

Athletics Helpful After School Days, Says Mrs. Esterly

University Well Fitted to Give Training Is Opinion

"Mens sana in corpore sano," quoted Mrs. Virginia Esterly, dean of women, "A sound mind in a sound body."

"Some type of athletics in the form of free play is desirable and essential in rounding out the development of the University woman," continued Mrs. Esterly. "Athletic training is even more valuable to the college girl after college than during her college career, for the college athlete is graduated with a body physically fit for future work."

Mrs. Esterly believes that the competitive idea and point system in athletics are valuable in inducing girls to enter this field. It stimulates their interest, she says.

The University of Oregon has practically all forms of athletics available, so that each woman student can enter some form that interests her. Dean Esterly believes that the college woman who has a body physically fit, has probably also a clear mind for good scholastic work.

Dr. Rebec Receives Pamphlet Based on Senior's Questions

Dr. George Rebec, dean of the graduate school, has received copies of a pamphlet written by Carl E. Seashore, dean of the graduate college of the University of Iowa, entitled "An Open Letter to College Seniors." It discusses the advisability of a college senior continuing his education.

After interviewing many hundreds of students upon their entrance to the graduate college, Dr. Seashore found that there were certain fundamental questions which confronted the college graduate who was trying to determine whether or not to continue his studies.

Some of the questions answered are: "Have I the ability?" "What are the marks of a good graduate student?" "How do I rate?" "Do I need it?" "Will it pay?" "Can I afford it?" "Is it the practical thing to do?" "Why not postpone it?" "What are the possibilities of copies?"

Stipends may be obtained by interested students at Dr. Rebec's office in Johnson hall.

No Friday or Saturday Classes This Week-end

There will be no classes Friday and Saturday this week because of the celebration of Junior Week-end, according to an announcement from the administrative office Monday.

This action will allow all day Friday for late work on floats for the canoe fete, and will enable all students and faculty members to attend the tug of war, and the athletic contests on Saturday.

Library Basement To Get Linoleum

A new covering of linoleum is being placed on the basement floor of the library by the University carpenters to take the place of the worn-out portions surrounding the desk, where the pencil-sharpener and ink stand are located.

Campus Minister's Father Named For Having Bettered Civilization

An alumni bulletin from Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pennsylvania, recording the names of alumni who have achieved renown for their work in the world and for their bettering of civilization, contains that of John Giffen, father of Rev. Bruce J. Giffen, University pastor and Presbyterian minister.

After his graduation, he became a missionary to Egypt. The bulletin says of him, "The mission fields supported by the church are living testimonial to the sacrifice and devotion of Westminster folk—men like John Giffen (John the Just), who gave forth seven years of his life to the foreign field, and who went through the Assuit uprising of 1882 with credit to himself and his church. The Egyptians knew John Giffen as "John the Just," because he had exceptional balance; he knew what was fair. Of him it has been said that he knew every Egyptian, and they trusted him implicitly."

Later in the article, his work in connection with the Assuit College, which was founded by the Presbyterian missionaries, is mentioned. "Speaking of Assuit College, it was started by a Scotchman named John Hogg, in a donkey stable with only three students. Today it is the most important educational institution in all Egypt, and the two men who have had most to do with its history are Dr. Alexander and John Giffen."
