Various Styled Days That Aren't So

It has not been so long since the Emerald was, in some section or another, referred to the maxim, "give a dog a bad name and hang it." Again we are confronted with a situation in which a dog-hanging, we deem, would not be inappropriate. In short, we are averse to the term Dad's Day.

All the many ramifications of the University organization are uniting in a concerted effort to entertain, as guests of the students and University, all the fathers of students here than may be induced, cozened, or coerced to attend the get-together on the twenty-eighth of this month. Of course, it is plain that fathers should have the welfare, if not of their considerable cash investment, at least of their flesh and blood at heart enough to see how fares the University life. But inertia is effective even with fathers. Thus he must be baited with a Day.

No doubt the Emerald is hypersensitively cranky concerning the label chosen for the event. We must confess to have lately narrowly escaped apoplexy when we read a harangue from an apostle of extreme Bartonism to the priests of the necktie counters. He measured with neat fingers the sentimental value to the haberdasher trade of Dad's Days in the volume of neckties transferred from idle Christmas stocks to the idle paternal rack by means of the commemoration. Just look, he cried, what Mother's Day has done for the florists!

Such disillusionings as to motives disturb the ingenious Emerald. We have grown skeptical. If fathers have not, it is merely because they are too preoccupied with keeping their fledglings in the collegiate nest.

There is nothing we reiterate, of more potential mutual benefit to both fathers and students than such an intimacy as the proposed program will foster. And there are material advantages to the University along with the more important intangible values.

We are enthusiastic for father's visit. But we shrink from the Florists' Day and the Necktie Jubilee that are not so styled. If it must be Dad's Day, let there be no confusion about the matter. It is decided, then, that the event on the twenty-eighth is clearly for Dad.

On the Subject Of Taking Ways

To quote from an old song: "The grass is always greener in the other fellow's yard." Such would seem to be the theory held by those college students who can not resist the temptation to carry home souvenirs of the different places they visit.

The sophomore class at U. C. L. A. gave a dance at a country club about the middle of December. A smoking stand, a table, and $34 worth of other articles were missing from the clubhouse when the dance was over. Threats and appeals resulted in the return of the smoking stand last Thursday. The other articles were still missing at last reports.

Obviously, the university officials of U. C. L. A. are not directly responsible for the affair, nor can all the members of the sophomore class be considered guilty, yet as long as the remaining articles are not forthcoming, the innocent as well as the guilty must share the brunt of the blame that is directed at the entire university community.

With the exception of last term's fits with the Eugene police over the subjects of serenades and supposedly insufficient lighting for the Sophomore Informal, University of Oregon students, as a group, have not made themselves known through the police news. It is desirable that the condition be continued as long as possible, something which may be done if due care is exercised.

This is the season for fraternity initiations. Hard-working committeemen sometimes find it desirable to set the initiates to bringing back evidence of the extent of their nocturnal prowling. The selection of the evidence is not always made with due consideration of the rights of the owner of the particular bit nor is its removal always achieved without a certain amount of horseplay and indulgence in stunts seems to constitute an integral part of college fraternity initiations. Opinions as to whether or not such should be the case are based on a matter of individual tastes; but clearly, there is no justification for the required theft of private property, regardless of its apparent value. No thinking fraternity man can truly believe that such a requirement makes a pledge better fitted for admission to full membership.

Letter Comes From Arthur Campbell, '22

Arthur Campbell, '22, is now research chemist in the Goodyear Rubber company, at Akron, Ohio, according to a letter received recently by P. L. Shinn, professor of chemistry.

The Goodyear company is now lining up young men with B.A.s in chemistry who would be interested in doing research work. Mr. Campbell states in his letter. He also asks that a number of recommendations be sent to this firm for students graduating this year from the chemistry department.

Mrs. Campbell (Wanda Daggett) was also a former student of the University of Oregon. She received her B.A. in chemistry in '22.

R. O. T. C. Rifle Team To Shoot First Match

From 30 candidates for this year's R. O. T. C. rifle team, fifteen have been picked to shoot the first match January 21, Captain Clarence Bragg, coach, announced yesterday. The first match will be with the Culver Military School of Montana; the 38th Infantry of Ft. Douglas, Utah, and West Virginia University. The match will be shot here, and the

Paper Explaining Light Read by A. E. Caswell

A paper "Bridging a Great Gulf in Science" was read last night by A. E. Caswell, professor of physics, at a meeting sponsored by Sigma Xi. A crowd of considerable size was present for the discussion which took up the various explanations and theories of phenomena noticeable in the study of light and light rays.

Smith Not Entitled To Senate Seat: Reed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Frank L. Smith is not entitled to a seat in the United States Senate, the Reed primary investigation committee reported to the Senate today.

The report recommended that the seat of the Illinois Republican senator-elect be declared vacant.

WE ARE IN RECEIPT OF A LETTER ASKING THE NAME OF THE COUNTRY WHERE BASKETBALL HAD ITS ORIGIN.

We don't know any more about it than our correspondent, but we think "free throw" might be a pretty good clue.

A great silence suddenly swept up and down Thirteenth street, traffic came to a halt, chattering co-eds stopped their giggling conversation, and handsome college men forgot the lighted cigarettes in their mouths. Miracle of miracles—Ebbie McCutcheon was walking down the campus alone, without Clare Black. Sort of a case of a Phi Delt without his Theta.

TODAY'S GEOGRAPHICAL ANSWER

"Here is a key-hole we can look through."

"Naw; here are some windows. Let's Pekinese." (And all heaven couldn't contain her merriment.)

"Nobody knows how dry I am," said the professor with the shiny blue serge suit as began his morning lecture.

A. T. O. DINNER GUEST IS THROWN IN TUB

It comes to a pretty pass when members of one house tub a member of another fraternity, especially when he is a guest for dinner. It happened, though, to Harry Wood, famous football hero at the Phi Delt house, when he was taking on a little (it's always just a little) food at the A. T. O. fort.

It seems Harry took three pieces of pie, used improper language at the table, didn't wear a tie (though he was home), used finger to load fork, and used cream to cool coffee. A trial followed and Harry was about to be acquitted, when he suddenly plead guilty. The penalty had to be imposed and it was a tubbing.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 17.—(Special.)—That William Edward Hickman, being held here for murder, would have gotten along exceptionally well in college had his plans ever materialized, was expressed by jail authorities this morning when it was learned that he dropped asleep while listening to instructions being given him by his attorney.

Thistler, lichen: "Who's this Thelma I hear you talk about?"

"Thelma, to have to wear this wool underwear."

It was in the midst of a discussion of Paradise Lost in English Survey class, under Mr. Horn, that a shrill little voice piped up: "Oh, Mr. Horn; are there men angels in heaven?" (Quite embarrassed, Mr. Horn replied that he wasn't aware of the sex of the angels.)

Rapid-Fire Replies To Curious Queries

The Inquiring Reporter Asks from Campus folks selected at random, one question each day. Replies are directly quoted.

Today's question: Do you think the idea of working for credits and grades is a hindrance to student education?

Dr. F. G. Schmidt, head of department of Germanic languages and literature: "I think that our credit system accumulated by the installment plan is a curse for higher education. It is just as bad for grades. Students don't concentrate enough because of facility with which they can accumulate credits in all departments."

Dean George Rebec: "I think that the splitting up of courses into little courses, each graded and credited, is an impediment to education. There should be the grade for those in the third and fourth years, however."

Cyril Holton, freshman in business administration: "I hardly think so because the student is in school to learn what he can but it all depends on whether the student has to obtain a degree or not."

Donald Smith, freshman in pre-law: "I believe the student feels that after he has made so many hours of credit, he has done something definite."

William Haggerty, junior in journalism: "It's the only method that has been devised to check the work of students. As long as students are limited to taking certain subjects, credits are indispensable."

Howard K. Zimmerman Is Ousted City Attorney

ASTORIA, Ore., Jan. 17.—Howard K. Zimmerman was summarily ousted from the office of city attorney by vote of the city commission Monday night and James L. Hope was appointed to the position. The commissioners gave no reason for the change. Mr. Zimmerman was at one time president of the University of Oregon Student Body and has been city attorney for over four years.

New Rule on Dribbling Does Not Take Effect

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Jan. 17.—(P.I.P.)—Contrary to general opinion, the rule passed last year by the basketball rules committee, limiting the dribble, does not take effect this season, as was at first intended.

When the rule was made in April, 1927, there was such a storm of protest from coaches and players throughout the country that the rules committee met again, and decided that the new rule would be deferred for the 1927-28 season. It was asked, however, that coaches all over the country try out the new rule, and after careful consideration, send in to the committee their suggestions as to how it will affect the game.

Dusty Rhodes' Free Throw— or Fame for a Day

THEY didn't expect him to make a point. But he made a free throw. And that free throw was the cause of their winning the game. The crowd went wild and more girls wanted to put their arms around Dusty's neck than he could accommodate. Fame!

And after the game Dusty had a few teammates around to his rooms. He served them "Canada Dry." It made a big hit—even bigger than winning the basketball game. More fame!

This ginger ale has a delightful flavor . . . tang to it . . . dryness . . . sparkle. It has a subtle gingery flavor because it is made from pure Jamaica ginger. It contains no capsicum (red pepper), and nota bene it blends well with other beverages.

"CANADA DRY" "The Champagne of Ginger Ales"

Extract imported from Canada and bottled in the U. S. A. by Canada Dry Ginger Ale, Incorporated, 25 West 43rd Street, New York, N. Y. In Canada, J. J. McLaughlin Limited. Established 1870.

Don't let 'em fool you. Jellal! Look for the name "Canada Dry" on the bottle cap. Then you'll be sure!
