First Session of The Star Chamber

OH, for the pen and the voice of a John Milton. If he were only here to compose a new Areopagitica concerning the most recent star chamber, that almighty and august body on the Oregon campus known as (speak it reverently) the Freshman Court, established by the student body.

Be it recorded that yesterday the lords met in first session to pass in judgment upon those freshman lepers who had outraged all righteousness by failing to wear green hats or by walking on the grass.

Picture the scene. Those mighty minds in all their dignity, justice written in the hard lines of their faces, looking neither to the right nor to the left, but gazing forward, ever forward, beyond all intimidation and untoward influences, seeking for the truth.

How solemn it must have been when the lord magistrates stood silently, their eyes heaven-bent, seeking the divine inspiration that would lead them to justice, praying that they might be led in the path of righteousness so that John Smith, freshman, accused of wearing a hat—a hat, mind you—be allotted no more and no fewer messages from the piddle than justice might demand for his heinous crime.

What an impressive scene, and how wonderfully it might have been described in the press, so that all the community might have sung paeans to the glory and honor of the court.

But alas! The defenders of tradition in their omniscient wisdom decreed that their words should not fall upon profane ears. Deserving those principles of free press which are written in the blood of martyrs, disregarding the words, just a bit less learned than their own, of the immortal John Milton, they denied, on separate occasions during the session, admittance to their council of two Emerald reporters.

In star chamber session the court convened. Safe from the unclean public gaze, secure from the spying agents of the corrupt press, they met in all the dignity befitting their offices, and determined, without fear or favor, the guilt of the freshman criminals, and the sentences commensurate with the enormity of their crimes.

Learned lords, we do not question your integrity, your honesty, your ability. Forgive us if we have offended your judicial dignity by our gaucherie. We are but men, sirs, and are given to outworn ideas.

In calling your attention to the words of Milton, lords, we do so not in an effort to cast doubt upon your wisdom, but rather to point out to you, sirs, and to your eternal glory, what a great dolt that Englishman must have been when he said:

"This I know, that errors in good government and in a bad are equally almost incident; for what magistrate may not be misinformed—"

Oh Milton, Milton. Oregon needs you now.

Frosh

 much in a little time. The squad was better outfitted than ever before and made a neat looking outfit in their green jerseys. Carol Williams proved to be an efficient manager and Don Parks was a true doc. Everyone co-operated to make the team the greatest frosh football team ever turned out at this institution.

Was Best Team

Never since the first freshman team came into existence back in 1919 has a team made a record that would compare with that of the class of 1930. Never was there a more well balanced team and there has never been better coaching. Never has such an array of football talent been forwarded to the varsity from a freshman team. Such men as Stadleman, Wood, Baldrige, Crooks, Temple, King, Warren, Pluss, Ricks, Hande, Sherrill, Harden, Murray, Stendle, Ireland, Minnaugh, Robinson, Coleman, Williams, Hatton, MacDowell, Gabriel, and others will be heard from in varsity circles during the next few years.

Gives Experience

The freshman team is the real school for future varsity material. This has been proved by this year's varsity. Carter, Johnson, Hodgen, Dixon, Sinclair, Kerns, Pope, Slau-son, Wetzell, Vitus, Jones, Woodie, Burnell, all first stringers, played on the frosh team their first year in school. On this team the player is instructed in the style of play used by the varsity, so next spring, when the call is issued for spring practice, Capt. McEwan will be able to take up where the freshman coaches left off.

TODAY'S WHEW'S WHEW

Professor Mustachio Mnsilage, eminent billiard shark and authority on Blimp eggs, was born in Naselville, Oregon, the year of the big onion crop, and has been crying about something ever since. At an early age showed great promise with the ladies but was sued for breach when he was ten years old. Had a great passion for spitting from bridges and spreading glue on hen roosts. Married Miss Ameealia Ravensbeak, daughter of the town crier, and had two boys who after they passed the crying age became christers, and then shysters. Taught grinoology and blasting in the University of Monte Carlo, where he finally became doorkeeper. Present address, 23 3/4 Hoghead Drive, City. Clubs: Javanese Juglers; Society for the Prevention of In-growing feet; Chi Psi.

Seven Seer

All-campus mythical backfield. After weeks of observation and hours of deliberation behind closed doors, the Seers announce their annual selection:

- Right half: Jack Seabrook
- Left half: Eef
- Full: Jack Jones
- Quarter: Ray Nash.

We believe we have here one of the most smashing backfield combinations of the year. In fact they have all smashed something.

Seabrook smashed a bottle of gin; Eef, a couple of ribs; Jones a few windows; and Nash holds the record for flunks in one quarter.

In Chicago the other day Queen Marie broke something intricate and intimate that had to do with the holding up of her dress. She got three inches of space in every metropolitan newspaper in the land. We know a man who broke his neck and all the publicity he received was a death notice on the 16th page.
