

Officers For Corps Named

Permanent Appointments Of Cadet Captains and Lieutenants Made

Permanent appointment of cadet captains and cadet lieutenants in the local R. O. T. C. unit has been announced by Col. W. S. Sinclair simultaneously with the announcement of a battalion review Wednesday, April 11, and the appointment of officers and staff members for the occasion. The commanding cadet officer will be picked later in the term, as Colonel Sinclair believes most of the year's work should be taken into consideration in the appointment.

"The cadet commander is an honor student from the military department with fitting compensations in case he wants a commission in the regular army," Colonel Sinclair declared. "With such reward, it is proper that a careful check be made of the grades of the one to be appointed."

Cadet captains appointed are M. M. Taylor, K. E. Martin, H. W. Hall, W. C. Rutherford, W. E. Read, M. M. Cone, E. C. Howe, V. O. Folts, E. J. Raess. Cadet lieutenants are W. A. Rutherford, W. R. Padrick, R. F. Benjamin, J. R. Keating, W. A. Erickson, F. DeWalt, W. R. Brown.

The battalion review of the local unit will be made shortly after 4 o'clock next Wednesday afternoon before Col. W. S. Sinclair. Commander of troops will be K. E. Martin and adjutant will be H. W. Hall Jr.

Donut Baseball Schedule Ready

Twenty Teams to Compete For Championship

Twenty teams are included in the list of entries for the spring season of donut baseball. Schedules have been worked out the same as with basketball, four leagues with five teams each. Each club will play at least four games, which will mean about 20 games to each league. The winners of the various leagues, or perhaps the two high teams, will play a round-robin for the donut championship.

If the weather permits and the fields are in shape, the season will be opened sometime next week. Schedules will be announced at the beginning of each week, with all the games to be played during that time. The games will start at 4 o'clock, with two fields in operation.

Fred West is in charge of the diamond sport and will be assisted in this official capacity by Beryl Hodgen.

Men are urged to start their warming-up exercises now, as the time is short before the opening of the season. Because of the large number of games this year, all must be played on schedule to finish the sport by the end of the term. Get going and watch the Emerald for schedules each week.

New Students Asked To Give Addresses

Many of the new students who registered this term have failed to turn their Eugene addresses in to the registrar's office, according to Earl M. Pallett, registrar. They are requested to do so as soon as possible, so that notification of dates for taking the English A and psychological entrance examinations may be sent.

All old students who have changed their addresses are also asked to acquaint the registrar's office with the changes.

Sociology, History, and Agriculture, Interests of Dr. Frederic G. Young

A sociologist by profession, an historian by hobby, and a farmer by avocation, that is Dr. Frederic G. Young, head of the school of sociology of the University of Oregon.

Every Saturday during the winter time, and as much oftener as possible during the remainder of the year, the dean quits his sociology books and historical quarterlies and betakes himself to his small farm a couple of miles or so east of Springfield where walnuts, cherries, peaches, and filberts grow in profusion.

"Instead of knocking a golf ball about," Dr. Young says, "I stumble over the clouds between my cherry trees." The noteworthy sociologist and the historian of distinction vanish as Dean Young dons overalls to show one of his men how some flourishing young peach tree should be pruned to bring it up in the way it should go, to harvest the crop from some over-loaded cherry, or to superintend the operation of his walnut dryer. Thus he spends his time until darkness and thoughts of his two other occupations send him back to Eugene to finish his compilation of data on the settlement of the Pacific Northwest or to correct papers.

History Investigated

Dr. Young's intense interest in history dates from the days in the later eighties when, a student at Johns Hopkins University, he became acquainted with a young instructor named Herbert B. Adams, who, as the dean said, "had a nose for historical research." Dr. Young, or rather Mr. Young, as he was then, listened to the young man's talk, and he, too, became imbued with the spirit of history which has remained with him to the present day.

When the dean came to the University in 1895, he became thrilled with the possibility of research into the romantic annals of Oregon history, which had not at that time been exploited to any great extent. Lewis and Clark, Jason Lee, Marcus Whitman, John McLoughlin, Captain Gray, all became living figures before his eyes as he studied them. "When I first came to the University," he remarked whimsically, "I had the chair, or rather the bench, of history, sociology, economics and political science. Since then the regents have sawed off the ends, leaving me my sociology in the middle, but I have continued history as a hobby."

Headed Lewis-Clark Fair

Dean Young's hobby has resulted in some marked contributions to the history and welfare of the Northwest. In 1898 he was chosen secretary of the Oregon Historical society, and has held that position ever since as well as editing the quarterly of that organization. In 1904 he was appointed head of the Lewis and Clark fair at Portland. From 1907 to 1917 he sponsored Commonwealth Conferences at Eugene in which the leaders in all fields of activity met to discuss the welfare of the state, and for fifteen years he has edited the quarterly Commonwealth Review.

The other day Dean Young was working on some sociological paper when the reporter called. The day before he had completed and submitted to President Hall a notation of no less than nine events of vital importance in Oregon History whose centennials, semi-centennials, or sesqui-centennials fall during the year of 1928, together with suggestions of the proper observance of those anniversaries. After a quarter hour or so of talk of his three occupations, he excused himself and hurried away to attend a meeting of the Eugene Fruit Growers' Association, of which he is an active member.

His only statement was that, "if there is to be any trouble, it will be in the battle over ward committee elections."

The extensive police plan, it was said, was made necessary by refusal of United States Attorney General John G. Sargent to authorize assignment of special deputy marshals to Chicago's primary, which had been requested by United States Marshal Palmer Anderson at Chicago.

to honor an obscure Missouri preacher with their support for the vice presidency have evidently built their merriment upon misinformation. Records in the office of Secretary of State Kozer here indicate that the Rev. Alonzo F. Workman, Joplin (Mo.) preacher, is a candidate for the presidency on the Democratic ticket and not for the vice presidency, as reported. As such presidential candidate, he so far has to contend with the claims of the Hon. James A. Reed, United States senator, and also from the "show me" state.

So far the Democrats of Oregon are without any vice presidential aspirant upon whom to bestow their votes in the May primary.

In this regard they are not so fortunate as the Republicans, who have been offered the services of

Chemistry Men Go to Portland

Stafford, Williams, and Students at Meet

Prof. O. F. Stafford, head of the chemistry department of the University; Roger J. Williams, associate professor of chemistry, and several chemistry students from the campus left for Portland yesterday to attend the first annual Pacific northwest regional meeting of the American Chemical Society. The sessions, which began Friday evening and continue through today, are being held at Reed College.

Practically all colleges and universities in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and California are represented at what is the first sectional meeting of the American Chemical Society in the northwest.

At the opening meeting Friday evening, Dr. Robert Eccles Swain of Stanford University, spoke on "Scientific Research and Human Welfare."

McKenzie Road Plowed

BEND, Ore., April 6.—(UP)—The state highway department rotary plow, being used by the state highway department in the attempt to break a road through the McKenzie pass snows, today was nearing the deep drifts just to the east of the cut, at the east approach to the lava fields. It is expected that the rotary will be eating its way into 17-foot drifts by the end of the week.

The path made by the plow in its March operations was covered over by the blizzard of last week, it was said by Robert Sawyer, member of the highway commission, and C. E. Wanser, highway department engineer, who returned Thursday afternoon from a trip to Windy Point.

Recent reports from the mile-high divide indicate that the snow is more than 10 feet deep on the McKenzie summit.

Eleven Years Ago

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Eleven years ago today Washington was the scene of wildest turmoil as Woodrow Wilson signed the declaration of war with Germany.

He attached his signature to the document calling the nation to arms at 1:15 p. m. April 6, 1917, while chimes of a church here played "America."

The navy and war departments issued call for more clerks and mobilization of national guardsmen all over the country was put under way. Millions of men joined the army, many serving until well into 1919.

The world still is struggling to recover from the setbacks of the war. This country was too busy today to give much more than casual observance to the anniversary.

Ford Visits London

LONDON, April 6.—(UP)—Henry Ford, the wealthiest visitor who ever came to London, arrived here this afternoon unheralded.

With Mrs. Ford, he entered the Carlton hotel by a side door, but the precaution was unnecessary. The only visitor in the lobby was the United Press correspondent.

"Hello, hello," he shouted to attendants, who rushed excitedly wondering what to do first. Mr. and Mrs. Ford walked quickly to the elevator and in a moment were in their room.

fare." Dr. Swain and several other well-known chemists of the Pacific coast are scheduled to address the conference today.

Six industrial plants in Portland will be inspected by the conference delegates this afternoon as a practical study of the chemistry industry.

The American Chemical Society, with a membership of 15,000, is the largest organization of chemists or scientists in the world. The meeting in Portland is under the auspices of the Oregon section and of Reed College. Dr. R. K. Strong, head of the chemical department at Reed, is directing the details of the meet.
