Students at Indiana are paying now for a "moment of froth":

In order to repay for the damage done following the "pep" session before a recent game, each student of this university will have to pay 25 cents, according to a decision of more than 50 students representing both organized and unorganized groups. The damage to the university is estimated at about $800.

In the eyes of the law of the state of Illinois, incorporated fraternities at this university are manufacturing establishments

According to notice received by Frederick Green, professor in the college of law, all incorporated fraternities who color oleomargarine for table are liable to a tax of 10 cents a pound, and an annual license fee of $600.

Professor Frank Kleiberger, head of the men's physical education department of the University of California, has spent almost 11 years gathering data on the physical prowess of the "average" college man. From study of 6000 men in the university, he found the average college man to be up to the following specifications:

The average man should be 5 feet, 9 inches in his stocking feet. He should be able to do each of the following:

Run the 100-yard dash in 12.5 seconds.

Broad jump in tennis shoes a distance of 196 inches.

Hand or fence vault 56 inches.

Scale a 12-foot wall in 11 seconds.

Dive head first over an obstacle 41 inches high.

Swim 25 yards free style in 16 1/2 seconds.

Swim at least 125 yards without stopping to float.

Carry another person through the water with any rescue hold for 12 1/2 yards.

Have command of at least four swimming strokes.

Make at least one good dive.

Defend himself creditably in boxing and wrestling.

In South Dakota the tax on cigarettes is used only for erecting buildings at the universities and colleges of the state. Several have been built solely by this tax.

Women who live out of town must have special permission to drive home after a dance at the University of Kansas.

A girls' college in Germany has decided that the study of biology is incompatible with maiden modesty.

For forty-two years, with the exception of 1898 and 1899, the Almy family of Lincoln, Nebraska, has been represented at the University of Nebraska. During that time the three sons and twelve grandchildren have attended, six of them making Phi Beta Kappa, and five Sigma Chi. Four took their master's degree at the Cornhusker institution.

Some have strange roommates at the University of Wisconsin. A small American monkey has his abode with Kerbert B. Earle at the Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity house and six snakes share the room of Leonard Wilson in a dormitory.

The student council at the University of Toledo has adopted a set of parking rules for the campus.

This is "The Gold Rush," according to the University of California Daily Californian:

THE GOLD RUSH (Rime of Rush Week) Across the plains, in forty-nine, The pioneers, I'm told, Set out in covered wagons on A frantic rush for gold.

But nowadays, the rushing act Is not a bit less bold; And still, as in that distant time,

The quest is after gold. Many were the pitfalls set To thwart the pioneers; Indians, wolves, and bandits bad Caused them keenest fears. But the rushers of today Are still the prey of Fate, For robbers wearing other pins Quite fiercely lie in wait. The covered wagons, long ago, Were anything but grand; While nowadays the rushers ride In papa's new sedan. The gold of forty-nine was got With honest pick and shovel; Today the best procedure is— Get on your knees and grovel!

The following rules were recently posted by the faculty of a small college in Kansas for the regulation of student morals:

"No dresses shall be worn to college which are shorter than six inches below the knee. Use or possession of lip-sticks or rouge on school campus is prohibited.

"No slang phrases or immodest language shall be employed. Wearing of belts by boys is prohibited, their use to be supplanted by suspenders."

AUSTIN, TEXAS, Jan. 26—For the purpose of providing a center for the activities of advanced students in Spanish at the University of Texas during the next summer session, a Spanish house for women students will be conducted, according to an announcement by Dr. E. R. Sims, professor of romance languages here.

The O. A. C. Barometer is proud of the school's homely courses, as witness the following write up:

A new Simplex churn, recently acquired by the dairy department, churned its first 150 gallon batch of cream into butter, Saturday morning.

The dairy department is at present producing approximately 2000 pounds of the best grade butter a week. O. A. C. butter supplies two of the state hospitals, some is sent to San Francisco and the rest is disposed of locally. The department retails about 400 quarts of milk a week and also enough cottage cheese to fill local retail requirements. The ice cream business amounts to more than 100 gallons a week.

(Continued from page one) has built up a very extensive private collection. For the last several years she has been associated with Leland Stanford University as curator of mollusks.

In 1924 she published a number of articles including a very important paper entitled "American Shells of the West Coast of America." In it she described a large number of west coast shells that make the book very valuable to students of American marine life.

Collection of Value This collection which has been procured represents typical forms which she has described in her book. Dr. Packard believes that this will enable the students more easily to identify our west coast forms which are found on the Oregon coast, therefore it will be of research value in determining new forms.

This is by far the most valuable collection of recent shells which the department has, says Dr. Packard, who expresses the hope that it will be a nucleus for a more adequate collection of recent mollusks.

"Although this collection was purchased," explained Professor Packard, "occasionally private collections are presented to the University, where they can be most profitably used."

Competition in Girl's Basketball Brings on New Rating Schemes

Girls' basketball practice is going forward at a brisk pace, and the process of the selection of the teams has started, said Miss Shelly, head of the sport.

The coach, the head of the sport, and the class manager is to make a similar and individual rating sheet, on which all the girls out for any one position in one class are rated in sequence. An attempt will be made to see them play with the other girls on the list, and to reclassify them at least five times between now and when the plays start. That will make fifteen ratings for each girl. The girls may see the rating sheets at any time so they may know how they stand. On Thursday, from 4:05 to 4:40
