

Assembly at Igloo Today Honors Frosh

Governor Patterson To Greet New Students In Behalf of State

Freshmen To Sit in Center Section of McArthur

Freshmen will have their first, last and only chance to be honored by the University of Oregon, the state, and the city of Eugene at the formal opening assembly which will be held in McArthur court at eleven this morning.

Governor I. L. Patterson will be there to welcome the new students in behalf of the state. President Arnold Bennett Hall and Joe McKeown, representing the University of Oregon, will give short talks. Fred Jenkins, president of the Eugene chamber of commerce, will welcome the students to Eugene. The invocation will be given by the Rev. John Maxwell Adams, new University pastor. Roy Bryson will sing and the University orchestra will play.

Freshmen men and women will meet in the northwest corridor of McArthur court and from there will be led to the center section of seats by the deans of the schools who will be dressed in full academic regalia. The processional march is to be played by the University band.

The assembly is in charge of the freshmen week directorate, of which Ron Hubbs is chairman. Other members of the committee are Art Anderson, Paul Hunt, Jane Cochran, and Alson Bristol.

Republican Club Plans Political Rally Soon

Tentative plans of the Campus Republican club include a big political rally to be held at the Eugene hotel sometime next week. According to present arrangements, Charles McNary, Oregon senator, will be the principal speaker.

The University of Oregon organization, which is under direct supervision of Herbert Work, national committeeman, has received recognition of the national republican organization of universities.

The work of the club on the Oregon campus has not been merely to promote the interests of Hoover and Curtis. While, of course, that has been the leading aim, the club has stimulated the students in registering. The registration of students has been almost one hundred per cent this year, according to William B. Adams, chairman of the group.

Emerald Subscription Drive Begins Today

The annual fall drive for Emerald subscriptions will officially begin today noon under the direction of the Oregon Knights, according to Paul Hunt, president of the organization.

Sam Luders, Phi Delta Theta, and Elmer Harrington, Theta Chi, are the knights who will head the campaign. A member of the organization will visit each women's house today noon and give a short talk on behalf of the Emerald and the advantages of sending it home. Emerald subscription books will be left with one girl in each house. The subscription price of the Emerald is $1 a term, $1.50 for two terms, or $2 for the entire year. The subscription drive will close Saturday noon.

De Cou Urges Sports For Faculty Members; Benefit Great, He Feels

"The basic purpose of faculty athletics," says Professor E. E. De Cou, who besides being head of the mathematics department is in charge of that activity, "is to get members of the faculty out of their swivel chairs and away from the worries of their professional duties. We feel that health is of importance to the faculty. A professor is better off as a professor if he takes part in some physical sport."

Mr. De Cou says that for a number of years, at the beginning of each school season, it has been the custom to urge new faculty members, if they are not already so inclined, to get into some form of physical activity as often as possible.

"And I feel," smiled Mr. De Cou, "that their lives are in better shape if they play part of the time, and that the students appreciate it as much as they do."

According to Mr. De Cou, there has been a larger proportion of faculty members at the University of Oregon engaged in regular sports than at any other institution of the country for a long period of years.

Mr. De Cou's favorite sport is mountain climbing. He has been on several trips with the Mazamas of Portland, and has climbed all the mountains of note from the Three Sisters, south to Crater Lake. He likes golf, but plays volleyball as an alternative. Oregon winters are not kind to golf enthusiasts, he thinks.

Dr. Wetherbee Gives Travelogue on India

Dr. Joseph R. Wetherbee, local lecturer and traveler, gave an interesting travelogue and motion picture story of India, at the "Y" hut last night. The lecture was under the sponsorship of the Cosmopolitan club.

Starting at Calcutta with his motion picture story of Indian life, Dr. Wetherbee took his audience through the magnificent Hindu temples of the Marajabs and Moguls and gave them intimate glimpses of the religious and social conditions of the people.

Smith Holds 3-Vote Lead In Balloting

Sunday Movies Winning Approval of Majority; Opponents Make Gain

Men and Seniors Showing Most Interest in Polls

Smith held his slender lead over Hoover in the second day's balloting of the Emerald's straw vote, and is still ahead by three votes. The total votes cast now stand Smith 57, Hoover 54, and Thomas, the Socialist nominee, six. So far Thomas Varney, the prohibition party's candidate, has not received a single vote.

Although campus sentiment on the Sunday movie question so far seems to be strongly in favor of the proposed measure, the proportion of votes cast against the measure increased during yesterday's balloting. As it now stands, there are 94 votes for the measure and 22 against it, 18 of the latter having been cast yesterday.

Men, mostly senior men, show the greatest interest in the straw vote. In the two days that the voting has been going on, only 22 women have voted, as against the better showing of 95 votes made by the men. Only five graduate students or members of the faculty have cast ballots so far.

The ballot box in the main library will be there until Saturday, and all students and faculty, whether they are registered voters or not, may vote. Ballots must have the name of the voter on them in order to be counted. A careful check is being kept of all the names on the ballots in order to prevent any stuffing of the ballot box.

Dean Allen Receives Fine Printing Books

Two large volumes, representing the finest of European printing and typography from the early sixteenth century to the present day, were received yesterday by Dean Eric W. Allen of the school of journalism, the gift of Dr. John Henry Nash, master printer of San Francisco and also an associate professor in the Oregon journalism school.

One of the volumes represents a collection of the finest of French printing made by Anatole Claudin, a master printer of Paris. Claudin spent twenty years, from 1880 to 1900, collecting and printing the work, reproducing pages and engravings from books printed in all parts of France from the very beginning of printing up to the time he worked. Many reproductions are from internationally famous volumes and early editions of works that are now practically extinct.

The other volume received by Dean Allen is a commemorative of the finest work of E. R. Weiss, a famous German printer. The greater part of the book is devoted to reproductions of beautiful title pages designed by Weiss, but there are also many examples of printing in both old and modern German, of posters, engravings, and many other specimens of fine printing.

The University of Oregon school of journalism is very fortunate in having these two volumes available for examination, according to Dean Allen. To be able to examine the original works of the Claudin collection would be impossible to everyone but an European traveler, but this volume gives reproductions as finely printed as the original. Dean Allen has placed both volumes on exhibition in the main library.

Sport Leaders for Faculty Members of University Chosen

The following faculty members, according to Professor E. E. De Cou of the mathematics department, have been appointed as leaders of the various sports for this year:

Dr. D. R. Davis, assistant professor of mathematics, and Professor A. B. Stillman, of the business administration department, have charge of volleyball. Dr. R. R. Huestis, professor of biology, is handball leader and instructor. Professor S. Stevenson Smith and Miss Mary Perkins, of the English department, are leaders for those members of the faculty who enjoy tennis. Dr. John F. Bovard, head of the school of physical education, is in charge of hiking. Dr. Bovard is also president of the Obsidian club this year, which was formerly known as the Outdoors club.

Miss Mary E. Kent, office manager at the extension division, leads and encourages those faculty members having an inclination for horse-back riding.

U. O. Geologist Hunts Fossils In North Persia

Eugene Callaghan Writes Of Interesting Journey On Scientific Project

Searching the plains of northern Persia for fossils of interest to science, hoping that some evidences might be found indicating the development of man, was the interesting experience during the past summer of Eugene Callaghan, a graduate of the University of Oregon geology department.

Callaghan sailed a few days ago from France for the United States, his party accompanying the first collection of fossils to come to the American museum from Persia. What significance the fossils may have will be determined when they have been examined and described by scientists in this country.

In a letter to Dr. E. T. Hodge, professor of economic geology at the University of Oregon, Callaghan describes his summer's activities. The young Oregonian is entering Columbia university, where he received the Kemp fellowship of $1000.

In the collection of fossils brought back by Callaghan and his company are vertebrates, including skulls of rhinoceros, horses, deer, gazelle, carnivore and other bones of these animals with possibility of other species. It was the original hope of the backers of the expedition that on the highlands of northern Persia might be found evidences of the traverse of early man from his birthplace in central Asia westward into Europe.

Much of the activity of the expedition company was centered in the region about Mt. Sahend. Callaghan flew by Junkers airplane from Tehran to the Iraq border of Persia.

Later, the Oregonian flew from Bagdad to Cairo, passing in sight of Bethlehem and Jerusalem. Many other interesting side trips were taken by the young geologist.

Senior Bench Acquires Annual Disfiguration

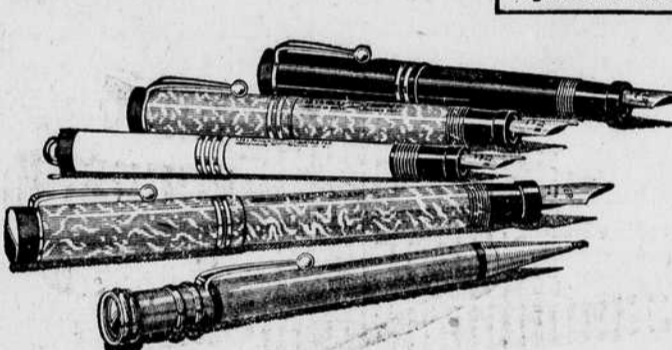

The seniors about the campus were somewhat disappointed today when they sought to display their newly acquired dignity by draping themselves on the senior bench. Yes, it was still in its usual place but in slightly altered condition. They might have deposited their manly forms on its concrete softness as per usual, but the after effects would not be the most desirable. Two huge emerald-green 1932's challenged attention. However, no representatives of that infant class were to be noticed at close range. At first no evidence could be lo-ated, but on closer inspection some empty popcorn bags and three or four greenish finger prints were discerned. Whose finger prints were they? This is a fitting time for all prospective detectives to get on the job. Who knows what startling facts will be brought to light? Perhaps some prominent sophomore or even yet more prominent junior might shed some information on this most interesting of speculations.
