

'Giant Killer' by Davis,
Month's Best Book,
Now On Co-op Shelf

A shipment of the latest books has just been received at the Co-op by Marion F. McClain, manager.

One of the most interesting books in the shipment is "Giant Killer" by Elmer Davis, author of "Show Window" and other popular novels. "Giant Killer" was selected by the editorial committee of the American Booksellers association as the most distinguished book for the month of October.

The editorial committee of the American Booksellers association is composed of: Harry Hansen, literary critic of the New York World; Joseph Margolis, head buyer of the Bretano stores; Marion Dodd, president of the Hampshire Book Shop; Dr. Will Durant, philosopher and critic; and Inez Haynes Irwin, famous novelist.

Glenway Westcott's latest production, "Goodbye Wisconsin," is also in the list of books received. Other books in the group are: "Annie Spragg," by Louis Bromfield; "Moses," by Louis Untermeyer; "Hunger Fighter," by Paul de Kruif, whom many will remember as author of "Microbe Hunters"; "The New Temple," by Johan Bojer, this book is a sequel to "Great Hunger." One of the most popular books in the lot, according to Marion F. McClain, should be A. J. Milne's "The House at Pool Corner."

H. G. Wells is represented with his latest work, "The Open Conspiracy." There is a book by Clive Bell, titled "Civilization." In this book Bell sets out to find what lies at the root of civilization. Does he find out—well that's the question. A book of poems by Edna St. Vincent Millay, "The Buck in the Snow," is also in the list. This is the first book of poems written by Miss Millay in five years.

Another very popular book in the list is D. B. Wyndham Lewis's "Francis Villon." This book was selected by the Literary Guild as the outstanding book of September. It has had great popularity all over the country.

Freshmen Women To Be Assistants to Hostess

Freshmen women will act as substitutes for Mrs. Elizabeth Wilson, hostess of the Woman's building, to relieve her from duty on Monday and Friday afternoons, and Tuesday evenings.

This is being arranged by Eca Milligan who is in charge of the activities at the Woman's building. The alphabetical list of women's organizations will be followed and several girls will be assigned for duty.

Starting this week, the plan will continue throughout the year and each house or organization will be responsible for having freshmen in attendance at the building.

This system has been employed in previous years and found to be satisfactory.

play. Ted Pope, two year letterman adds experience to the team.

Five of the Oregon players who will face the Huskies are only sophomores. Four of them are on the line, but so far this season inexperience has not handicapped the power of the Webfoot forwards. Christensen and Colbert, tackles, are playing their first year in conference competition. Shields and Archer are the other two green men on the line. John Kitzmiller is the only inexperienced man in the backfield. The Webfoots started tapering off Wednesday night, and Thursday's practice will be only a light one. On Tuesday the team was given a strenuous drill on offensive tactics, the following practices, however, were light defensive work against Washington formations. A make-shift Washington backfield was organized by Gene Vidal, backfield coach, and Dick Reed, end coach, who both scouted the Husky-

Joe Kalisky Wins
From Don Ragen in Donut Tournament

The dope bucket lost its customary state of equilibrium in the donut tennis series yesterday. Not only did it splash over a bit but aided by a little shove from the tennis racket of Joe Kalisky the time-honored pail toppled over completely.

Thus Don Ragen, Portland court flash, fell before the terrific onslaught of the Eugene boy and caused the big upheaval. Up until yesterday Ragen had been one of the ruling favorites to go into the final rounds. The scores of the hectic sessions were 4-6, 8-6, and 6-4.

Entering the match as the weaker man, Kalisky dropped the first set but then settled down to work and finally got the edge on Ragen for the second set. In the final canto he finished the job and ended Ragen's chance to enter the semi-finals.

The other two matches went off as was expected with Bob Hoogs having little trouble in overcoming Clayton Heiberg 6-1 and 6-1. Marsh Hopkins took two straight sets from Boone Hendricks 6-1 and 6-3.

By his victory yesterday Hoogs went into the semi-finals in the upper bracket, and Gord Jason and Kalisky took their places as semi-finalists in the lower group.

The other man to get into the semi-finals will be determined today when Hopkins and MacLaren meet at 2 o'clock. Hoogs will meet the winner of this match at 4 for the right to enter the finals. The other scheduled match for today is also at 2 p. m. when Jason and Kalisky vie for the finalist position in the lower half.

The doubles tournament for varsity and frosh squads which was originally dated for Thursday will not begin until the first of next week. This was decided yesterday by Coach E. F. Abercrombie because most of the participants would be in Portland attending the Oregon-Washington game this weekend.

Dr. McGovern, following his discovery, was compelled to surrender himself to the Tibetan authorities, yet it was the very man he feared most, the Dalai Lama or supreme Buddhist Pontiff, who finally was instrumental in providing his escape from the bloodthirsty Tibetans.

The Tibetans observe some queer customs, of which Dr. McGovern will tell. The women are the leaders of the country and can have as many husbands as they like, these husbands being devoted slaves.

The ceremony for the deceased is simply to take the dead body to the outskirts of the town, cut it all up and feed it to the dogs and birds.

Tibetans never wash from the day they are born until the day they die.

The country is filled with huge monasteries but the monks have very individual ecclesiastical notions, for entire monasteries frequently wage bitter, savage wars on each other.

and a moustache that makes the efforts of local seniors look unparadoxically crude are remembered even after his comments on fine points of Spanish grammar are forgotten. "There are very few women in the Spanish universities," he went on, "but more and more are attending every year. For a long time they have been permitted to come, but not many took advantage of the opportunity."

Mr. Centeno has been in America less than a year, and knew no English on arrival, but he now speaks quite fluently. "But I cannot understand many of your slang words," he said. "There are so many of them, and they have so many meanings."

"Do I like football? Yes, very much. I go to all the games I can. In Spain the universities have no athletic teams of any kind. Nearly all athletics are sponsored by clubs, to which the students may belong by the payment of a small sum each month. In fact there is practically none of what you call 'campus life.' The universities are located in the centers of the great cities, and have no campuses such as nearly all English and American universities have. "But the American influence is tending to change these conditions. Just now a sum is being raised in Spain by popular subscription to move the University of Madrid to the suburbs of the city, where a campus may be developed."

When asked just what medium carried what he called "American influence" into Spain, he laughed and said, "It is your movies. Nearly all movies shown in Spain are American, and the Spaniards are as familiar with Greta Garbo, John Gilbert, and Douglas Fairbanks as the Americans are."

Mr. Centeno took his degree in medicine at the University of Madrid. Last year he studied bacteriology at the University of Wisconsin. His brother is a Spanish instructor at Princeton.

"I believe I will like this Oregon country," he said. "The climate is very much like that of northern Spain, where I come from. You see there it rains very much."
