

Climb to Top of Deady Was Tapu To Co-eds of 1902

Countryside Folk Attended Graduation in Early Campus History

University of Oregon co-eds of 1902 were not allowed to take any courses that were held in the upper stories of Deady hall because the dean of women thought that the high climb was injurious to delicate feminine constitutions, to say nothing of long trailing skirts. Such is an anecdote often told by "Old Timers," and repeated by Professor Albert R. Sweetser, head of the botanical department, when asked to compare the students of today with those of former times.

A slide of Deady taken in 1876 was brought from the office by the instructor. Amid energetic pacing back and forth in the room he occasionally stopped to add an interesting thought to his story. In the picture the hall stands isolated except for a few clumps of wild bushes and vines and a large pile of wood against which a few students are leaning. No protecting vines embraced its walls at that time.

On the front step a group of primly correct men wearing stiff hats and black suits pose with women dressed in long skirts, tight waists and graceful curves.

When Professor Sweetser came here from Pacific University where he taught biology, Dr. John Bovard, now head of the school of physical education, was his only assistant. The department was finally divided into two departments, biology and botany.

Villard and Friendly halls and a small building used as the girls' gymnasium were the only buildings on the campus except Deady. Between Deady and the place where McClure hall now is, the ground was rough and wild flowers were abundant. It was here that the tennis court was first located.

The Condon oaks on 11th street are the only native trees on the campus, the others having been planted since 1886. In 1902 all of these were mere saplings over which Mr. Sweetser could easily see everything that happened out on Kinead field, where most of the sports took place, by looking out of his class room windows.

Commencement was one of the biggest events of the year for the people of Eugene and the surrounding country. Some came miles in their hacks and buggies to attend. A long white fence bordering the campus on Kinead street was used as a hitching place for the steeds. The "program" was held in Villard.

"There were no dwelling houses in Fairmount at that time. We used that district as our botanizing ground. There were no streets of any sort. When I moved out there all my friends thought I was crazy for moving out into the country," the botanist smiled.

In the good old days when his largest class was 25 students and the favorite indoor sport was sliding down the winding stairs in old Deady, Professor Sweetser knew most of the boys and girls, but now he does well to remember having seen some of his pupils somewhere when he meets them, he said.

According to a letter received at the school of journalism, Frances Ballack, '22, is working for the Press Telegram at Long Beach, California, covering lodges and obituaries.

Miss Ballack states that she sees Helen Manning, ex '21 at Hollywood often.

Workers are busy re-laying the roof of the art building. A. P. McKinze, in charge of the University grounds, says it is impossible to tell how long it will take, as the work is under contract and will depend on the weather. Tar paper is the material used for roofing.

Helen Pugh, of Albany, was a visitor at the Gamma Phi house last week-end. She was a student in the University last term.

Marion Horsfall, a member of Kappa Alpha Theta, spent last week-end at her home in Marshfield.

Isabel Amon, Janet Fenstermacher, and Georgie Benson are leaving the last part of the week to attend the annual district conference of the Gamma Phi Beta sorority which is being held in Portland.

Frances Simpson visited at the Alpha Gamma Delta house last week-end. She is an instructor in the Heppner schools, and graduated last year from the school of journalism. She was a member of Theta Sigma Phi and president of mortar board in her senior year.

Carmen Espinosa spent last week-end visiting at the home of Evangelian and Alta Knox in Grants Pass.

Dena Alm, of Silverton, withdrew from school yesterday on account of ill health. She is a major in the physical education department and a resident of Susan Campbell hall.

Dorothy Will and Marian Ellis of the Chi Omega sorority, spent the week-end in Portland and Helen Dodd went to St. Helens.

Gloria Parker, a graduate of the University, who is teaching this year at Pacific University, spent the week-end on the campus, visiting at the Delta Zeta house.

Vladimir Rojansky, graduate assistant in mathematics, will speak on "Differential Equations of the Hydraulic Surge Tank" at the Mathematics club meeting Thursday evening in room 1 of Johnson hall at 7:15. Following the lecture, there will be a business meeting.

Mrs. Virginia Esterly wired recently that she was extending her visit in California until next Friday. Her plans were not definitely specified, but it is the opinion of Miss Georgia Benson that she will spend the time in visiting the universities at Stanford and Berkeley, and will return on the Shasta limited Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Beeson, (Elizabeth Cady) who were married last Friday, have returned from a short wedding trip and are at home in their apartment, 1331 High street. Mrs. Beeson has resumed her work in the office of the Alumni secretary and Mr. Beeson is continuing his work in the University.

George Shaefer, a former University of Oregon student, who has been attending Stanford the past year, is making a trip around the world as a cadet. He is a member of Phi Delta Theta.

Prof. Hari R. Douglass, of the school of education, addressed the Lynn County teachers last Saturday, at Lebanon.

Sophomore, Freshman First Teams Win Games

The two women's baseball games were materially slowed up last night due to the fact that one Jupiter pitcher persisted that they be staged indoors.

The sophomore first aggregation walked away with the freshman second ten to the tune of 51 to 1.

The first and third freshman teams went into action last night for the first time this season and helped pile up a 28 to 2 score against the third teamers.

The only game scheduled for tonight is the senior first vs. junior first, and promises to be a good battle as practically both teams have worked together in previous years.

Thirty Girls Enroll in Archery Classes

Archery is attracting little notice as a competitive sport for women, although 30 girls are enrolled in the regular class work conducted by Miss Harriet Thompson. A huge, colored bull's eye at the entrance to the gymnasium dressing rooms begs any girl who wishes to earn points in this sport inscribe her "Mary Jane" beneath it. Archery will be one of the events of the big Will Play Day being planned between Oregon and O. A. C. According to present plans any girl who participates in the shooting that day will receive W. A. A. points. Dorothy Gay is head of the sport.

Student Volunteer Leader Gives Recipe For World Democracy

"What God is looking for is men and women who are willing to pay the price, to trust in prayer; and I believe he is going to find the answer to his search in the college students of today," said Robert W. Wilder, founder and present general secretary of the Student Volunteer movement, at a dinner held in his honor at six o'clock Tuesday evening in the Congregational church.

"We were speaking a short time ago about making the world safe for democracy, but it seems as though we were mistaken," the speaker continued. He does, however, believe that such is possible, and advocated three steps to that end: first comes world-wide education; second is the right kind of economic development.

The third step advocated by Mr. Wilder is the organization of the right kind of world court or league of nations. The speaker declared that the outlook for peace in Europe today is rather dark, and predicted no results unless a solution to present problems is found.

Dr. Wilder traced the origin of the Student Youth Movement from its inception by five Princeton students, of which he was one; through its rapid growth in American and European colleges, in which he had an active part; to its present stage of activity, when the movement has sent thousands of students as missionaries throughout the world and many more are preparing to go.

Canton College Wants Two Stenographers

Word has just been received from the office of the trustees of Canton Christian college at New York that there is an opening for two competent stenographers to take over some of the work in Canton, China. The college is looking for staff members and stenographers and wrote to the officials of the University here. Several graduates of the University have been working at the college. Anyone interested may call the office of the executive secretary for further information.
