them. The University has already decided that a reading knowledge is necessary, but to make the requirement now might work a hardship if it were carried out to the full extent of the letter.

"The average University student may not travel abroad but he is concerned with dealing with ideas and the general mass of human knowledge and what the peoples of the world are thinking."

Dr. Bowen is not in sympathy with a policy that allows students to study languages on an impractical basis, believing that a reading knowledge is the only legitimate object of study.

EX-STUDENT PUBLISHES FOSSIL DISCOVERIES

Leo George Hertlein, former student in the geology department and at present at Stanford University, recently published an account of his discoveries of marine fossils. The bulletin is entitled "New Species of Marine Fossil Mollusca from Western North America," and was published by the Southern California Academy of Science.

Several of the fossils were named after Dr. Thomas Condon, founder of the geology department at the University of Oregon and the pioneer geologist of the state; one was named after Dr. Edwin T. Hodge, professor of geology, and some have Hertlein's name.

INSTRUCTORS SPEND HOLIDAY ON SLOPES OF MOUNT RAINIER

Group Enjoys Skiing, Radio Carols, Tobogganing, Fair Weather in Paradise Valley

Listening to Christmas carols broadcast from radio stations of Pacific coast and Canadian cities, while shut off from the world at Paradise Inn, 5,600 feet in elevation at Mt. Rainier National Park, and spending a week enjoying winter sports was the experience of four University faculty women.

Miss Florence E. Wilbur, instructor in English, Miss Ernestine Troemel and Miss Lillian Stupp of the physical education department and Miss Fanny McCamant, head resident of Susan Campbell hall left Eugene the first day of the winter vacation, motored to Paradise Valley and after their return to Portland, all but Miss McCamant, to Seaside, where they found the weather much colder than in the national park in spite of the fact that the elevation is lower.

The women motored to Longmire Inn, where they remained for three days, before starting up the seven mile trail to Paradise Valley. The trip is a very steep and hard one and is made entirely by hiking.

"There were six feet of snow all around us and we had to use snowshoes," said Miss Wilbur in an account of her trip. The guide had to carry a huge pouch of mail, a turkey for Christmas dinner and skis to four men who were spending the winter at Paradise Inn. In our party were four young men from the University of Washington and the nine of us labored up the steep climb until we finally reached Paradise Valley.

"Paradise Valley is a beautiful spot and during the four days we spent there the weather was perfect, the sun shone and the sky was very blue. We spent our days tobogganing, hiking, skiing and indulging in the many winter sports at the resort. In the evening there were great open bonfires and we sometimes sat around them and sometimes went for moonlight hikes to spots of beauty.

"Mt. Rainier towers many feet above the valley. It is completely covered with snow and no one climbs it until summer. One night while we were out we heard a terrible roar, which our guide told us was an avalanche which would have killed anyone in the way of it.

"Christmas day was a very jolly one. The Christmas spirit prevailed. We had a turkey dinner and then went tobogganing.

"We spent the rest of the vacation at Seaside, returning home late Sunday evening."

"On the fifth day we returned to Longmire Inn and then motored back to Portland. The fog was very dense and did not lift until we were within a few miles of Portland when it was suddenly clear and we could see Mt. Hood, Mt. Adams, Mt. St. Helen's and Mt. Rainier.

JOURNALISM SCRIBES PLAN CAMPUS DANCE

Authors of "Yellow Fang" Still Seek Revenge

Although the Sigma Delta Chi has announced their intention to stage a huge journalism jamboree for the entire campus to reimburse their depleted treasury due to the unfortunate demise of the "Yellow Fang" they also announce that their war with the Homecoming committee is by no means ended.

Instead it is their plan to expose the details of the disastrous end of the publication before a session of the moot court in the spring term of the school year. The defendants, James Leake and James Forstel, heads of the Homecoming Directorate are to be represented in the court by Paul Patterson, while the plaintiffs will be presented by Tom Graham, both students in the law school.

The case first arose over the failure of the "Yellow Fang" official comic publication of the Sigma Delta Chi to appear at the smoker held by the men of the University at homecoming. Upon investigation it seems that they found the edition just coming off the press, having been held up several hours due to a last minute censure of the contents of the paper.

The Sigma Delta Chi claims that the censure legitimate in purpose but that the time of the censure was directly responsible for its failure to appear in time to be sold, thereby allowing the scribes to go sunk to the tune of about $60.

With all of the journalistic genius of the time, the scribes resolve not to be the goats financially or otherwise, so plan a jamboree bigger and better than the university has ever known and that, they admit, is a job not to be sneered at.

ARRANGEMENT MADE FOR EUROPEAN TOUR

Pacific Coast Art Students Offered Summer Trip

Under the personal supervision of Prof. Walter F. Isaacs, head of the department of painting, sculpture and design, a group of University of Washington students are arranging for a tour of Europe and England this summer. The tour will be made under the auspices of the World Acquaintance Tours of New York.

Throughout the trip Mr. Isaacs will give short talks on art appreciation and history and guides will be furnished to take students on sightseeing tours.

The students will probably start the latter part of June, going directly to Paris. Five or six days will be spent there, touring the city, Versailles and possibly the battlefields. From there to Avignon and Nice, Monte Carlo and then to Italy, stopping at Genoa, Rome, Naples, Florence, Venice and Milan, with sightseeing in each place.

Lucerne and Interlaken will be visited in Switzerland. Next they will take the Rhine trip in Germany from Cologne to Mayence, then visit Brussels, Bruges and then England. Here they will stop at London, Oxford, the Shakespeare country and part of Scotland, then returning home from Liverpool. It is possible that the trip will be reversed, going to England first and then to Paris.

The student tours arrange for second or third class travel, which eliminates luxuries but provides good food and service.

A circular describing in detail the route, expenses and other information is to be posted at the bulletin board at the College Side Inn.

GROUP PICTURES FOR GLEE CLUBS TAKEN

Pictures of the University Glee clubs and directors, Eugene Carr and John Stark Evans, to be used for publicity on the state tour now being planned by the Glee clubs, were taken yesterday by Kennell-Ellis.

Three different pictures were taken, one of the men and women together in the auditorium of the music building, another of the women's club in the lounge room and one of the men in the lounge room. These pictures will also be used in the Oregana.

MENINGITIS PATIENT REPORTED IMPROVING

News that Don McCormick, frosh basketball player ill with spinal meningitis, is recovering was received by his relatives yesterday. Thursday night he rested easily. Physicians in attendance hold strong hopes for his recovery, but the crisis will not be passed until Sunday, they announce.

He has recovered consciousness and is able to recognize and speak to acquaintances. "Spike" Leslie, freshman basketball coach, said, "Don responded faintly to our greeting when we saw him Wednesday night. After seeing him in an unconscious condition even this much improvement made us feel pretty good. He has a tough battle ahead, but is responding to treatment; the boy has a sound body and plenty of stamina and endurance."

McCormick is in the Good Samaritan hospital in Portland.
