

Godfrey Heads Sportswriters' Group for Year

Wilderman, Pangborn and Cook Are Other Men Elected for '28

Richard L. Godfrey, junior in the University, was elected president of the University of Oregon Sports-writers' association for the coming year.

Ward Cook, Seattle P-I correspondent, was elected vice-president; Arden X. Pangborn, Oregonian sports correspondent, and assistant director of A. S. U. O. publicity, was chosen secretary.

The Sportswriters' association was organized on the campus in 1924, for the purpose of co-operation between campus sports writers and athletic coaches.

A unanimous recommendation was made by the sports writers who met yesterday at a luncheon at the College Side Inn, favoring the adoption of tennis as a major sport in the University.

Henry Neer, who is playing his first year of varsity tennis as number one man on the squad, stated Wilderman, "will undoubtedly be the finest singles player on the coast next year, and should have a bearing on putting the sport in the upper rank."

Sports writers who have visited the campus during the past year, and have been guests of the Sports-writers' association number some of the most prominent writers on the coast, or throughout the country, said Wilderman.

Those who have been here are: "Briek" Morse, San Francisco Call; Franklin D. Morse, San Francisco Chronicle; Abe Kemp, San Francisco Examiner; Harry Grayson, sports editor, Los Angeles Record; Bill Gregory, sporting editor, Portland Oregonian; George Bertz, sports editor, Journal; Larry Smyth, Journal; Lou Kennedy, sports writer, and Duane Hennessy, Telegram; Billy Stepp, sports editor, Portland News; Tom Shea, city editor of News; Don Skene, dramatic critic and sports writer, of Portland Oregonian, and James McCool, also of the Oregonian sports staff.

Communications

(Continued from page two) doctors, statesmen. And success is always to be measured by the salary received by the said party. Whenever we start in we must aim only for the top.

Big jobs are pitifully few for the number of optimistic aspirants that are seeking training for these successful positions. Nevertheless the colleges plan courses to meet the keen rivalries out in world beyond the campus. The college says for instance, "here have some out of this bottle, this will put kick into and enable you to stage a knock-out blow with your rival."

After graduation the student, equipped with precious theories and undimmed optimism, gained by considerable mental labor, attempts to compete against a young man who has spent his time learning by practical experience plus such aid in special education as the cooperation he has worked for has been good enough to give him, or permit him to obtain. Perhaps his rival is only another college boy who has been blessed with a keener mind. The result is similar in either case. He fails and he or his parents cast the blame on the university.

The public and the institutions of higher learning are equally responsible for this disillusionment. The public has demanded a service it is impossible to render and the college has presumed to fill it without protest.

Another important, and not so obvious a cause, for criticism, and one probably conditioned by the public attitude toward the purpose of higher learning, is that colleges encourage shallow thinking.

It is said with some pride, that Oregon students do more reading per student than those in any other educational institution in the United States outside of Amherst college. Long reading assignments are given, students are encouraged to skim over contents, with the result that the thoughts of the authors are imperfectly understood, if at all.

John Ruskin says that "one might read all the books in the British Museum (if you could live long enough) and still remain an utterly illiterate, uneducated person; but if one read with real accuracy the pages of one good book, one would become forever in some measure an educated individual."

One must understand thoroughly the author's view-point and his purpose in writing the book, as well as the ideas advanced if he is to gain any real knowledge of the book. These ideas must be criticized and evaluated from the students view-point before they can be of any service to him in his life's work, in meeting the problems of every day. This is hardly possible during the skimming process.

When books and manuscripts, prepared with care as to their accuracy, are culled and scanned through for some colorful ideas or expressions, or to get a superficial idea of the writers purpose the result is likely to be "words, only words."

This hodge podge reading in college is having two results: It causes students to cover honored institutions, (which no doubt merit severe criticism at times,) with thoughtless ridicule, or to meet every situation in life with spacious platitudes and generalizations, because the mind is not trained to deeper thought.

Alma Lawrence and Kathleen Powell to Give Recital Tonight

The fourth of a series of student recitals given this term largely by graduating students of the school of music will be heard this evening at 8 o'clock in the school of music auditorium when Alma Lawrence, pianist, and Kathleen Powell, contralto, present a joint program.

Alma Lawrence is graduating this year from the school of music, and her playing has taken a prominent place in student musical activities on the campus. In her sophomore year she won the scholarship offered by Mu Phi Epsilon, national musical honorary for women, and is now a member of the organization.

She is studying at present with Mrs. Jane Thacher, instructor of piano in the school of music, and she has gained especial prominence through her accompanying work on the campus. She has already accepted a position for next year at Myrtle Point where she will teach music. According to Mrs. Thacher, Miss Lawrence plays with a nice, crisp tone, and shows a great deal of finger facility and musical sense.

Kathleen Powell's voice has already won considerable applause and prominence for her on the campus, even though she is a freshman this year. She is a Eugene girl, and as a representative of Eugene high school last year at the state high school music contest staged by Pacific university at Forest Grove, she won the first prize offered the alto singers of the state high schools.

She is a member of the glee club, and recently appeared as the prima donna of the Junior Vaudeville. She has also done solo work in assembly during the year.

The program for tonight's recital follows:

- I. (a) The Swan Grieg (b) Who is Sylvia Schubert (c) Dost Thou Know That Fair Land (from "Mignon"), Thomas Kathleen Powell

- II. (a) Spinning Song, Mendelssohn (b) Prelude in G Chopin (c) Prelude in F Minor, Chopin (d) Waltz in E Minor, Chopin Alma Lawrence

Heavy Smokers Surpass Others In Scholarship

Men's Hall, Representative Group, Affords Key For Statistics

The heaviest smokers surpass the moderate and the non-smokers in scholastic standing.

Thus stands the result of the investigation of Robert H. Lemon, sophomore in the school of business administration, of the correlation of the use of tobacco and the scholastic average of the students on the campus. The study is confined to students living in Friendly hall, which, according to Mr. Lemon, is taken to be representative of the campus, having characteristics of both fraternities and independents, and being neither.

The scholastic average of the heavy smokers is 49.67. Non-smokers average higher than smokers, being 45.62 against 36.86, but these averages did not come up to that of the heaviest smokers. High point among non-smokers is 66; lowest 10. Among the heavy smokers 70 is high and 35 low. Moderates average from 34.50 to 32.

The grades were secured from the list sent out by the registrar of the University for the winter term 1926-27.

Out of 68 men in Friendly hall only 26 are smokers. Those using less than a half a package a week were considered non-smokers. The heavies consume five or more packages of cigarettes a week. The use of tobacco in other forms was found to be negligible.

These figures, says Mr. Lemon, do not prove that smoking causes low grades or that more smoking will raise grades. They show, however, that in this very representative group, lower grades and moderate smoking go hand in hand and that the heaviest smokers have better grades on the average than do the moderate smokers.

The information was gathered by direct questioning.
