

Four Oregon Students Pass Rhodes Test

Alderman, Jackson, Martig, Ruch, to Enter Finals in Portland, Dec. 10

Scholarship Winner Will Study at Oxford

Fourteen Students Quizzed By Faculty Committee

Four University men were selected yesterday by the Rhodes Scholarship examination committee to represent Oregon in the state examinations at Portland on December 10. The men chosen are: Henry Alderman, senior in journalism; Robert F. Jackson, junior in physics; Ralph Martig, second year in law, and Theodore Ruch, named as alternate last year, who will also take the state examination. Ruch is now taking graduate work at Stanford University, California, but will make the trip to Portland for the examination.

Exam Held Thursday

Examination of candidates for the Rhodes Scholarship began early Thursday afternoon and continued until 1 a. m. Friday. Fourteen candidates were examined by the committee.

The committee consisted of Dean George Rebee, chairman; Walter Barnes, Stevenson Smith, Dr. John Boverd and Professor Orin Stafford. Walter Barnes is secretary to the state examination committee.

Annual Scholarship

The Rhodes Scholarship is awarded annually, except every third year, to the man who is chosen by the state selection committee as best qualifying in three different phases of life. Each candidate is examined on the basis of scholastic ability, character and physical interests.

Candidates for this scholarship must have passed their sophomore year and also be between the ages of 19 and 25.

The successful candidate in the state examination will enter Oxford, England, in October, 1928.

Next year there will be no examination held in Oregon.

For the past few years the Rhodes scholar from the state of Oregon has been a University of Oregon man.

Vous," which gained much applause. Another number from last year's junior week-end program, "Creole Moon," was presented by Edith Bader, Ethel Lou Crane, Tim Wood and William Powell, when they danced a double Spanish tango. Ed Cheney, who is a headliner all by himself, was featured in "Fast Steppin'."

George McMurphy's Kollege Knights presented a symphonic arrangement of "Fantasia Orientale." Madge Normille, blues singer, accompanied on two pianos by Abbie Green and Billy O'Bryant, sang "I'm Coming, Virginia" and "New Orleans, I Hear You Callin' Me." The Original Pony Chorus from "Creole Moon," doing the "Black Bottom," was presented with "Madge" and "Ed."

The Men's Glee club sang the "Pledge Song," "Oregon, Our Alma Mater" was sung by the audience as the finale.

Vespers Will Include Symphony Numbers

John Stark Evans will play two movements of Tchaikowsky's Symphony Pathétique at the second regular vesper services, Sunday at 4:30 in the Music building. His selections will include the second movement of this composition, the Allegretto Graziosa, or celebrated five four rhythm, and the fourth, the Finale.

Reverend Bruce Giffen, student pastor of the Presbyterian church, who leaves shortly for Cedar Falls, Iowa, will read the Twenty-third Psalm and a passage from Galatians.

Delbert Moore, second violinist in the Underwood string quartet, will play "Chanson Triste," also by Tchaikowsky.

battle to a more favorable angle. Oregon has long been famous for fighting leaders, and Beryl Hodgen does not fall short of his predecessors.

The other guard position is being filled by Everett McCutchan. McCutchan was a candidate for center at the beginning of the practice season, but Stadelman with Hagan in reserve seemed to form the best combination at the middle of the line. Undaunted, McCutchan fought his way to a regular job of the varsity at guard. That persistent spirit was in evidence in the contest last Saturday, and will be exhibited for the discomfiture of the Bears today.

Wetzel and Pope at Ends

The combination of wingmen that will start today is one of the strongest and most consistent seen at Oregon in several seasons. Wetzel at right end has not lost any of the skill that made him a potential back for two years. He has the weight, the speed, the endurance, and the fight to turn aside the sweeps of the California backfield men. The ability of the Webfoots' right end to snare passes, and his speed in following down punts indicates that plenty of action is in store for California's secondary defense.

The starting Webfoot backfield will be minus one of its surest ground gainers. Bobbie Robinson, shifty quarterback, will be on the sidelines with an injured wrist. Whether he will be in condition to get into the fray later on is doubtful. The Webfoot attack will not be greatly impaired as Ira Woodie, reserve back, is an accurate passer, speedy, and can run back punts with considerable dexterity.

Dry Field Hoped For

With Robinson out, the swiftness of the Oregon backs will depend upon Burnell. A dry day and a fast field should give "Speed" a good chance to break away for some long gains. Coleman at the other half will furnish the team with a line plunger and a heady interference runner. Either Coleman or Wetzel will do the punting.

Cotter Gould, the charging full-back, gives the necessary power to the backfield. If Gould continues the same smashing tactics that he used against the Vandals, the California forward wall will have to be equal to all reports on its strength.

other possible change of this sort might be made at guard. Elmer Gerken, better known as a shot and discus thrower, was given a try at guard early in the season, but has since been used as a substitute tackle, where his 200 pounds would be more valuable, and his lack of speed would be less of a disadvantage. If the Bears were to resort to a plunging game, it would not be much of a surprise if Elmer were to be back in the guard position.

Local Golf Course Tests Dexterity of Player, Says Moe

Don Moe, one of Portland's best among the young golfers, is a freshman at the University of Oregon. This summer in the California state golf championship, George Von Elm, last year's national amateur champ, and Francis Brown, golf champion of Hawaii, fell victims to Moe's accurate clubs.

"The country club course here in Eugene," says Don, "is a real test of a golfer's ability. It is of championship length and hard enough to make it interesting. I like the last nine especially."

The first time that Moe really shot a full 18 holes on the Eugene course, he made 40 and 34. To a duffer, a 40 and 34 would be a miracle of mashie shots, but to Moe it was simply another 18 holes of golf.

About the only hazard Don can't seem to pitch over is Frank Dolp, of Portland. It was Dolp who put him out of the running in the California state by 2 up and 1 to go. In the Oregon state championship, Moe and Dolp met in the finals, and again Dolp emerged victorious; this time by one gentle tap of the putter, after the match had gone to 35 holes.

Grid Schedule For Today Has 2 'Big' Games

Trojans to Test Mettle Of Stanford's Hopes At Palo Alto

Aggies to Rest Bones As Other Teams Play

Huskies Expect Montana To Be "Push-overs"

By BEN E. TITUS

(U. P. Staff Correspondent)

(By United Press)

San Francisco, October 14.—The eyes of football fans on the coast Saturday will be turned toward Portland and Palo Alto for the first "big" games of the conference season.

Hereabouts, sportswriters seem to believe that the Stanford-U. S. C. game at Palo Alto is the "big" game and that California will have no trouble taking the scalp of the Webfoots at Portland.

Certainly the Bears in no way resemble the sorry representatives of California of last year.

Got Lots of Praise

When California defeated St. Mary's last week, great credit was heaped on the heads of the Golden eleven. However, St. Mary's was not the same team that defeated Stanford the week before. Some of the St. Mary's players last week pulled "boners" which would have sent high school players to the bench.

The Oregon line held against the heavy Idaho line last week and it was chiefly about his line that Captain McEwan was worrying early in the season.

Trojans Favored

U. S. C. will go into the fray favorites over the "Crimson tide." Stanford's showing against St. Mary's and Nevada was so sorry that critics could see but little hope for a good year for the Cardinals. But the Stanford rooters say that a different team will take the field Saturday.

If Stanford can hold the ball against the Trojans Saturday, it may be a very close football game.

Nothing To It

Washington will journey to Missoula and should have no trouble in bringing home a victory over Montana.

The Oregon Aggies will rest Saturday while Idaho plays Whitman in a non-conference game.

Washington State will have a tougher time against Gonzaga at Spokane than it did last week against Montana.

Botany and Zoology Departments Combine To Teach Biology

Animal biology is being taught this year instead of zoology, Dr. R. A. Moore, head of the university zoology department, announces. The reason for this is that the botany and the zoology departments have agreed that all students should know about both plants and animals, he states. Majors in both biology and botany are now compelled to take a junior course in physiology.

There is a large number of new assistants in the department, Dr. Moore announces. David T. Jones, formerly instructor of zoology at the University of Utah, is the new instructor. He received his M. A. degree from the University of Iowa, and has several scientific publications to his credit.

A teaching fellowship has been awarded to Emma L. Holland, who received her M. A. last year from the University of Wyoming.

Graduate students for the department will be: Roland J. Main, from Rutgers College, New Jersey; Phillips G. Putnam, of Washington Agricultural College; Eleanor Steele, University of Pittsburgh; Birnet Hovey, who received his M. A. degree from the psychology department of the University of Oregon last year; and Winnifred Bradley, who was an assistant in the zoology department here last winter.

Reserve assistant will be Samuel Wong, a native of Korea. He received his M. A. from the College of South Dakota.

Ted Dunwoodie is student assistant for the second year zoology work. He has been elected to the honor school and will take his biology work according to that system.

Other student assistants are: Frances Sue Schroeder, Lillian Bramhall, Marian Paddock, Clita Walden and Mr. Elton Edge.

No Campus Gridgraph Will Be Shown Today

Contrary to a rumor that took life yesterday, there will be no gridgraph showing in McArthur court today. This information comes from the Order of the "O" through Ed Crowley, who has charge of all gridgraph exhibitions this year. Everyone is going to Portland to see the Oregon-California classic first-hand, says Crowley, and there will be no one left to run the miniature grid-iron on the campus.

The official opening of the gridgraph season is next week, October 22, when the Stanford-O. A. C. game in Portland will be run immediately following the freshman tussle with Columbia University on Hayward field. The frosh game will be started early so as to be through in time to get the Portland returns. The Kollege Knights, who were on the rally program at the Broadway theatre last night, will furnish dance music for the gridgraph.

Evening Classes Will Be Offered In Eugene Soon

Courses May Be Added When Sufficient Interest Warrants Them

The extension division of the University of Oregon has made arrangements to offer evening classes on the same basis as those being taught in the university extension centers in Portland, Salem, Ranier, and Hood River. With this announcement the university hopes to make possible for citizens of the city and surrounding country, an extension center through which a variety of evening classes will be available each year.

By announcing these classes it is to be understood that the list is not final; that if there is enough interest shown in other courses, they too will be offered if suitable instruction can be secured.

The classes will hold their first meetings on the evenings designated in the various classrooms on the university campus. Any adult who is able to carry the work profitably may enroll. No high school diplomas or college degrees are required for entrance in these classes. The work has been so arranged so that university credit may be earned if so desired, except investments, which is a non credit course.

The courses for which arrangements have been completed are as follows:

1. Business English. A practical course in English for business people, with special emphasis on the fundamentals of English composition, types of business letters, forms and reports. The class will be taught by Robert D. Horn, instructor of English, on Thursday evening from 7-8 p. m. in room 3, Johnson Hall. This is a one credit course.
2. Investments. Lectures and discussions on the principles underlying successful investments, which will be non technical and planned especially for persons with small sums which they would like to know how to invest safely and profitably. F. E. Folts, associate professor of business administration and acting dean of that school, will teach this course, Wednesday evening, room 202, Commerce building.

3. Accounting. The aim of this course, which will be taught by A. B. Stillman, assistant professor of business administration, will be to give the principles of accounting and their application to practical situations in business, by means of actual work on practice sets. There will be a small laboratory fee charged in connection with this course.

The class will meet Tuesday evenings, in room 206, Commerce building.

4. Moral Training. This course on training of character and ideals is planned especially for teachers, parents, and religious workers who have the problem of training and guiding young people. It will be taught by Harold S. Tuttle, professor in education on Monday evenings in room 3, Johnson Hall. This is a one credit course.
