

Reinhart Knows His Team's Basketball Ability

Cougars May Surprise Tonight; Huskies Are Given a Big Scare

By RICHARD H. SYRING
Sports Editor

About 10 days ago this writer had a talk with Coach Billy Reinhart over the prospects of the Whitman basketball game. To our surprise, Oregon's hoop mentor said he would be very receptive to a defeat at the hands of the Missionaries. "If we win the Whitman game we'll lose to Idaho, but if we lose to Whitman by one or two points, we will win from Idaho," said Reinhart. Last Saturday night's defeat over the Idaho Vandals shows Coach Bill knew what he was talking about. He realized that a string of six successive pre-season victories might play havoc with such a young team as this year's varsity.

Against the Vandals the Oregon Webfoots plainly showed that they were out to avenge the Whitman defeat. They did it in a grand fashion. Gordon Ridings was again high point man with 14 markers. He made several long shots that brought the crowd to its feet. Out of 16 tries at the hoop he converted six which gives him an even .375 average. The average of the Webfoot team was .324, garnering 11 baskets out of 34 tries.

The Vandal quintet took 10 more tries at the basket than the Lemmon-yellow five and succeeded in crashing the hoop for nine baskets.

One of the gratifying improvements to be noted in the Oregon team last Saturday night was its defense which was nearly impregnable at times. Big Dave Epps, who seemed to be subjected to fits of "stage fright" at times, played a good defensive game as did Scotty Milligan. With Scotty at his new position at center, he plays much more of a defensive game than offensive. He will be hitting the hoop with more regularity, however, as the season progresses.

Did you notice Oregon's passing attack Saturday night? It was working nearly perfectly which all goes to show what good coaching will do. From a hook pass to a two-handed pass, the Webfoots used everything in the basketball repertoire.

Though the Washington State College Cougars who meet the Webfoots tonight haven't had a very auspicious beginning, the old story, "the worm any turn," may be enacted this evening. Last Saturday night the Cougars entered the University of Washington game, a decided under dog but before the timer's gun concluded the contest, the Huskies had undergone some torrid playing. The Huskies jumped into a 7 to 0 lead shortly after the opening of the game but at half time the tally stood 9-all. Twice during second period the score was tied. It was in the last four minutes of play that the Seattle team scored five baskets, to win 26 to 13.

The Cougars dropped two contests to the Montana State, 57 to 42 and 58 to 31. The scores, however, do not account for the closeness of both contests. In the first tilt, W. S. C. led 39 to 38 with six minutes to play but the Bobcats staged a rally for victory. Coach Karl Schlademman's proteges hold a win over the Whitman Missionaries, 19 to 12. The Cougar's first conference loss was to the University of Montana five, 40 to 16, but the absence of Bob Brumblay at center hindered the Staters. Eddie McDowell, guard, and Ted Rohwer, forward, are the Cougars' two big scoring threats.

Basketball

(Continued from page one) taken from the combination, and the other centers not quite good enough to be sent in. Milligan's regular position is at guard, and it was on defensive work that he started against Idaho.

Unless Washington State can win from the Aggies, it will practically be eliminated from the conference title honors. Although the Staters lost their two conference starts, they are not to be under-rated, and with their string of veterans are likely to upset the hopes of a championship contender.

Reinhart's Teams Win

Reinhart's basketball teams first played W. S. C. in 1924, and have never been beaten by the Cougars. The game tonight will be the ninth one between the Webfoots and Cougars.

Oregon-W. S. C. scores since 1924 follow:

1924—Oregon 38; W. S. C. 31.
Oregon 33; W. S. C. 29.
1925—Oregon 30; W. S. C. 26.
Oregon 43; W. S. C. 16.
1926—Oregon 34; W. S. C. 22.
Oregon 35; W. S. C. 23.
1927—Oregon 31; W. S. C. 14.
Oregon 43; W. S. C. 23.

Durant

(Continued from page one) papers wrong? I don't believe it is our newspapers. What we mean by news is crime and corruption. Psychology is another one of those freaks that is an ever-changing fashion like Easter hats.

"But after all is said about it, I believe this is the most moral generation in the history of the world." And at this juncture Dr. Durant poured out a full glass of water from the pitcher beside him and smilingly said: "And that was about morals."

Dr. Durant declared that the moral code of mankind, chiefly in the United States, has changed, principally through the postponement of marriage, the new moral ideas, and the decay of fear. The young can no longer be ruled by terror, he said.

He expressed the belief that America was based upon a broader foundation than any other great nation of the past but that eventually Time, relentless, destructive Time, would crumble it to dust. The things that would live would be the thoughts and ideas.

"I do not believe that Greece is dead. It was not the land nor the people that was Greece, but the thoughts and the ideas. Plato is still teaching his students and more students than he taught when he was physically alive," the speaker continued.

"When mechanical power becomes cheaper than the lowliest slave, it will have done something. Then will Socrates' ideals have been fulfilled."

Dean George Rebec, head of the philosophy department, introduced the speaker.

Frosh Quintet Wins All Games On Trip South

Work Poor, Say Papers; Fast Breaking Style Of Play Used

Frosh, 37; Ashland High, 21.
Frosh, 25; Medford High, 17.
Frosh, 44; Klamath Falls American Legion, 25.

Spike Leslie and his hoop-looping Webfoot ducklings are back on the Oregon campus after a week-end of victorious barnstorming in Ashland, Medford, and Klamath Falls.

Last Thursday Spike and his crew left for Ashland, where they played their first game, winning 37 to 21. The Ashland papers comment on the frosh quintet as having shown the fastest brand of basketball seen on their court for a number of moons. Archer and Olinger were the bright lights of this opening tilt, although Eberhart was not far behind. The lanky Gene was high point scorer.

Windsor Calkins, an ex-Eugene high player, was in the opening freshman line-up for the Ashland fray, otherwise it was the same that started here against Commerce high of Portland.

The next night in the Medford Armory the yearlings jolted the Medfordites for the count of 25 to 17. This game was accredited in the Medford papers as being fast, but replete with fouls. The frosh met with stiffer competition in this affair. High point honors went to a Medford prepper, Newland, with eight counters. Archer and Eberhart each rattled the backboards for seven.

Saturday night the freshmen hoopers went against the Klamath Falls American Legion quintet. The game was fast and clean, and the score was high. The yearlings topped the Legionnaires, 44 to 25. One of the players for the Klamath contingent was Ted Gillenwaters, ex-Oregon varsity eager.

Although the southern Oregon press reported the frosh team to be lacking considerably in teamwork, it remarked favorably on the fast breaking style of play employed by Leslie's men.

Other events aside from basketball were features of the trip, according to reports from members of the team.

In Klamath Falls the team was taken for a ride in a couple of ice-boats rigged out with airplane motors. There were two of the boats. Spike Leslie deposited his 200 and some pounds in the smaller ice-boat. This proved to be an unwise move and caused no small amount of anxiety when the contrivance went through the ice soon after its take-off.

Consternation was especially evident among two of the freshmen passengers, Edwin Stoddard and Ed Dvorak. It seems that among the many accomplishments possessed by these two boating basketeers, swimming, especially in icy waters, is not included.

As the boat began to settle these two gentlemen became loudly vociferous in their demands for succor, "women and children first" to the contrary notwithstanding. After all, no one suffered immersion from the experience, because the boat refused to sink.

Miss Hair To Attend Meeting in Portland

Miss Mozelle Hair, state chairman of Home Education for the Parent-Teacher association, will be in Portland over the coming week-end to attend a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Oregon Congress of Parent-Teacher associations.
