

Summer Staff Increased To Twenty-nine

Portland Session Faculty To Include Outside Professor

Wilkie Collins, Writer, Will Teach Criticisms

Instructors of Note Picked For School

FIFTEEN outside professors and instructors and University faculty members will be on the Portland Extension division summer school faculty for this year. Alfred Powers will be director of the division, and Dan E. Clark will be assistant director.

Among the 15 professors and instructors from outside the University is Mildred Harter, auditorium director of the Gary, Indiana, public schools. She will have charge of work in Portland. According to educators, she is one of the best known teachers of auditorium work. She will assist in the platoon work which is being started in Portland.

Took Degree Here

Harold Raymond Benjamin, now a research scholar at Stanford University, received his master's degree from Oregon some years ago. He was principal of the University high school for a time.

Another prominent summer session professor will be Wilkie Collins, formerly visiting professor of English literature in the University, who is now a writer of note for magazines and New York newspapers. He will handle the course in criticism which was to have been under the direction of Frank Parker Day. Mr. Day asked to be relieved from his summer school teaching for the summer.

Specialist in Education

T. L. Torgerson, instructor in education at the University of Chicago, and a specialist in the field of tests and measurements in psychology is a member of the staff.

Morton E. Peck, professor of biology at Willamette university, will teach biology and bird study.

Victor L. Chittick, professor of contemporary and American literature at Reed college, will teach English in Portland during the summer. He has done some writing in this line of work.

Benjamin H. Williams, associate professor of political science at the University of Pittsburgh, graduated from Oregon in 1910.

Edward L. Schaub, professor of philosophy at Northwestern university, has taught at the session here before. He will teach the history of educational philosophy. He was president of the American Philosophical association one year.

Other visiting summer session professors and instructors to be in Portland this summer are: Dorothy E. Smith, head of the school department of the Portland public library; Edwin J. Saunders, associate professor of geology, University of Washington; Margaret E. Rich, associate executive secretary of the American Association for Organizing Family Social work; Robert Krohn, supervisor of physical education in the Portland public schools; Saldie Orr-Dunbar, executive secretary of the Oregon Tuberculosis association; Robert H. Down, head of the history department, Franklin high school, Portland; William H. Boyer, supervisor of music, Portland.

Fourteen from Campus

The 14 professors and instructors already associated with the University are: Dan E. Clark, professor of history; Margaret D. Creech, assistant professor of applied sociology; Frederick W. Goodrich, instructor in music; Glenn E. Hoover, assistant professor of economics; Grace Edgington Jordan, instructor in English; Esther M. Krebs, instructor in art; Philip A. Parsons, director of the Portland school of social work; Alfred Powers, dean of the extension division; Frederick G. Schmidt, professor of German language and literature; Albert E. Sweetser, professor of botany; Howard B. Taylor, assistant professor of psychology; F. Miron Warrington, professor of business administration; Esther W. Wuest, supervisor of art; Irene Wuest, instructor in art.

Members of Portland Summer Session Faculty

SOME members of Portland summer session faculty. Reading from left to right, top row: Dr. E. L. Schaub, Northwestern university, education and philosophy; Dr. Donald G. Barnes, history; Prof. Morton E. Peck, Willamette university, bird study and biology; Miss Esther W. Wuest, Portland, art; Prof. Alfred Powers, director, and Journalism. Second row: Dr. Howard E. Taylor, psychology; Dr. V. L. O. Chittick, Reed college, English; Mrs. Grace E. Jordan, short story; Robert H. Down, history; W. H. Boyer, Portland, music; Robert Krohn, Portland, physical education. Third row: Dr. Glenn E. Hoover, public speaking; Dr. Dan E. Clark, history; Dr. B. H. Williams, University of Pittsburgh, economics and political science; Prof. A. R. Sweetser, botany; Frederick Goodrich, music; Prof. F. M. Warrington, French and Spanish. Bottom row: Dr. F. G. G. Schmidt, German; Mrs. Margaret M. Sharp, secretary of session; Dr. P. A. Parsons, sociology; Mrs. Saldie Orr-Dunbar, applied sociology.

Portland Center Summer School Begins June 21

Undergraduate, Graduate Studies Offered; Course To Close July 30

The Portland Extension division center which this year is offering more than 150 undergraduate and graduate courses, opens its summer session, Monday, June 21, and closes Friday, July 30.

Alfred Powers, a graduate of the University in the class of 1910, and for three years assistant director of the extension division, has succeeded Earl Kilpatrick as dean. Mr. Kilpatrick resigned January 1 to accept a position with the American Red Cross headquarters at St. Louis.

The Portland division was started with the idea of giving to business men, wage-earners, homemakers and others who cannot attend a regular school session the opportunity to carry a few hours of study through the night classes. During the school year of 1925-1926 more than 100 courses in 55 different subjects were offered. There was an enrollment of 1,950 in the Portland center classes for the fall term, and the yearly total including the summer session is about 4,600.

Among the University graduates this June there will be 20 who have done part or all of their work in the Portland night classes and summer sessions or correspondence courses.

After nearly 20 years of correspondence work given by the University, the records for 1925 show that there were 238 individuals registered in 1,676 courses in the correspondence school. The first courses were offered in 1907 after there had been many requests on the part of teachers in the state for assistance. By 1909 there were 328 students in courses.

School of Medicine Has 221 Students in '25-'26

The enrollment for the medical school of the University of Oregon, 1925-'26, totals 221. Of these, 49 are registered in the class of 1926, 46 in the class of '27, 58 in the class of '28, and 68 in the class of '29. In the period 1924-'25, 45 received degrees of doctor of medicine.

Physical Education Courses Are Listed

The Portland center has a one hour course in physical education and recreations, under the supervision of Robert Krohn, director of gymnasium, which has an enrollment of 52 women and one man.

The course includes gymnastics for the school room, games for the school room, marching, floor work, Indian club exercises, and folk dancing. Volleyball, basketball, and indoor baseball are among the organized games. Some of the students include a twenty minute swim at Shattuck school tank in their evening class.

Several supervisors of play grounds and gymnasiums are enrolled in the class, as well as a large number of teachers of other branches in the public schools. Some are engaged in office work.

American Institute of Banking Offers Array Of Practical Classes

Among the group of courses offered students of the Extension center by the Portland chapter of the American Institute of Banking are practical courses in business and banking.

Accounting for bankers, elementary banking, business law, investments political economy, and public speaking for bankers are a few of the classes in which more than 300 Portland bankers are registered. Two bank presidents are listed among those men who are registered in the classes that meet once a week.

Of the more than 1,000 bank employees in the city of Portland, 465 are members of the American Institute of Banking, and 337 of these are registered in class work at the extension division, showing the keen interest manifested by men of this profession in the school.

The work in this division deals entirely with the banking industry, and courses that deal with negotiable instruments, commercial law, credits, and others are a mandatory part of the curricula. The courses offered are outlined by the national organization with a view to giving a practical foundation in the profession.

William H. Boyer With University For Twelve Years

Song Director Believes Music to be Simple Form of Speech

William H. Boyer, supervisor of music in the Portland schools and instructor of public school music in the Portland Center, has been associated with the University for twelve years. He has also been director of the Apollo club for 18 years and of the MacDowell club for seven years.

He believes that music is merely a form of speech and that most people learn songs by imitation just as they learned to speak.

An article in the Portland Center paper recently gives his views as follows:

"Experience for years with choirs and singers and a realization that they could not read music demonstrated to me the need of a simple system of sight reading. I endeavored to evolve a plan which would enable a singer to read from a score so that the ability would come with such ease that the love of singing would not be destroyed."

Mr. Boyer worked on his idea for 15 years before he began work in the Portland schools. He adapted the system and made it suitable to the teaching of children. In his classes at the Portland Center the music teachers become familiar with the system.

Disease Specimens Collected by Museum

The pathological museum of the medical school contains a collection of several thousand tissue specimens, which represent the various processes of human diseases. About 400 autopsies are performed annually by the department of pathology. These autopsies include all the coroners' cases and a number of private cases. Various surgical clinics, as well as the student's individual work, supply the museum.

Medical Unit of University is Rated High

Students Given Practical Training in Portland Hospitals

School Recognized as Finest West of Chicago

Noted Research Workers Are Employed

The Portland Extension division is a boon for many students who have either put in four years at college without annexing the coveted degree, or have been forced by circumstances to withdraw from their schools before the termination of their college careers.

Up to sixty hours may be earned at the extension division and applied toward the bachelor's degree, and many ex-collegians are taking advantage of this opportunity by attending the classes held at Lincoln high school, in Portland, and by correspondence.

Other college graduates obtain master's degrees in the same manner while employed during the day, by attending night sessions. This work, however, is not supervised as carefully as work done on the campus, and presupposes a willingness on the part of the candidate to do research work on his own initiative.

The activities of the Portland center are fully coordinated with those of the campus by the use of many campus instructors, and by frequent conferences with deans of schools and heads of campus departments.

Extension Work Helps Students Secure Degrees

Twenty to Graduate in June; Social Work on Full-Time Basis

To receive a degree from the University of Oregon without spending any time on its campus or in some cases one year's time is the opportunity taken advantage of by a number of Portland extension division students.

This year's graduation list gives the names of 20 men and women who have done all or part of their university work in the extension division. Some of these have done much of their work in the Portland Center night classes and summer sessions, while some have added to their credits by correspondence courses from time to time.

The University of Oregon conducts the Portland School of Social Work on a full-time basis. This enables students of social work to put in the same number of hours in school as students on the campus at Eugene do in their regular courses there.

Among those of the teaching profession who will probably receive bachelor degrees in June, are: Roy E. Cannon, city superintendent of schools at Gresham, Oregon; W. A. Pettes, principal of the Peninsula grammar school, Portland; Rose Winkelman, teacher in the Sunnyside school; Alwina Bach, teacher in the Oakley Green school; Mathilde Veit, teacher in the Highland school; Ina B. Elmund, teacher in the Rose City school; Pearl B. Cavanaugh, teacher in the Hudson school, and Florence Taylor, all of Portland.

Swimming Classes Offered for Women In Summer Session

There will be no professional courses offered in any line by the women's branch of the school of physical education during the summer session. The swimming tank will be open during the entire six weeks and may be used by townspeople as well as students on the campus. Miss Gertrude Tucker, '25, who has been teaching at Cottage Grove this year, will have charge of the pool during the summer. She will conduct beginning and advanced swimming classes in addition to the purely recreational side. This department also plans to have charge of the usual hikes and excursions held during the week-ends of the session.

Basketball Wizard To Teach Here

DR. WALTER E. MEANWELL, noted University of Wisconsin mentor, who will offer course in basketball coaching.

Dr. W. Meanwell From Wisconsin To Coach Here

Noted Basketball Man To Give Two Weeks Course in Game

An extensive two-weeks course for high school and college basketball coaches will be given at the University summer session at Eugene by Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, head basketball coach at the University of Wisconsin. The course will begin July 5 and be completed July 17.

Meanwell is regarded as one of the outstanding basketball coaches in America. His record at Wisconsin shows that his teams have won 105 games and lost only 23, placing first eight times and never finishing below third in the conference.

Dr. Meanwell besides his athletic ability, has a degree of doctor of medicine from the University of Maryland, a degree of doctor of public health from the University of Wisconsin, a year of interne work and a year as hospital pathologist in the Maryland General Hospital, Baltimore. It is said that his knowledge of health and medicine are factors in his success in producing well-conditioned teams.

The pivot and short pass and the five-man defense style of play, which in its variations is the basis for most of modern basketball, were originated by Meanwell. His methods and technique have been widely spread by coaches who have attended his various summer courses since 1912. Meanwell shows a number of pupils who are in University basketball coaching positions. The following prominent coaches are Dr. Meanwell's ex-players: Olson of Ohio State University; Ruby, of Illinois; Williams, of Iowa; Levis, formerly of Indiana, now of Wisconsin; Bond, of Missouri; Chandler, of Iowa State College; and Tebell of North Carolina.

Medical School Charter Granted In 1877 to Group of Interested Men

In 1877 regents of the University granted a charter to a group of men who wished to establish a medical school in Portland for the purpose of giving Oregon pre-medics students higher training after completing their lower division requirements.

The medical department of Willamette university merged with the Oregon school in 1913 and the entire enrollment of that institution was transferred to Portland. The alumni of both schools are consolidated under the medical school of the University of Oregon, thus making it the only school of medicine in the Pacific northwest, reaching the largest territory in the United States served exclusively by one medical school.

Twenty acres of land on Marquam hill, overlooking the city, were deeded to the regents of the University in 1914 by the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation company as a site for the school of medicine and affiliated hospitals. Here the first unit of the medical group, made possible by appropriations by the state of $110,000 and $25,000 given by citizens of Port-

Instructors For Summer Are Active

Prominent Visitors Offer Varied Courses on Local Campus

Meanwell, Bentley and Whittlesey are Named

Many Regular Faculty Members to Remain

AN impressive list of visiting instructors for this year from various universities in the east, middle west, and Pacific coast has been announced by Prof. F. L. Stetson, director of the Eugene Summer Session. They will supplement the work offered by members of the regular faculty of the University of Oregon.

Popular interest is being shown in the courses offered by Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, head basketball coach at the University of Wisconsin. He will give an intensive two weeks course for high school and college basketball coaches.

Another prominent member of this summer's faculty will be Dr. Madison Bentley, who is head of the department of psychology at the University of Illinois, and president of the American Psychology association. The courses he will offer are a general survey of the field of psychology, and the main trends of psychology in the last quarter-century, and a seminar.

Three Courses in Sociology

Dr. F. H. Hankins, an eminent sociologist, will offer introductory and advanced courses in sociology. Dr. Hankins is at present lecturing at Smith College and at Amherst. His courses will be the study of society, theories of cultural evolution, and research problems in population and vital statistics.

Dr. E. M. Hulme, professor of history at Stanford, and one of the most popular instructors at the campus session last summer, has been engaged for work again this year. His courses will be civilization in the nineteenth century, the Italian renaissance, and a course in the graduate division.

Well known to the older alumni is Dr. Walter Whittlesey, a former student of the University of Oregon. Dr. Whittlesey will offer work in government and political theory. He is at present a member of the faculty of the political science department of Princeton University. His courses will be United States government and politics, modern political theory, and a study of the Declaration of Independence.

Illinois Instructor Here

Dr. C. V. Boyer, of the English department of the University of Illinois, will give work in literature here this summer. His courses are the industrial novel, social problems in early nineteenth century literature, and a course on Shakespearean tragedy.

A distinctive feature of this year's summer session will be the number (Continued on page three) land, was finished and occupied in the summer of 1919. This building is a three-story structure. The second unit, a four-story building, was completed in the summer of 1922. Appropriations by the state and the General Education board made the erection of this possible. An additional gift of $50,000 for equipment and maintenance was given by this board after the building was completed. The plant and equipment now embody all the modern standards in medical school construction.

Under the terms of the original gift, the regents of the University conveyed to Multnomah county seven acres upon the campus for the construction of a general charity hospital planned with particular attention to teaching facilities.

Extra clinics and wards are maintained for classes limited to nine students in the Good Samaritan hospital St. Vincent's hospital, Portland Surgical hospital, Emmanuel hospital, Portland Medical hospital, the Portland Sanitarium, Waverly Baby home, Albertina Kerr nursery, Salvation Army home and the State hospital for the insane.