

Gold Basketballs Will be Awarded Oregon Quintet

March 11, Tentative Date
Set for Playoff Series
With Southerners

Committee Recommends
Contract for Ellinger

Gold basketballs will be awarded the five regulars of the University of Oregon hoop quintet as emblematic of the championship of the northern section of the Pacific Coast Conference, according to Walter Malcolm, president of the associated students and chairman of the athletic committee, which met yesterday. It is customary, Malcolm explained, to present gold emblems to members of championship teams.

The athletic committee went on record favoring the adoption of golf as a minor sport. Its recommendation will go to the executive council which must give its approval before it may officially become a student body sport.

In keeping with the policy established last fall, when Oregon and Washington signed a 10-year agreement to play football games at alternate years between Portland and Seattle Thanksgiving day, schedules for additional sports, not only for the varsity but also for the freshmen, have been suggested. A dual track meet between the Oregon and Washington freshmen will be held this spring, if negotiations carried on by the schools are completed, Graduate Manager Benefield said. A return meet probably will be held here next year.

It was announced at the athletic committee meeting that the championship series between Oregon and the winner of the title in the southern section, may not start until March 11, as the Oakland auditorium, where the games are to be played, will not be available until that date. California now has a one-game advantage over the Cardinals.

The committee recommended that a contract be tendered Harry O. Ellinger, to become head line coach and a full-time member of the physical education staff. Final action will not be taken until the executive council meets.

"I came under the influence of the Y. M. C.
