

'Annualogy' Is Name of New Press Session

High School Editors and Managers To Hear Experts Speak

"Annualogy" is the designation given to the newest section of the High school conference, which will take place here January 13 and 14.

All editors and managers of high school annuals will attend the session of "annualogy" which will be held on Friday afternoon. This "annualogy" session will be divided into two sections, one for editors and one for managers. Problems of every kind, from how to prepare copy to use of color plates, will be discussed and explained by experts who will appear on the program.

In the editor's session, which will be under the direction of Mary Benton, editor of the Oregonian, Basil L. McCann, of the Beaver Engraving company, will talk on the "Nature of a Yearbook." Ernest Ellis, of Kennel-Ellis studios, will discuss "Photography for Reproduction;" Walter Huist, of Blake, Moffitt and Towne, who will talk on "Paper Selection;" Frank Andrews, of Hicks-Chatten Engraving company, will discuss "Preparing Copy for the Engraver;" Harold Robinson of the West Coast Engraving company will talk on "The Use of Color Plates;" T. L. Chapman, of Keke-Chapman Printing company, will explain preparing copy for the printer; and B. H. Miller, of Kilham's Printing company, will talk on color printing.

The manager's section will be in charge of Sam Kinley, Long Beach, California.

The program includes Frank Andrews of Hicks-Chatten company; W. F. G. Thatcher, professor of advertising; Walter W. R. May, of the Oregonian advertising staff, and J. E. Shelton, of Shelton-Turnbull-Fuller Printing company, Eugene.

A visit to the University Press will follow the session. Theta Sigma Phi, national journalism fraternity for women, will give a tea for the girls, while Sigma Delta Chi, men's journalism fraternity, will entertain the visiting men.

Basketball

(Continued from page one) somewhat different from the pivot job at which he was awarded all-state honors when a member of the La Grande high school five, Hummelt led the Webfootters in scoring with 19 points.

Townpeople, delegates to the student body and press conference this week-end, and all others, will be guests of the A. S. U. O. Friday night when the varsity hoopsters meet the strong Gonzaga University Bulldog five in McArthur court. There will be no need of One-eye Connolly to practice their art... Friday night's show is free to all.

Another contest was added to the Oregon varsity basketball team's long list of hoop games yesterday with a return game scheduled with the Willamette University five in Salem, January 31. A tentative tilt has also been arranged with the coast touring Waseda University five from Tokyo, Japan, on January 30. The Japanese quintet arrived on the coast the middle of last month and have met a number of California teams.

Classroom Design Products Exhibited From Mills College

An exchange exhibition of classroom design products from Mills College, California, done under the direction of Mr. Roi Partridge, head of the art department of Mills College, is being shown at the present time in the gallery of the University Arts building.

A pronounced interest in color relationships is manifested in some of the problems, while striking effects in black and white are achieved in others. Clever modernistic suggestions of millinery, and a group of pose drawings from the figure that represent a skillful manipulation of a broad crayon in the drawing, are shown.

Nowland B. Zane, head of the department of interior design of the school of architecture and allied arts, believes that a comparative method of exchange, such as that used by the University of Oregon and Mills College, under an agreement reached by Mr. Partridge and heads of the University of Oregon art schools last summer, is advantageous to both schools, because the relationships in design have a basic influence upon everything done in each school. Decorative design problems, done by Oregon students, have been sent to Mills for exhibition there, he said.

There is both beginners' work and that of advanced classes represented in the collection. A wide range of executions, from simple decorative spots to elaborate compositions, may be seen. The characteristics of design in its applications to the study of costumes are brought out.

"These studies might be regarded as brilliant bits of draftsmanship, rather than painstaking studies," said Mr. Zane. "As a whole, the exhibition represents a wide range of interest. It is beautifully mounted and its appearance in the gallery is arresting in its appeal to even the average human sense of color and line, not to mention those who have been stimulated by particular study in these fields."

The work will remain on exhibition until the end of this week, and will be open daily.

Varsity Has Scrimmage In Preparation for Gonzaga Tilt

Two more non-conference games have been added to the Oregon basketball schedule. The Webfootters will meet Willamette University again on January 31 at Salem, and on January 30 will tackle the Waseda University five of Tokyo, Japan, here.

The Webfootters are working for the Gonzaga tilt next Friday night. Jack W. Benefiel, graduate manager, has announced that the public will be invited to attend this game free of charge.

With two victories over Willamette, the Oregon hoopers have extended their total number of wins to five. During these games all candidates for regular positions have had the opportunity to play and from these Bill Reinhart, coach, is about ready to pick a combination for the opening conference game with Idaho January 21.

Reinhart has a set of reserves this year that are more evenly balanced with the varsity five and substitutions can be made without greatly weakening the power of the team. The center position is still one of the weak spots, but Reynolds, Edwards and Eberhart are developing fast and should be about ready for the Vandal invasion.

The regulars worked in scrimmage against the super-varsity last night, perfecting an attack and tightening the defensive strength. The team showed great improvement in coordination against Willamette, and will be in its stride by the time the season opens.

Coach 'Bill' Hayward To Give Track Plans At Donut League Meet

Some new ideas concerning the winter sport program in track will be presented by Coach "Bill" Hayward at the meeting of intramural representatives in the office of the men's gymnasium this afternoon at 4:15.

"Bill's" talk will be only a part of the meeting, for entries into the sports having team competition must be made at that time. These sports are swimming, wrestling, and track. Delegates must be there on time and come prepared to make their entries.

Last year, winter donut sports were equally as popular as the fall sport program which has basketball as its main event and water polo and tennis as the sidelines. The winter sports have no such card. All events are main events and the winning of the championship in one sport is as creditable as winning in another.

The day of this intramural league meeting is today; the time is 4:15; the place is the office of the men's gymnasium.

Good Weather Causes Near-Empty Infirmary

Paul Clark senior in pre-law, is the only patient in the University infirmary. The nurses at the infirmary credit the near-empty infirmary to the weather. Amelia Kiblan, sophomore in English, Robert Eckman, freshman physics major; and Louise Wilhelm sophomore English major; were all in the infirmary during the week-end.

University Sculptor Does Bronze Figure For Portland Fountain

A symbolic figure in bronze, executed by O. L. Barrett, University sculptor, was recently erected in Portland as the principal sculptural feature of the new Shemanski fountain in the Park block, donated to the city of Portland.

Mr. Barrett, who is an instructor in the sculpture department of the school of architecture and allied arts, superintended the erection of the piece, which is the figure of a young girl, dressed in flowing draperies and carrying a jug of water.

The fountain is an elaborate conception of a drinking fountain, done in the manner of a Renaissance Baldechino. The plans were drawn by Carl Linde, Portland architect. The figure by Mr. Barrett, which is about four feet in height, is placed under the stone canopy of the fountain.

Mr. Barrett modelled this figure in the University of Oregon studio, and it was cast in bronze by Guido Nelli of Los Angeles.

Record Runner Takes Workout at Stanford

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Jan. 9.—P. I. P.—Dr. Otto Peltzer, holder of world's record of 151 3-5 seconds in the half-mile run, took a workout on the Stanford track in company with three Stanford trackmen on January 3.

Peltzer, who teaches history and geography in Wickersdorf junior college, Germany, is touring the United States to study economic conditions.

He has been refused permission by German officials governing amateur athletics to compete in races in the United States.

'Five O'Clocks' Begin Today at Bungalow

Whitman Women Plan To Make Dates, Pay Bills for Two Weeks

WHITMAN COLLEGE, Jan. 9.—(P.I.P.)—"The woman pays and pays." As this is leap year, this old saying will be put into actual practise for the next two weeks as the result of action taken in the student body.

Beginning at midnight of January 6 and lasting until midnight, Saturday, January 21, no college man will be allowed to make a date with any woman on the campus.

All dances at the all-college dance will be lady's choice. Women must make all dates, pay all bills arising from such dates, and call for their "boy friends" at their residences.

This idea was brought before the student body by a committee of "common people" after a consultation with Deaf Westrom, who was said to be highly in favor of the plan.

The report of the committee was accepted with but one dissenting vote on a motion made by Paul Anderson. It was later reported that Paul had at least one date made within the next five minutes.
