Concerning the Need for A New Infirmary

We notice with interest in the report of the activities of the building committee of the hard working and long suffering board of regents the following item taken from yesterday's Emerald:

"The members of the building committee agreed that the present conditions of the infirmary hospital were unsatisfactory but money is not available to build a new building so conditions will remain the same as they are at present except that the isolation cases will be cared for in a different manner as soon as arrangements can be made."

The Emerald at this time is not prepared to quarrel violently with the regents for the action they have taken in this matter. If no funds are available—well, there really isn't much use to blame the regents for the paucity of dollars of the University. But somehow before letting the matter pass into the realm of the forgotten we cannot help calling attention once again to the conditions existant in the infirmary at the present time.

Under normal circumstances the infirmary is reasonably adequate. While not a thing of beauty or aesthetic inspiration the homely structure serves its purpose fairly well. For many years the student patients have been treated most generously and capably by the infirmary nurses, and in most cases, while bewailing the tenacity with which physicians hold the students to their beds, the ailing inmates have been well satisfied and appreciative of the service rendered them by the infirmary.

Last term, however, there was a noteworthy exception to the customary careful treatment. Of a sudden the mumps descended on the campus with the result that the infirmary was crowded to overflowing, with the overflow housed in quarters that were far from adequate. Perhaps because of Emerald objections in a short time the mumps epidemic abated and the condition was bettered.

Here then, is the situation: The infirmary is reasonably adequate when conditions are normal; but in case of epidemic when the infirmary is most valuable, conditions are far from satisfactory. Therefore it would seem reasonable to expect that the regents, as soon as funds are available, will set about to provide proper accommodations. If this action is not taken within the course of a year or two the students have the right and the obligation to raise their voices in firm protest.

Some Aspects of Library Problems

The next time you think you have occasion for abusing the library, it's management and it's staff, collectively and individually, because the book you want, and must have, is not in and cannot be found; when the attendant has looked on every likely shelf and in every index and comes back with empty hands and no knowledge of it's whereabouts. Remember that such a deplorable state of affairs may not be her fault; keep your reservations in Hades for the graduate student who misuses his stack privilege by gathering an arm load of books at random, and either forgets to replace them or puts them on the first shelf available.

And then again when she tells you that an instructor has the book, and you come back again a month and a half later, to meet with the same disheartening answer, remember that there still remain professors who, for charity's sake we shall designate as absent-minded, who seem to have the idea that the only time it is necessary to return books is when they retire or leave the state.

Also when you are told that a book is at the bindery, do not rave because there are not more copies, but remember that students sometimes leave books in the graveyard all night; carry them about in the toolbox of the wreck; use them for door stops and window props, and use them to stage pillow fights. Being subject to wear and tear, as are all worldly things, they must perforce be repaired, and the library finds it absolutely necessary to take them out of circulation for this process, so be patient. Consider these things, and be not too harsh with the girl behind the desk or the system behind the girl. Be thankful that you are not attending a university of the day when three foot log chains linked a five pound tome to desks, and if you wanted another copy you procured a ream of parchment and a horn of ink and copied it yourself.

Here you are, girls! None other than your old flame and secret sorrow, Howard Hobson. Up for auction to the fairest bidder. Strong personality and arm, veteran of the basket but not of the flask, and ardent upholder of campus traditions and feminism. He has a quiet line, but he throws it far, lets it sink, and then see what he hooked! But, girls, Jenny is going to Portland this weekend, and this is Hobbie's last chance to show another girl what a nice young man he is. His last week of grace, so get busy, show him that the women of the campus appreciate what he has done for the school, just as much as the men do. Make Hobby your hobby. This is your last chance! Going! Going! Make Hobby your Hobby!

Frank Powell and Clinton Peets, veteran runners, have announced their intentions to run in the Chi Omega Spring Term Marathon Race. It has been rumored that "Patty" Parks is sponsoring the race. Frank states that his newly acquired pigging vehicle and his collegiate personality will make him a strong contender for the Loving Cup which will be awarded sometime this Spring by the sponsor. As yet Mr. Peets has declined to make any statement regarding the forth-coming event, but from interested spectators comes the report that his preliminary training for the affair is well under way.

We nominate for the Hall of Fame for Famous Sayings that of Virg Earl's—"Sorry but I can't see you. I'm in and out of my office all day I have so much to do. Drop in some other time, boy."

 It is a significant fact that the Brotherhood of Campus Caretakers recently passed a by-law providing for the punishment of any member wearing golf knickers. This is a fair indication of the reaction of public opinion toward that "underslung" appearance which these garments give to so many people. Of course there are some men on the campus who are superbly built for knickers but they are the ones who never wear them.

We understand that the much-talked of Mill Race lights will not be installed for some time yet. Certain powerful interests on the campus are said to be deferring the calling of bids.
