

Actors Begin Production Of Studio Plays

Students Asked to Select Favorite Dramas From Tentative List Named

First Presentations Slated For November 21, 22

The drama department, under the direction of Otilie T. Seybolt, will definitely begin to function November 21 and 22, when it will present a series of studio productions. Two weeks later, December 5 and 6, public performances will be given, with the class in stage craft in charge.

There are a number of plays which the department has in consideration, among which are the following: "Saturday's Children," "The Queen's Husband," "The Admirable Crichton," "The Gods of the Mountain," "The Last of Mrs. Cheyne," "The Romantic Young Lady," "The Famous Mrs. Fair," "Mrs. Partidge Presents."

Mrs. Seybolt expressed a wish that anyone interested in any plays on this list would come to her office or send a card expressing his preference.

"We want to give the students the plays which they like best," she said. "If there are any plays that people want to see and that are not on this list we should be glad to consider them."

Local Men Write Text On College Accounting

Professor A. B. Stillman and former Dean F. E. Folts, of the school of business administration, have collaborated for the last three years in writing a suitable accounting text for the use of college students in beginning accounting. The text is now on the press and due for publication shortly by Longmans, Green and Company, as one of the books in the company's economic series.

Other texts in the same series are "American Monetary and Banking Policies," by Professor George W. Dowrie, of Stanford university; "International Trade," by Professor H. T. Collings, of the University of Pennsylvania; and "Economic History of the United States," by Ernest L. Bogart, of the University of Illinois.

Professor Bogart, who has reviewed the manuscript, says, "Accounting is not a wildly exciting subject, but these writers manage to give it a real human interest."

Gridgraph Dances Popular at O. S. C.

OREGON STATE COLLEGE, Corvallis, Oct. 23.—(P. I. P.)—Gridgraph dances are popular here whenever the football team travels. The Varsity O association conducts a play by play description on a huge electrically operated board in the men's gymnasium, while students dance to the tunes of a college orchestra.

Students who cannot travel, attend the gridgraph dances and claim to get almost as much thrill out of these as from the real one. So far this season the gridgraph has depicted the University of Southern California and Washington State games.

U-Boat

of only one person, later he was to have to his credit forty-nine more.

In 1916, as commander of an antiquated windjammer, disguised as a Norwegian freighter, he ran the triple blockade of the Allies and made a 40,000 mile journey from the North Sea to the South Seas in sixteen months. He sank 500,000 tons of shipping, and waged successful warfare without loss of blood.

He took his hostages of war as if on a pleasure cruise, fed them on champagne and cake, and in every case landed them safely.

Ship Sinks in South Seas

Count Luckner's ship, the Sea Eagle, finally came to grief on a coral reef on an uninhabited South Sea island where they established the only German colony then on earth. At the end of six months they set sail in an open boat and nearly starved to death. Eventually they were captured by the British, and Count Luckner was imprisoned until the end of the war.

Since the war Count von Luckner has been elected one of the six honorary citizens of San Francisco, and an honorary member of twenty-three American civic organizations including one American Legion. He, as well as Will Rogers and Senator Couzens, received one of the three new cars the Ford company presented. He has twenty-seven decorations from his own and other countries. The story of his life as written by Lowell Thomas in the book "The Sea Devil" has the unprece-ented record of having sold 80,000 copies in three months. At present Count Luckner is circumnavigating the globe in his own yacht.

"Tramp" Girdles Globe

That vagabond who "circled the globe on a shoestring," Richard Halliburton, dared to live his dreams. He tells of his working his way on tramp steamers, climbing the slopes of Fujiyama, swimming the Hellespont, and ascending the Matterhorn. He stayed a night before the phantom pool in the gardens of Taj Mahal, and climbed the Olympus, Stromboli, and Vesuvius. On the platform he gives a vivid description of his adventures in realizing his dreams.

Miss MacLaren has a varied repertoire of plays. Just which one she will give here is not yet known. However, she renders each with unusual aptitude. She enacts several characters, giving each the posture and personality, through varied idiosyncrasies of manner and speech, which makes the character most effective. Newspaper criticisms proclaim her an intelligent performer and faultless artist.

The Women's League will handle the sale of tickets and will swing into action next week, Robnett said. The price of the season tickets will be announced later.

O.S.C. Students Debate On Political Questions

OREGON STATE COLLEGE, Corvallis, Oct. 23.—(P.I.P.)—Hoover or Smith? Of course, Oregon State students think both ways, but the latest political fad will be to argue the matter out.

With the revival of intramural debating here, 37 organizations have entered the contest for supremacy on the subject "Which political party shall be elected to power in the coming presidential campaign?"

A silver loving cup is the incentive. Debates will be scheduled by lot and the victors, after the schedule is complete, will be given a place on the varsity debate team as well as having their names inscribed on the cup.

What Oregon Students Think

Campus Views on Day's Topics Are Gathered By Inquiring Reporter

Today's Question: Do you think that it is right for the churches to take away the right for students to vote on city questions?

Chal Nooe, senior in journalism: "Same old stuff, churches trying to interfere with anything that might have a tendency to detract from church attendance and well-filled collection plates."

Eleanor Welcome, sophomore in education: "Students spend enough money in this city to justify them voting on city questions. I do not believe the churches have a right to prevent students from voting."

"We pay taxes—why shouldn't we vote," stated James Terry, junior in pre-meds.

Bill Bartle, junior in pre-law: "I do not think the churches should infringe on the students' right to vote on city questions because any student who is twenty-one years old and enjoys the privilege of voting is as much interested as any other citizen of the city, owing to the fact that the houses pay municipal taxes. The question is undoubtedly one of personal prejudice."

Les Falt, junior in business administration: "In my opinion, students at the University of Oregon should be allowed to vote on civic questions since a great deal of business comes to the merchants of Eugene from the students themselves."
