

Lights of Rifle Range To Be Altered Soon

Other Improvements Made Prior to Start Of Target Practice

Freshmen Urged To Turn Out for Practice Shoots

Again the silence of the rifle range is broken, but not to the crack of rifles, and the splutter of lead. Hammers pounding on steel and wood shattered it, for the rifle range is undergoing changes and improvements.

One serious handicap the marksmen had to contend with last year, was poor lighting. Looking through a hole the size of a pin head, at the little black bulls eye that at the required distance looks like the end of a lead pencil, demands that the light fall in just the right quantity and position. The slightest trace of a shadow will often prove deceptive to the most eagle eyed marksman. This trouble is being remedied by an improvement in the method of flooding the targets with light.

Four more targets are being added to the range. This brings the number from eight to twelve, making possible the accommodation of a larger squad of aspirants for places on the team.

Backstops have been greatly improved over those of last year. Considerable trouble was experienced with the bullets splattering off the old type backstop, often cutting the line holding the target in place and causing annoyance and delay during competition and practice.

With a curled edge on the bottom and sides, the improved backstops will send the splattering lead on a loop-the-loop until it finally loses momentum sufficiently for gravity to pull it to the floor.

Captain C. H. Bragg, coach of the rifle team, expressed hope that the improvements will encourage more men to turn out for the rifle team this year. He is especially interested in having a large number of freshmen turn out to practice, realizing that from this raw material he can in all probability develop marksmen who before the end of their four year stay in college will be able to bring honors to Oregon in rifle team competitions.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON "DADS" ELECT OFFICERS

Marksmanship has not received a great deal of attention at Oregon. It is not even rated as a minor sport. A large majority of eastern colleges give the rifle team a minor sport rating. Several large eastern colleges, and one in the middle west, rate marksmanship as a major sport and appropriate large sums of money for prizes and equipment.

America came from Asia originally but that when they arrived they found before them a still earlier people who were for the most part either wiped out or absorbed by the immigrants.

These "animal people" seem to be regarded by the Indians as being wholly apart. They not only call them animals but they absolutely refuse to intermarry with them. Dr. McGovern pointed out that the Indians of that region freely intermarry with members of other Indian tribes and their refusal to intermarry with the "animal people" is significant.

The Indians capture as many of these "animal people" as possible and keep them as slaves. They are

Newbegin Wins Spalding Cup; Has 78 Points

Order of 'O' May Use Gridgraph for Games At Berkeley and L. A.

Wade Newbegin, senior sports manager and swimming letterman, has been adjudged winner of the Spalding cup for having the highest grades of any Order of the 'O' man during the spring term. He made 78 points. George Stadelman was second with 71 points, it was announced at a meeting of the lettermen's club yesterday. John Allen, swimmer, is the present holder of the cup.

Plans for the use of the gridgraph for out-of-town games were discussed. Oregon plays at Berkeley on November 3 and at Los Angeles against U. C. L. A. on November 29, and it is possible that the gridgraph may be used to report both of the games. Since the latter contest is during Thanksgiving vacation, it may be erected and used in a downtown theatre.

George Stadelman was appointed to take charge of the entertainment of freshmen on library steps Thursday morning. The Order of the "O" are official paddle wielders and Stadelman plans some pleasant Thursday morning sessions for the disobedient freshmen.

"DIGA"

THAT'S the telephone "Hello" in Madrid. In London, it's "Are you there?" But in many foreign countries, Americans find a universal language in the telephone salutations. It's good old "Hello"—a subtle tribute to the fact that the telephone is an American invention.

And so it is with elevator service. Even though they say "Diga" in Spain, the architects of the magnificent new Madrid Telephone Building unhesitatingly said "Otis" because Spain demanded the last word in elevators. You will find in Madrid the same type of Signal Control Elevators that are now installed in those monumental telephone buildings in America, in New York, Cleveland, St. Louis and San Francisco.
