Inspection of Plant Should Include Teachers

"DADS," an organization limited to fathers of students at the University, sprang into being only last term, but already it has taken on the shape of an instrument that means business. At a breakfast get-together of the executive committee last Sunday the members talked over the student situation at the University and made some decisions, mysteries as yet to the public, which are hinted to be epochal.

Two weeks from Thursday the same body is coming down to the campus to look over the condition of students and University at first hand. Their avowed interest, in the main, is to find out as well as they can in so limited a time just about the present working facilities in each school and department.

Although the investigating group will be handicapped by the brevity of their visit, as expert executives and men of affairs approaching the educational plant in an attitude of helpful criticism, no doubt they will be able to see many lacks and discrepancies that have escaped the more accustomed eyes of the men on the job.

Certain it is, anyway, that whatever their suggestions may be for the betterment of instruction, equipment, or what not, their qualifications as critics will go unchallenged. And whether their sampling of the University as it is now conducted seems sweet or sour to them, it will be from a fresh viewpoint of immense value to Oregon. The policy of the administration is more sensitive to the will of the fathers than to that of any other possible combination of men in the state.

For this reason, the Emerald is anxious, for the students' part, that the Dads, if it is at all feasible in the one day they are spending with us, give a fair proportion of it to a scrutiny of the faculty staff. How does the Oregon faculty size up alongside those of similar institutions?

There has been a lot of desultory student comment this year in particular about professors who are lured away from Oregon by irresistible bait; too often they have been the kind we are sorriest to lose. If the Dads can submit some sort of remedy we shall be grateful. The human factor in the University's teaching equipment should command at least as much deliberation as the housing.

Just To Make It a Bit Brief

OREGON teams with the minor sports rating have successfully vied with their major sports brothers in guarding Oregon's athletic prestige. A continuance of the present discrimination is unwarranted. The decision lies with the executive and student councils. The distinction of major and minor sports should be stopped.

The primitive man settled his quarrels "out of court." In the middle ages, he settled matters by means of trials by combat and similar tests ordered by his judges. When prominent Oregon attorneys trade fisticuffs in the courtroom, it would seem that the present day had adopted a compromise measure.

Another month and all will be over. The summer past, it must all be gone through once more—the collegiate merry-go-round, wherein each rider strives to get the most for his money. The joker in the deck is that there are still some who don't now what they are trying to get. Time to adjust sights before another year passes by.

Oregon sports managers tell of the efficient working of the Knights of the Hook in caring for visiting teams at the University of Washington. In almost the same breath they complain of the difficulty of getting co-operation in caring for teams visiting Eugene. The Oregon Knights is supposed to be a service organization, not an empty honorary for the chosen few.

This is the time of year when, more than ever, the student envies the man who punches the time clock and doesn't have to bother with assignments of indefinite length and density.

Co-ed Takes 'Plane Trip With Father to Seattle

Myrtis Gorst, sophomore in business administration, arrived back on the campus Sunday afternoon to tell her friends about her latest experience in the aviation world. Leaving Eugene Friday, she traveled to Seattle with her father, Vern C. Gorst, pioneer aviation man on the coast, and the rest of the Gorst family and Saturday had the honor of "breaking the bottle" over the prow of the new seaplane which her father just had built for himself.

"I christen thee Zephyr. May the spirit of the West carry you safely over the seven seas." With these words, Myrtis concluded the christening ceremony, on Sand Point, which was attended by a number of Seattle aviators and those interested in flying. Following this she and her father went on a "peach of a trip," as she called it, over the district surrounding Seattle.

The flying boat is a Boeing plane of the pusher type, the Wright Whirlwind motor being above and behind the passenger cabin so that the vision of passengers will be unobstructed. Four passengers in addition to the pilot can be carried in the interior of the luxurious cabin. The cost of the plane was $15,000.

Vern Gorst plans to do a great deal of "harnessing" this summer with the "Zephyr," and has promised to take Myrtis and her brother Wilbur, who plans to become an airplane designer, on many of the trips over the Northwest.

Y. M. C. A. Man Scores Educational Methods

U. C. L. A., Los Angeles, May 7.—(PIP)—J. Stitt Wilson, former socialist mayor of Berkeley, California, and present international lecturer of the Y. M. C. A., scored the methods of education in American universities when he lectured here last week.

"Many students go four years to college and know less when they graduate than when they entered," Wilson charged. "Their minds are pickled with the traditions of those gone on before, and free thought is discouraged. Those who desire to be individual men and women in life should not be imitators of the American university routine."

Professor B. C. Gavit Writes Law Article

Bernard C. Gavit, who is coping to the University of Oregon next year as professor of law, recently had an article published in the Indiana Law Journal dealing with "Future Interests in Indiana."

PROF. HORN DISLIKES RIDING IN A CAR DRIVEN BY VERY INTELLECTUAL PERSONS—THEY USUALLY HAVE THEIR MINDS ON OTHER THINGS.

He ought to feel perfectly safe while riding in any of the student-owned machines.

(We are indebted to the Oregon Journal for the following paragraph which was taken from its account of "Dream Follies" following the Portland showing):

"The interpretation of a Hula girl's dance, by Rodney Banks, eccentric dancer, nearly stopped the show early in the first act. As he stumbled from the stage his grass skirt became unfastened, exposing a very ultra-collegiate pair of shorts."

"WHY RODNEY, HOW COULD YOU?"

FIJIS AT THE CHI O HOUSE FOR DINNER

CHI O: "Have you got a leg?"
 DOUG WILSON: "I had two when I came in."

CHI O: "Oh I mean does the leg of the table bother you?"
 DOUG WILSON: "That's all right, I don't eat with my feet anyway."

SOCIETY NOTE
 "Topsy," Kate Talbot's dog, was a recent week-end guest at the Sigma Nu house.

EVEN COLLEGE PROFESSORS CAN PASS AS COLLEGIANS

Isabell Murry, premiere danseuse of the Dream Follies, had been carrying on quite a flirtation backstage with a collegiate individual with a lil moustache n'everything. "Your act was fine, Izzie." "Thanks, ol' bean," and she gave him a hearty swack on the back.

A few minutes later to some stage hand: "Who is that darling man?" "Harry Camden, professor in the Art Department."

(It required three stage hands and four fire buckets of water to revive Miss Murry).

The joke didn't get out until this morning when he got off the phone.

Film Tips

COLONIAL—"THREE'S A CROWD." A Harry Langdon fan who enjoys seeing our frigid faced hero semaphore emotions to his audience might get his money's worth from this picture—providing everything besides Langdon could be eliminated. The plot just simply isn't. Once in a while a good gag struggles free, but the most of them are quickly drowned in wishy-washy baths. Langdon helps a poor girl and her cheer-ild through reels of snow to a bleak ending when the beneficiaries are reclaimed.

MCDONALD—"RESURRECTION." This photoplay gets off to a sloppy start, but long before the end it more than redeems itself. We haven't read the novel of the same name by Count Leo Tolstoy, upon which the picture is based, but if it is half as good as the motion picture, we want to read it. Dolores Del Rio does some magnificent acting, with Rod La Roche a close second. This is one film drama that can be truthfully called powerful, beautiful and human. It is well worth seeing.

Also there is an atmospheric proglogue, a news reel, a comedy and a "Trip Through the Organ," by Frank D. C. Alexander.

—W. S.

HEILIG: Tuesday and Wednesday: William Haines in "West Point," one of those snappy exhilarating pictures for which Haines is famous, including some of his best sub-titles and gags. As a Plebe, he learns the spirit of the Corps by his cocky attitude towards every one and every thing in general. He proves that he is of the right stuff when he gets the chance to show his merit for his team against the Navy in their annual gridiron classic. Joan Crawford co-stars with Haines as Betty Channing, one of those impulses for bigger and better love affairs; this is one type of picture that is unusual in that it shows America's young men at their best; the pick of the nation. So Haines, erstwhile Breece Wayne at last becomes one of West Point's regulars. A picture that really is good.

Also Pathe News reel; Aesop's Fables comedies and a comedy by Hal Roach that is so funny it is tragical. All together, it is a good performance throughout.

Mortar Board, honorary Senior Woman's society, is sponsoring Wednesday night's performance, and special features will be added.

REX: Last day: "San Francisco Nights" is old stuff with a new twist and is extremely well done. There are some remarkable character sketches portrayed, Tom O'Brien, unforgettable "Bull" of "What Price Glory" superbly plays the jealous bouncer in a Barbary Coast cafe; Mae Busch, who will be remembered as the shoplifter in "The Unholy Three," again scored as Flo, the dancehall girl, in "San Francisco Nights;" while Percy Marmont is also good as Vicery. Every minor detail seems to have been checked up on.

In addition to the feature an interesting News of the World reel, "Jungles of the Amazon" is given and a Van Bibber comedy. Marion Zurcher at the organ.

Never Gets a "Bite" From This Tobacco

Jasper, Tenn. March 23, 1927

Larus & Bro. Co. Richmond, Va. Gentlemen:

I have always wanted to smoke a pipe. After several attempts I gave my "taste" up, for with each trial I got a blistered tongue.

One evening, when looking over a certain outdoor magazine, I read that a certain fisherman could catch more fish when using "Edgeworth," so I decided I would try "his" tobacco—for I am no poor fisherman!

The next day I tried to secure Edgeworth. The local country storekeeper did not have it, so I sent by a friend to the city for my first Edgeworth. Two things have happened: I still smoke Edgeworth, and the local storekeeper always has a supply.

I catch fish and never get "a bite" from Edgeworth!

Yours for keeps,
 H. V. Massey

SEEK YE NO FURTHER, DIOGENES . . .

This jobbie Diogenes was a Greek who left his fruit stand for the commendable purpose of questing for honesty by good old-fashioned lamp-light. And now, loud and ever clearer, rings the cry from the housetops: "Diogenes—throw away your lantern . . . here's an honest cigarette! Have a Camel!"

Camels have but one raison d'être—to pack the smoke-spots of the world with the "fill-fulment" every experienced smoker seeks. Fill your own smoke-spot with a cool cloud of Camel smoke, and hear it sing out—"Eureka!" (from the Greek, "Eureka," meaning—"Oboy, here 'tis!").
