

Hugh Black Will Speak on Campus Wednesday Night

Educator Said to Be Most Popular on College Platforms Today

Hugh Black, one of the most popular speakers on the college platform for twenty-one years, will be the fourth and last speaker on the Student Lecture Series for this year. He will speak Wednesday night, April 20, in Villard hall.

Those who have heard Dr. Black speak are enthusiastic in his praise. He comes to Eugene for one of his two engagements on the Pacific coast. His other appointment is with Stanford university where he will address the student body on the Student Lecture Series there. Following his address in Palo Alto he will return to New York City.

Dr. Black has been associated with the faculty of Union Seminary in New York ever since 1906.

Professor Charles E. Carpenter of the University law school was at Harvard when Dr. Black first came to New York from Scotland, his home. He was invited to speak at Harvard university and was the most popular speaker of the year, and has been invited to return as a speaker every year since then. During Professor Carpenter's years at Harvard, he claims that there was no speaker to equal Dr. Black and only two others who compared with him.

The university faculty committee on religious life was instrumental in bringing Dr. Black to the campus. It is the opinion of several faculty members that he is the most intense and magnetic speaker on the platform today.

he saw the rock which was being carved in the studio of the artist. He asked the artist where he obtained such a beautiful rock and the artist replied triumphantly that it was the same one they had seen along the road several months before.

The trend of modern educational policies is "to unite the modern cold, scientific attitude with the 'petticoat pedagogy' of the 'I think,' and 'my opinion is' type. Educational needs should be studied," said Dr. Fowlkes, "and you should require an accounting of what the money spent on education is bringing in return."

In discussing the final virtue, religion, Dr. Fowlkes said that it is the tool for reaching the divine. Religion is not a synonym for denominationalism. It makes no difference whether or not you believe in a particular creed, but it is necessary that you think through the matter of the existence of God and that you formulate your lives in accordance with the spiritual side of life.

At the opening of the assembly the Reverend E. V. Stivers gave the invocation. Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, president of the University, introduced the speaker. Dean John Straub, dean emeritus of men, presided. The assembly was closed with the singing of the Oregon Pledge Song.

remarked that the affirmative rather exaggerated in stating that modification has failed wherever tried, since it has never been in effect through a government dispensary system.

Durgan, in the negative rebuttal speech, said that although, as the affirmative pointed out, arrests had increased up to 1924, they had decreased again up to 1926. He said also that congress is a measure of public opinion, which even the affirmative admitted, and that Congress is as dry as ever.

The last rebuttal speaker, Reed, concluded the affair with the statement that the decrease quoted by the negative was taking from federal statistics, not from state and local authorities; and most of the work is carried on by state and local authorities, whose arrests increase every year. "Prohibition has not brought about temperance, but an army of bootleggers, disrespect for law, home-brewing, and demoralizing results," he said in conclusion.

Judges of the contest were Professor Shepherd, public speaking instructor at O. A. C., W. C. Palmer, Portland attorney, and David J. Jones, superintendent of public instruction in Eugene.
