

Oregon Frosh To Meet Rooks In First Game

Contest Precedes Varsity Squabble Tonight at Corvallis

Flu Epidemic Weakens Personnel of Squad

The University of Oregon freshman basketball team will play the O. A. C. rooks tonight at Corvallis. This contest will be held a preliminary to the O. A. C.-Oregon mix. The frosh have been playing pretty ragged ball most of the season, but last Saturday "Spike" Leslie got a scoring and checking combination worked out and defeated the Columbia university of Portland hoopsters 12 to 11.

In some ways the yearlings have been handicapped this week. Roland Coleman, heavy duty guard, has been sick with the flu but was able to turn out for a light workout last night.

Rooks Appear Strong
The rooks have a very strong lineup this year. They have won all their games this season with the exception of one game dropped to the Salem high school hoopsters, who were state interscholastic champions last season.

Coach Leslie thinks that his charges will have to play better ball than they usually do to take the rooks' measure, but he hopes that they will come through all right.

During the past week Leslie has been putting the yearlings through an intensive drill on a short passing offensive and a close checking defensive.

Tonight's Line-up Given
The probable line-up for tonight's game is Clarke, forward; Robie, forward; Potts, center; Chastain, guard; Coleman, guard.

Ed Cheney, who has been sick during the past week, may be used in a guard position if he is absolutely needed.

The second game of the four game series will be played in McArthur court Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Assembly

One of the natives came into his office one day and noticed a picture on the wall, "The Horse Fair," which he seemed to like very much. The picture was in colors and its brightness attracted the man. The doctor gave it to him, and when at a later date he visited the man in his home, he was much surprised to find the picture hanging on the wall upside down.

Labrador Furs Valuable
The Labrador country affords some of the world's most valuable furs, consisting of beaver, otter, sable, muskrat, fox, ermine, mink, white and black bear, Dr. Grenfell said.

My great problem was to bring help to these people, he said. People died in great numbers on board the ships during the fishing cruises. Rickets and scurvy were dread diseases, until the cure was found to be in a diet of green plant food.

In speaking of the opportunities for service in the work of Labrador, Dr. Grenfell told of the work being done by Eastern colleges in the United States. Several years ago he spoke at Harvard college and the men there asked what help they could give. Dr. Grenfell asked them if they would equip a boat and during the summer months sail along the coasts of Labrador gathering up sick people. The plan was carried out and many other eastern colleges as well as people from the west have joined relief groups and at their own expense, have worked among the people in Labrador doing for them the simple things known to us in everyday life.

Joy of Service Realized
The testimony of these boys and girls of wealth, said the speaker, is that the joys of life do not lie in the material things, but in the ability to use material things as a help in accomplishing something worth while.

"I would rather live among the Vikings in the North than lead a life of ease in the South Seas," he asserted. "The youth of the world grows more chivalrous. If it were not for the contributions made by the eastern universities some of the work in Labrador could not be carried on. The nurses who form the personnel of the relief stations which are situated between the hospitals along the coasts are doing a wonderful work. They are the nurses who wish for harder and more stimulating work than they could obtain elsewhere."

Faith has been developed through the lessons taught by the experience in Labrador, said Dr. Grenfell, who believes that all things must be accepted on faith. "There is very little that we can be intellectually certain about," he said. "Science changes theory continually." The man who has faith sees the challenge of the Christ in the world. Believing that, "it seems the justification of a man standing before a university group and saying he believes God Almighty challenges each of you to go out into the world to make it better. It makes no difference where you serve. Mrs. Wiggs in her cabbage patch had as much chance to serve humanity as though she were at the North Pole or the Gobi desert.

"If you want the best life has to offer you, don't think it lies in soft things. The best life lies in giving everything you have, even if it means the loss of life."

Dr. Smith Introduces Dr. Grenfell
Dr. Warren D. Smith, of the geology department, introduced the speaker. The works of man are of the greatest interest to people, he said, in speaking of the work Dr. Grenfell has done as an explorer, medical missionary, and author.

He comes from that part of the continent which is interesting to geologists as a collecting ground of glaciers, which have come into our own land changing conditions of life here, said Dr. Smith.

Mrs. Edith Ernst Hopkins, who is a native of Nova Scotia and whose father sent supplies to Dr. Grenfell from Halifax when the missionary was in Labrador, sang "Ah! Sad Indeed My Heart," by Tchaikowski.

Dean Straub, dean emeritus of men, who presided at assembly, in an announcement at the close of the lecture, asked all who were interested in the Grenfell Association of America, Inc., to subscribe for membership in the organization which promotes the work of Dr. Grenfell.
