

Fuller Leaves Law Faculty

Illinois University Gives Similar Position

Lon L. Fuller has resigned his position as associate professor of law in the university law school, and will leave soon to take over a similar one in the University of Illinois school of law, it was announced today. The resignation was accepted at a meeting of the University Board of Regents, held last Saturday.

Mr. Fuller has been at Oregon for the past two years. He is a graduate of Stanford, where he was an outstanding student for several years, according to Charles E. Carpenter, dean of the Oregon law school.

"Mr. Fuller has been very successful in his teaching since he has been with us," continued the dean.

Mr. Fuller's successor will be Bernard C. Gavit, a graduate of Washash College, Indiana, and of Chicago University. While at Chicago he was a member of the Order of the Coif, national law honorary society, captain of the university track team, and editor of the college daily. His college career was interrupted by two years of war service, one of which was spent in France.

He is highly recommended by the dean of the Chicago law school, James P. Hall, who calls him "a man of intellectual and scholarly tastes, and an attractive personality."

Grads and Specials To Register March 26

Information cards must be filed by graduate students and those taking only one or two courses in the University on registration day, March 26. A special table will be placed on the lower floor of the Administration Building with the cards to be filed by graduate students. Work To Be Sent To Art Exhibition

Entries Included from All Departments

An exhibit of student work from the University of Oregon school of architecture and allied arts will be sent to the convention of the Pacific Arts Association at Seattle, Washington, the first part of April, it was announced by Nowland B. Zane, chairman of the exhibition committee and professor of interior design.

The exhibit is being prepared now, said Mr. Zane, and will include work from almost every department of the school. The exhibits of school work will be the most comprehensive ever seen in the Pacific Northwest for work from many other schools of art in the west will be shown at the gallery of the Seattle Fine Arts Society, along with the exhibit from the University of Oregon. This will enable the work of the different schools to be compared.

The Katherine B. Baker memorial prize, given annually by the West Seattle Art Club, will be awarded to the best work of art which will be selected by the jury of awards. An honorable mention will be given in painting and sculpture.

A committee of the faculty is deciding upon the mounting of the entries which the University of Oregon will send to Seattle. Careful consideration of the effect of the exhibit as a whole must be given, Mr. Zane explained, since the mounts must be uniform to make the exhibit itself a unit in mounting and placing.

manager this year and will represent the University in the National Constitutional Oratorical contest to be held in some Oregon college town April 29. He is a junior in pre-law.

Coach J. K. Horner has selected J. C. Kendall, circuit judge of Multnomah county, and W. R. Wheeler, credit manager of Allen and Lewis Company, Portland, as two of the judges for tonight's debate. The third judge and the chairman have not yet been chosen.

Many Debates Coming

The debate tonight will be the beginning of a schedule that will include nearly twenty contests throughout the Pacific coast. On their journey through the Southwest, McKeown and Durgan will meet Stanford University, the University of Southern California, the University of California at Los Angeles, Loyola College, and the University of Arizona. Later the University will enter the Northwest Triangular contest, together with the Universities of Washington and Idaho, and the Oregon team that meets the Idahoans will continue its journey to Missoula, where it will debate the University of Montana. Southwestern University, of Los Angeles, will debate the University here during the term, and an Oregon team will meet Washington State College in Portland.

The women varsity debaters have scheduled contests with the Universities of Washington and Idaho, and the freshmen men will meet Eugene

Bible University, Linfield College, Pacific University, and Willamette University.
