

Oregana to Hold Year's Last Drive Tuesday, Jan. 18

Business Staff Undergoes Slight Changes in Personnel

The second and last drive for Oregana subscriptions will be held on Tuesday of next week, lasting for that day only. The object of this drive will be to give opportunity to the students who for some reason or other were unable to subscribe when the drive given last term was held.

To date 1320 subscriptions have been received from active students and 240 from other sources, bringing the total number of subscriptions to 1560. There are approximately 1600 students in the University who have not subscribed.

The Oregana management plans to order only 1900 books, thus leaving but 340 unsold. With this number of books for 1600 students some will be unable to secure an Oregana unless they take advantage of this drive. "Additional books will not be ordered," said Jim Manning, business manager, "unless a sufficient number of subscriptions are received at this drive to warrant it." Students who want the Oregana are urged to subscribe during this drive as it will be impossible for them to get the books when they are ready for delivery next spring.

Booths will be located on the campus to take care of the unaffiliated students and representatives in the houses will take care of the organizations. Further details on the drive will be published later in the Emerald.

The contract for the printing of the year-book was let last week to Koke-Chapman, local printers.

Jim Manning has announced that the business staff of the Oregana has undergone slight changes. Paul Sletton who has been in charge of circulation will now handle the Portland advertising also. Milton George will handle the foreign advertising and also will have charge of the advertising section. Bill Hynd will handle Eugene advertising and advertising copy and Tom Stoddard will continue to act as assistant circulation manager.

U. H. S. Basketeers Will Have Two Hard Tilts in Succession

The University high school basketball quintet plays its first district game tonight at Cottage Grove, and tomorrow will meet its second opponent for the district title when it plays Roseburg as a preliminary to the Oregon-Willamette game in the new varsity pavilion.

The team is getting well under way with its work, according to Coach Frank Reinhart, and has been showing up good in its recent practices. The Roseburg game promises to be hotly contested, that team is this year being coached by Howard Turner, who assisted in basketball at O. A. C. last year. The local team, however, was undefeated in its holiday tour of Coos county, and its only defeat of the season, so far, was met at Salem last Friday.

C. Smith, who was out of the lineup in the Salem game due to illness, will be back in his position as center for the two games this weekend, and Libby and Page will retain their places as forwards, with Moore and Stevens at guard.

Stairs of Villard Hall Will be Preserved

"ALL things come to him who waits, and hustles while he waits," and there is no doubt but that the professors exiled in the second-floor offices of Villard have waited and hustled, both up and down stairs. And now has come their reward in the form of an extension telephone.

In order to call the professors on the second floor, those on the first had to climb the stairs and pass through the assembly, in spite of occasional classes there, or climb the fire escape, and then go back the same way. We fail to see that it wouldn't have been quicker to climb down the ivy, or toboggan down the drain pipes. Except for Prof. Howe, who conscientiously did his duty, the faculty became weary of well-doing, and let the 'phone jangle. It became nearly impossible to reach Villard by telephone. A buzzer system of mysterious intricacy had been concocted, but it soon evaporated.

The only way for the University to get its money's worth out of the instrument already installed was to put in an extension, and save the wear and tear on the stairways, so they started the New Year with a resolution and a new telephone.

Conklin's Book on Abnormal Psychology Accepted by Holts

Dr. Edmund S. Conklin, head of the psychology department, has received word that his book Abnormal Psychology has been accepted by Henry Holt and Company of New York. He has corrected the copy and will return it this week. The publishers expect to have the book on the market before the University closes this spring so that it can be advertised to the faculty.

Although the actual writing did not begin until the summer of 1924, Dr. Conklin has been accumulating material for his book for fifteen years. He wrote the book to fulfill the long-felt need for such a text, he explains. The material will cover the character of the insane, border line hysteria, obsession, compulsions, multiple personality, hypnosis, dreams, mental effects of drugs, feeble mindedness, and genius, Dr. Conklin said. The book covers the work Dr. Conklin gives in class. It is written for advanced students in psychology who have a basic knowledge of their subject, explains the writer. No practical experiments are given, nor does it include any points previously touched in his writings, he declared.

Library Door Built While Students Read

Just becoming accustomed again this term to the noise of the swinging door, loud voices outside the building, and the never-ceasing footsteps, students in the lower part of the old library had a new noise to disregard yesterday when carpenters were making improvements on the building.

A new, still unpainted door, has replaced one of the old ones, and heavy green linoleum has been laid behind the circulation desk. Campus carpenters made all the changes yesterday afternoon.

Art Department Make Plans for Memorial Funds

Students of League to Hold Banquet on Monday, Day of Critique

At the meeting of the Allied Arts League yesterday afternoon business concerning the approaching Critique and tentative plans for raising funds to contribute to the erection of the Fine Arts Memorial were topics of special interest.

Concerning the Critique, which is scheduled for January 20, Abbott Lawrence, president of the League, appointed various committees to take charge of the affair. Those who will be represented are: banquet, George Wardner, chairman, Clarence Lidberg, music, Frank Roehr, chairman, Merlin Drury, Carl Heilborn, stunts, Beatrice Towers; tea, Edith Bain.

The ticket sale for the banquet will open Monday and it is hoped that all students of the department will show their interest by buying them. The banquet is set for 6:30 on the night of the Critique. The principal speakers will be announced later. It is the boast of the department that these banquets are among the most entertaining and successful social affairs held on the campus. The price of the tickets will be fifty cents.

Invitations designed by John Walquist, instructor in the school of architecture who has taken the place of Walter Church, have been sent out to those people who will compose the jury. They are printed in blue and are made by the wood block method.

As for the schemes for raising money for the Fine Arts fund which is being handled by Mrs. George T. Gerlinger, they are but hopes as yet. Nothing has been definitely planned but various ideas are being considered as possible and appropriate.

An Oregon Knight Comes to the Rescue

THEY wear hats, and they wear gloves! If you want to be taken for a "prepper," girls, you'd better wear both.

One co-ed did and the result was: "Have you signed a card yet?"

"Oregon Knight! Get a Kappa! Sign please. S. A. E." were the cries which broke the three hours of waiting, with nothing for watcher to look at but bare-headed collegians.

One fellow, almost in tears when reached by a faithful guide, shook hands with his deliverer violently and insisted on carrying his own suitcase.

The collegian University high student, merely smiled his superiority and remarked that he was "staying at home."

But it's a life and death matter to some, and they grasp the little red, blue, and green badges as the first signs of safety.

means by which a fund might be created.

A fine arts benefit has been considered which would be sponsored as an all-campus dance. Whether it will be given has not been decided; it is merely an idea to be investigated, stated Lawrence. Other ideas which might have been advanced suggest Wednesday night dances given occasionally throughout the term for those students in the department. Small admission fees will be charged which will not be so much that they will keep the students away and yet sufficient to swell the fund considerably.

Aside from these tentative plans the school has several other ideas which are not completely formulated. The school has not pledged any given amount to the cause but will endeavor to raise an admirable sum.

Portland Extension Reveals Friendly Spirit

A friendly and social spirit is growing among students registered in the University of Oregon extension division in Portland, because of the social and departmental clubs which have been organized. These clubs meet regularly and several plan to hold their annual banquets this term.

Last term when President Arnold Bennett Hall addressed the students was the first time they ever met together. The convocation was held in the municipal auditorium.

The public speaking department sponsors an expression club which has an annual banquet and an annual frolic. The banquet is scheduled for this term.

uled for this term. Every fourth Saturday the graduate club has a dinner and meeting.

Students in the advanced short story class have a writing club which holds an annual banquet. This will also be given this term. The Latin students meet socially regularly, and the sculpture club meets informally each month. Students in the Portland school of social work have an organization which meets for dinners and sponsors lectures. In addition to these clubs which unify the spirit there is the Portland Center Star, published three times each term.
