IN A world, confessedly so opulent in what is old, the work, even of genius, must necessarily consist very much in criticism.—Walter Pater.

Summum Cum Laude

BBETTER news or more important never came out of a faculty meeting than that which last night announced the adoption of the junior college and honors college proposals.

The faculty, in giving its assent to plans that will eventually mean almost complete reconstruction of the University's educational system, has placed the institution in a position to do its work far better than has heretofore been possible. Immediate institution of all details of the plans offered by the colloquium and special committees cannot be expected. Neither must it be assumed that the machinery will work smoothly at once. Administrative details will need adjustment and experimentation will be necessary before the hopes of the supporters of the measures may be fully realized. All this will take time, but the first and most important step has been taken, and we are optimistic enough to believe that the whole plan will eventually be perfected.

Under the new arrangements, which are more fully explained in the news columns of the Emerald, the registrants will be divided so as to make it possible for those of serious intent to do genuine work without the hindrance of their fellows whose interest in attending the University is purely superficial. This latter group will be discouraged from going on beyond the first two junior college years, which will be devoted to work in the liberal arts and a rounding out of the high school education.

Those who remain will be granted every opportunity to follow their own educational bent within broadly-defined limits, making routine matters of least importance and real university work the major concern. The superior student especially will benefit by being permitted to pretty much organize his own education through a greater amount of freedom than is now possible.

The whole system is intended to give greater opportunity to the serious-minded student. It will go hardest against the "pupil" who comes to the university for the college label only. As now planned

Communications

For or Against?

To the Editor:
Glory be! I'm afraid that people are worrying and fretting so much about this fifty cent ($0.50) tax, that they will forget what they are paying it for. Surely, you would not put money, such a mere trifle, before the glory of Oregon's victories and the big heartedness of the west, to say nothing of the "big butter and egg man" that we are supposed to represent. What's the matter with Oregon students? Don't they think the games are going to be worth the price of admission? Early to bed those three big nights is good advice to them, so they will be sure not to spend that fifty cents elsewhere.

Why not turn the tables and imagine that Oregon was going to California to play. With three games in succession and the danger of accidents, illnesses, the customary needs for substitutes, I imagine 21 men would look pretty good, and I don't suppose that Oregon would mind having their expenses cared for, said expense being around $100 per man. Would it help their spirits and hopes to have California crabbing even the "pupil" the opportunity to mend his ways if he so desires. The serious student of average ability and the superior student will both be in a position to benefit far more from the University by the division according to abilities and interests than is possible under the present system that indiscriminately throws the students into a single class.

The faculty, in giving ear to agitation for reform begun by the students themselves, has shown itself willing to permit the participation of the student in his own education. Such a policy must eventually be recognized as essential to the progress of the universities.

Your Name, If You Please

AS EVIDENCE of good faith on the part of the writer, it is necessary that signatures accompany all communications addressed to the Emerald. Any name de plume the communicant desires will be used in print. Authors of communications need not fear that their identity will be divulged.

Failure to follow this rule will explain to several students why their communications have not been published. This is the only ground on which the Emerald will deny publication.

If the authors of the letters that are being held make their identity known to the editor, their contributions will be used.

And by the way, limit your remarks to 300 words. If you don't, the editor will.

Be on Your Best Behavior

TOMORROW and Saturday we have with us the gentlemen of the press, who forget the "refreshing ignorance displayed by the worthy contemporary" long enough to meet in annual convocation on the University campus.

Since the home-town editor is likely to be among the visitors it might be the better part of valor to be on good behavior during the week-end. Or better still, call on Mr. Editor, who usually counts his contact with the students one of the most enjoyable features of the conference, and tell him of the fine record you are making at the University. This information is always good for an item in the home paper, and what could be better soothing syrup for the folks at home?

bing because they had to pay to see the game. Why not get behind the team, your team, Oregon men and women, which seems to be rather in need of support, instead of jabbering like a bunch of village store cronies. If you don't spend it for Swede, Okie and Jerry, you probably will for "Sally, Irene and Mary."

personal records, should enable university authorities to predict with a fair degree of certainty the student's fitness for the honor status. This procedure will be used to determine qualified students specially suited for various types of honor work or for sectioning on the basis of ability in upper division courses. It has been decided more advisable to grant honor status and privileges only to students who have attained the junior year and not before. At Knox, Smith, Swarthmore and Columbia, where experiments have been most extensively tried, honor status is accorded only when students are definitely promoted to upper division work.

Close has consented to come only on condition that his admission be paid in full, so a drive is being conducted among Eugene fruit growers to raise the necessary funds.

WHY NOT CALL IT OREGON'S BASKETBALL TURN-A-MINT? Building Fund Gets Promise of Support

Letters have been sent to all the organizations on the campus, and to various groups in the state, asking for contributions to Fine Arts building fund. Mrs. G. T. Gerlinger, who has charge of the campaign, reports that $100,000 is in sight. The first unit of the building will cost $160,000. Eighty members of the committee of 1000 have been secured. Each member of this committee gives $100. All pledges are payable within two years. Benefit teas are also given to raise funds.

Theaters

HEILIG: Today: Regular Association vaudeville program. Fifty performing birds that sing, dance, talk, give imitations and do acrobatics, a dog and two cats, will be introduced in the Bird Cabaret, a new and novel vaudeville act. The gorgeously plumed and gayly colored cockatoos, parrots and macaws will present a beautiful appearance. Two comedies Jack DeBell and Harry Vine, headline the bill with a clever combination of funny chatter and a few songs.

Friday and Saturday: "Tin Hats," the famous war comedy everyone has been waiting for. This film is based upon the recent world war but without actual combat scenes. It is a riotous yarn about three American doughboys, who, through no fault of their own, find themselves in Germany immediately after the armistice has been signed, and in command of a village. This strange trio is composed of a rich man's son, a former gangster, and a roly-poly German-American boy.

COLONIAL: Last day today: "The Great Deception," with Ben Lyon and Aileen Pringle. Coming tomorrow, "The Last Frontier," an epic romance of the plains.

REX: Last day: "Rubber Tires," an epic of the modern "Covered Wagon," 4-wheels, no engine and 60 smiles to the gallon, combined into a grand explosion of laughter, with Harrison Ford (he was "The Nervous Wreck," you know) Bessie Love, May Robson and a great cast; clever "Snooky" comedy and John Clifton Ennel's musical accompaniment.

Coming—Tom Tyler in "Lightning Lariats," a western comedy drama, filled to the brim with laughing thrills.

McDONALD: Last day: "The Night of Love," a gorgeous drama of love and daring adventure, with the screen's greatest lovers, Ron-

Dates Set for Staging Of Guild Theater Play

April Fool's day is meant for fun, so what could be better than to have a snappy comedy to top the day's revelry. "Torch Bearers," the three-act comedy by George Kelly, was scheduled for production March 3 and 4, but due to the fact that the Pacific coast championship basketball games will be held March 3, 4, and 5, it is necessary to postpone the play until March 31 and April 1.

Shall We Stop and Rest?
After a day chuck full of classes and hurry and work you will find your old peace of mind restored if you stop at the Anchorage on your way home. It is only a step from the campus. You can get a salad there or a cooling punch and eat them slowly in comfort while you watch the race and the clouds and dream yourself away.
If you want to discuss some question that has come up, you may all gather at a large table and go about it in a lazy way. If you are walking home from class with a girl, your acquaintance will take a two weeks jump in a day if you stop with her at the Anchorage for tea. The Anchorage is handy for everyone and will help you through the day.
