

Oregon's Star Woman Swimmer To Try Olympics

Virginia Lounsbury Will Enter Northwest Swim Tryouts in Portland

By RICHARD H. SYRING Sports Editor
These are the days of woman suffrage and it looks like a woman is going to exceed man on this occasion.

All year Virginia has been hard at work, and will attempt to show results of her long period of training, June 2, when she enters the 200-meter breast stroke at the Pacific Northwest Olympic tryouts in the new Janzen pool, Portland.

Oregon's femme aquatic star has already splashed through the water of the Woman's building tank in 3:25 for the 220-yard race. This is but 10 seconds above the best male varsity swimmer's record.

Miss Lounsbury is favored to win easily in Portland and will probably be sent to the eastern tryouts by Multnomah club.

Last September Virginia made her initial competitive appearance in San Francisco. Swimming in the large Fleischer pool of that place she placed second to Helen Zabriskie.
