

Rhodes Award Won by Oregon In Late Years

Four Oregon Aspirants To Try for Honor December 10

Harvey B. Densmore First To Get Award

Rhodes scholars from the University have represented the state of Oregon at Oxford in six instances in the past years. With examinations at Portland set for December 10, and four Oregon students, Henry Alderman, senior in journalism; Robert F. Jackson, junior in physics; Ralph Martig, sophomore in pre-law, and Theodore Ruch, psychology, who was alternate in the tests last year, prepared to compete, interest is directed to former winners of the award.

Harvey B. Densmore, '94, was the first University man to take the Oregon championship. He was a student of Latin, practically a major in the subject, although there was no such rating at the time. Going to Oxford, he was graduated in 1907 with the degree of B. A. (Oxon). Soon afterward the University of Washington regents elected him to the faculty of that institution as instructor of Greek. Today he holds the associate professorship in the same university.

Philosophy Majors Selected
A member of the class of 1909, Cecil Lyons took the course in classics and philosophy at Oregon and, selected as Rhodes scholar, he went to the English university, where he received his B. A. Returning to the United States, he obtained his Ph.D. in educational psychology at Clark University, and later was a professor at the University of Pittsburgh for four years. Dissatisfied with teaching he went into personnel work, and is now personnel man for R. B. Rose and Company of New York.

Korn Now Studying
Arthur Rosebraugh of the class of '24, a law major, attended Christ Church, Oxford. He obtained his B. A. and J. D. at Oregon, before going to England.

A journalism major of the class of 1925, Clinton Howard, went to Exeter college, Oxford and obtained his degree. He is remaining at Oxford, where he expects to read law another year before returning home.

Alfons Korn, an English major, '27, went this year to Christ Church college, Oxford, where he is now studying.

East, West Grid Champs Line Up For Title Game

Officials Face Difficult Task in Picking Teams To Play at Pasadena

(By United Press)
PASADENA, Nov. 15.—The curtain that will ring down on the regular football season within a few short weeks brings to the Tournament of Roses association its yearly problem.

Logically, financially and traditionally just who should meet who in the greatest of the post season games—the annual New Year's day East-West contest.

While definitely stating that no decision has been made nor any invitations offered, Les Henry, who does the guessing for the Tournament of Roses association, tonight gave the United Press to understand that two great eastern and one great southern eleven are under consideration by virtue of their records.

On the west coast, Les Henry waits only for the Southern California-Washington contest. Stanford, he indicated, has only an outside chance. Southern California at present holds inside track. In the east the University of Pittsburgh, regarded here as one of the strongest of the teams in that section, has a slight edge over Washington and Jefferson and the University of Georgia.

Oregon Griders Begin Working For Husky Tilt

Last Conference Game Is With Washington In Seattle

The Webfooters held the first workout last night since the Homecoming defeat at the hands of the Beavers. Considering the ferocity of the contest, the Oregon team was fortunate to come off the field with no other injuries other than the usual stiff and bruised muscles.

Coach John J. McEwan is now preparing his gridsters for the annual game with the Washington Huskies to be played in Seattle at Thanksgiving. But one of the many things that the Webfoots were determined to accomplish against the Aggies was realized last Friday, that being the first score in a conference game this season. The Huskies are conceded a wide margin over the Webfooters, but past performances both here and in Seattle prove that the Oregon team is never a set-up for the Huskies.

Last night's practice was primarily to limber up the team after a three day lay-off since the O. S. C. tilt. The session was brief and consisted chiefly of "touch" football. No postmortem has been deemed necessary to air the faults exposed by the Beavers. Without exception the Oregonians displayed better football than they had previously during the entire season. The only conclusion for the decisive defeat is the great superiority of the Agricultural eleven.

Washington is still a contender for the championship, and can afford to take no chances with the Oregon team when they meet next week. The Webfooters have been noted for their strong finish at the end of the season, but this year Huskies will attempt to demonstrate the fallacy of this assertion.

Demos May Junk Ruling For Nominations; Chief Calls Council of War

(By United Press)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 15.—Clem Shaver, chairman of the democratic national committee, will hold a council of war with party leaders here tomorrow.

Shaver was understood to be aroused over agitation among some members of the democratic national committee for abrogation of the rule requiring a two-thirds majority in national conventions for the nomination of a presidential candidate.

There is a movement to have the national committee adopt a resolution at its meeting here January 12, recommending majority rule.

Deeply involved in the situation is the candidacy of Governor Al Smith of New York. It is generally agreed among authorities that Smith might get a majority of the next convention but would have a hard time getting two-thirds.

High Schools Will Have Complete Health Survey

A complete health survey for the McMinnville senior high school will be made soon by the school of physical education of the University, it is announced by Delbert Oberteuffer, head of the men's department of the school. Working in co-operation with F. L. Fagan, head of the McMinnville schools, and George Allison, former student of the University who is director of physical education at McMinnville, will be Carl Rice, senior in the department here, and other members of the University staff.

The survey will be made not only for the benefit of the McMinnville school, but also to serve as a model for the surveys of other institutions.

Gridgraph Will Run Bear-Card Tilt Saturday

Varsity Football Men Are Invited as Guests At Showing

The Order of the "O" will sponsor the final gridgraph showing of the season this Saturday at McArthur court when it flashes the play-by-play report of the big southern football classic between California and Stanford at Palo Alto.

It is the big game of the West this week-end and is expected to be a close, hard fought contest. Stanford beat Washington by a one touchdown margin. The extra touchdown was alleged by sports writers to be due to breaks and not because of a superior Cardinal football machine.

Washington beat California last Saturday by one lone score. California scored on Washington but it was not counted because of an off-side penalty. The game ended with the Golden Bears on the Husky one-inch line. Thus indications point to the two southern teams being evenly matched. Plans are being made for 95,000 people to attend the game in the Palo Alto stadium. The gridgraph will start at 3 p. m. The usual charge of 25 cents will be in effect. George McMurphy's orchestra will furnish syn-copation for a dance between halves and after the game. The varsity football squad is invited to attend the showing as guests.

Quarter reports on the progress of the O. S. C.-Idaho game in Portland will be given. As has been the custom previously, the gridgraph dance will be no-date until the half, when, as usual, it will be "catch as catch can."

Dr. Corneille Heymans To Speak on Campus After Thanksgiving

The day before Thanksgiving, Dr. Corneille Heymans, noted Belgian scientist, will arrive at the University of Oregon to spend the vacation with Dr. A. R. Moore of the zoology department.

Tuesday of the week following, Dr. Heymans will deliver in English his celebrated lecture, "Thermoregulation and Metabolism in Mammals," illustrating his subject with slides; and Wednesday, at a meeting of the Lane County Medical association, he will repeat the lecture. Eugene is especially favored to have Dr. Heymans as a guest, as Portland and San Francisco are the only other towns on the Pacific coast where the scientist will deliver his address.

Dr. Heymans arrived in the United States three months ago from Belgium, where his name holds a very important place on the faculty roll of the University of Ghent. He was sent to the United States on a research scholarship, formed out of the surplus of the Belgian relief fund, raised during the war by Herbert Hoover. In the United States, he has been studying at Cleveland, Ohio, and continuing his research work at the Western Reserve University. At present, however, he is on his way west, and left Madison, Wisconsin, yesterday.

The only time the scientist will depart from English during his lectures on the campus is Monday evening, November 28, when he will address the French club at a special "soiree" given in his honor at the Tri-Delt house.
