

House Managers To Reap Benefits Of New Course

Personal Finance Gives Investing, Budgeting; Folts in Charge

Manufacturing Features Schedule Change

House managers who have difficulty in managing their affairs may next year receive the benefits of a course designed for them in the school of business administration, according to Dean E. C. Robbins. It will teach the managers to run their houses on a business-like basis, he said, and it will cover the general principles of purchasing, control of funds, and budgeting. It will be taught during the fall term by Professor A. L. Lomax.

The house manager course is one of several service courses open to non-major students which will be offered in the school of business administration next year, Dean Robbins said. Another innovation will be a course in personal finance taught by Professor F. E. Folts. This will teach the student to balance his income and expenditures. It will also include the elementary principles of investing and budgeting.

Advertising Courses Offered

The statistics course will be expanded and opened to all students with an upper division standing, according to Dean Robbins. It will give the students a practical understanding of the compilation and use of statistics. Several courses in advertising will be given by Professor W. F. G. Thacher.

"Next year all text and laboratory material used in freshman accounting will be prepared in the department," Dean Robbins said. "We have tried this system in test sessions this year, and the reaction has been very favorable from both the instructors and students."

Students Given Privileges

"Students who have shown that they can use their brains will be allowed to use the adding and calculating machines," Dean Robbins continued. "In some courses a knowledge of the use of calculating machines will be required. During the summer the laboratory will be enlarged to make room for more machines."

Several new courses in manufacturing will be given by Mr. Lomax, who is now studying manufacturing in the Wharton school of commerce of the University of Pennsylvania.

William Fowler will do research next year on the position of the port of Portland in foreign trade, Dean Robbins said. This research will be made under the auspices of the school of business administration and the Portland Chamber of Commerce. Reports will be issued in the form of bulletins from time to time.

Godfrey Writes Of Pan-Pacific Meet in Hawaii

Former Student Acts as University Delegate At Conference

A complete report of the Pan-Pacific conference, as written for the New York Times by George H. Godfrey, was received from Hilo, Hawaii, by Karl W. Onthank recently.

Mr. Godfrey, a former student at Oregon and reporter for the Eugene Guard, served as a delegate from the University, the Hilo Chamber of Commerce, the Christian Science Monitor, and the New York Times to the Pan-Pacific conference held last April on education, reclamation, and recreation. His wife, Mrs. Augusta (DeWitt) Godfrey, has a sister, Anna DeWitt, at the present time in employment at the registrar's office and the report was forwarded as a token of interest in the work of the University.

"The meetings were intensely interesting," said Mr. Godfrey, "and as a member of the committee of arrangement for the post-conference tour of the islands by the delegates, I became acquainted with most of them, including Secretary Work, Mr. Tigert, Mr. Mather and others."

The interchange of educational ideas through the exchange of educators was encouraged as part of the program to be followed by the various countries represented. Vocational studies in the lower grades were pleaded for by the delegates and a suggestion was made that Japanese and Chinese be included in studies for college credit.

Reclamatory programs favored the government ownership of all reclamation projects, and the conservation group suggested that the governments encourage the building of national parks and conservation of plant, animal, and bird life.

All the numerous delegates discussed the current situation of their country and then tried to apply a common remedy that would function in each country. At the final session, resolutions were passed thanking the president of the United States for calling the session. It was declared desirable to promote the interchange of educational ideas and the establishment of educational centers of information through such mediums as special courses by selected university professors, the broadcasting of educational bulletins, and individual effort and initiative.

Mr. Godfrey said that he was having a fine time in Hawaii and adjacent islands and that he would make an endeavor to meet Dr. Hall when he came to Honolulu next July.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY, New York, N. Y.—The freshmen won the privilege of smoking pipes on the campus. The present class is the tenth to win the privilege since the tradition was established 28 years ago.

WITTENBERG COLLEGE, Springfield, O.—Dr. B. T. Prince, vice-president of Wittenberg, recently celebrated his eighty-sixth birthday. Dr. Prince is the oldest professor in the country in the point of consecutive years served at one teaching post.

'Arms and the Man' Selected As Senior Play

Guild Theater Players To Stage Production At Heilig June 10

"Arms and the Man" by Bernard Shaw has been chosen as the Senior play, to be presented at the Heilig theater, June 10, by the Guild theater players.

This Shaw play is considered one of his best. It is a story of the life in a Bulgarian home, during war-time. A Swiss soldier is chased by the Bulgarian regiments, and he climbs up a water spout into the room of a Bulgarian lassie. When the Russians inquire for him, the girl denies having seen him. She gives him the coat of her father who is a major in the army, and he escapes.

When the war is over her fiancé returns home, and seems rather more interested in the maid than his girl. He kisses the maid—to her consternation, and then apologizes, saying because he is a man of honor he will never kiss her again except as his bride. The psychological moment comes when the Swiss returns to bring back the coat he borrowed. He has fallen in love with the girl, but thinks she is far too young. She decides otherwise and deliberately sets out to win him, just as the maid was successfully winning her mistress' fiancé.

While the Swiss is in the home of the enemy he receives a message telling of the death of his father, who left to him six hotels and all their accessories. Then he finds out that Raina is twenty-three instead of nineteen, and since it made all the difference in the world to him he proposes. The parents disapprove, because of his apparent lack of wealth. They are reassured upon hearing of the heritage. Sergius, the rejected fiancé, forgets his promise and kisses the maid's hand. She holds him to his promise, and they marry.

The main intellectual action in "Arms and the Man" is the exposition of certain mental peculiarities of the professional soldier displayed in Bluntschli, and Sergius. An idea of the humdrum elements of military life is also given.

On the material side for the action we have Catherine Petkoff, portrayed by Katie Buchanan, Major Paul Petkoff, taken by Cecil Matson; and their daughter Raina, portrayed by Grace Gardner. Then there are the men: Captain Bluntschli, a plain, intelligent realist of the middle classes, whose part is taken by Alfons Korn; Major Sergius Saranoff, a romantic, handsome young man from a noble family, Lawrence C. Shaw; and the Russian officer, a typical administrator of discipline, acted by William Forbis. Kittye Sartain and Arthur Anderson play the roles of the servants, Louka and Nicola.

Sergius and Raina are betrothed, but their romantic fervor is overcome by realist love, and the attractions of one good looking person for another draws Captain Bluntschli and Raina together. Thus Sergius is left for the love struggle with Louka, the proud, beautiful, energetic and practical maid. Kittye Sartain is playing this role. These two love affairs lead to a conflict between the Petkoffs and their daughter, in which the parents are ridiculed and youth comes out the victor.

A peculiar element in the play, in this duel of sexes, is the peculiarity that is found in many of Shaw's plays. It is the woman, he avers, who pursues the man, her assured prey. Among these characters moves the manservant, Nicola, Arthur Anderson in the role, who plays the part of confidante, and the philosophically-minded servant, who is a typical character in Shaw's plays.

Poetess

(Continued from page one) appeared a year ago in Poetry and was included in the last volume of Braithwaite's annual anthology, shows her at her best. It has a haunting emotional delicacy and a fayish wistfulness, as the introductory stanza reveals:

"Where is the little Queen Amaranthene
Who wore singing dreams
Like pearls in her hair?
Where, where and where?"
Some of her verses remind me of a frosted rosebud just warming in the dawn; others remind me of a lark rocketing sunward from a dreary stubble.

It is difficult to realize that she "sleeps a sleep deep and deep." The lines by Edna St. Vincent Millay express what I feel:
"Once the ivory box is broken,
Beats the golden bird no more."

Oregon to Send Many Students To Conference

Roland Davis to Be Field Chairman at Seabeck June 11 to 20

The Pacific Northwest Student Conference held at Seabeck, Washington, under direction of student Y. M. C. A., from June 11 to 20, will this year be attended by at least twenty representatives from Oregon, and more are expected to sign up before the end of school, according to Bill Schulz, head of the Seabeck committee.

Roland Davis, last year's "Y" president, has been chosen student chairman of the conference, which is annually attended by delegates from eight colleges and universities in Oregon, Washington, and western Montana.

Conference leaders will include Bruce Curry, who conducted a Bible study course here recently; J. Stitt Wilson, who has lectured in colleges of the United States for eight years; William L. Young, University pastor and professor at the University of Montana; George Phillips, pastor of Tenth Avenue church, Oakland, California; and Sidney L. Gulick, secretary of the Federal Council of Churches. Gale Seaman, general chairman of the conference, is going as a member of the Oregon delegation.

Daily discussion subjects and addresses, together with Bible study and forums, will cover the more serious side, while games, athletic contests between schools, swimming and boating will provide recreation.

Names of those who have signified their intention of attending are: Roland Davis, Bill Schulze, Jack Hempstead, Herbert Soeolofsky, Bob Hynd, H. W. Davis, Lyle Bolton, Mora Lee, Clarin Parker, Eueho Chung, Harold Gulde, Claude Addison, Bill Clark, Bob Jackson, Singh Sadharia, Shailer Peterson, Homer Dixon, H. J. Bass, J. Merle Applegate, Alson Bristol, and Roland Humphreys.

Faculty Children To Crown Queen At May Festival

Dainty Costumes Feature Dances to be Given Tonight at 7

The lawn in front of the Woman's building will be transformed into a May festival scene tonight at 7 o'clock, when forty children, under the direction of Mrs. Mildred Le Compte Moore, '24, will crown the May queen.

The children participating in the festival are members of Mrs. Moore's dancing class, sponsored by the University physical education department. It is composed of town and faculty children.

Janet Thacher, the daughter of W. F. G. Thacher, professor of journalism, has been chosen the May queen, and she will be accompanied by nine rosebuds, one of which is impersonated by Zanna Douglass, the little daughter of Earl R. Douglass, of the school of education.

The ladies-in-waiting will wear old fashioned dresses and pantalettes, making a dainty contrast to the flowers and gypsies. Two of this group are Marjery Zane, daughter of N. B. Zane, and Mary Elizabeth Oupthank, daughter of Karl W. Onthank.

The part of the sandman, who brings the dreams to the queen, will be taken by Madeline Gilbert, daughter of James H. Gilbert, while Betty Allen, daughter of Eric W. Allen, and Marian Sheldon, daughter of H. D. Sheldon, are both gypsies who come to crown Queen Janet. The other parts in the festival are taken by town children.

There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend. In case of rain it will be postponed until tomorrow at the same place and hour. If it rains on Friday, it will be held inside in the woman's gymnasium.
