Five o'clock yesterday, at the Igloo, on the south floor, the question of territorial rights was threshed out between the Cosmos club and the Chi Psi quintets. For nearly an hour five men on one team watched every movement of five men on the other group. At the half period Chi Psi, through the efforts of their guard, Ankeny, had managed to outscore their opponents by 12-to-7 in a heated debate. Cosmos club, accordingly concentrated all their efforts on this guard, but a dark horse in the form of Morris, a forward, flashed out and in the final 30 minutes put over 8 points. The final score was Chi Psi, 26; Cosmos club, 17. Lineup;

By ARDEN X. PANGBORN-

Yesterday we considered the first of three possible alternatives growing out of the Oregana issue which will be voted upon today. The alternatives were to vote an addition of $1.25 per term to the fees, to publish an "inferior" year book, or to publish none at all.

We hope we made it sufficiently clear that we do not feel that the students should burden themselves with any additional legal advisor decides the student is fees for a gain so comparatively slight as ownership of an not a qualified voter, the student Oregana—especially when such additional fees would of necessity be charged those who have no interest in the Oregana as well as those who have.

Today we shall consider the two alternatives and also the pertinent questions which a correspondent brings up in regard in Eugene and did so in good faith, to the Emerald. We had anticipated this question and had acting under the precedent of formhoped for a more widespread response, but we are gratified er years . . . and because the that at least one person on the campus read yesterday's con- people challenging the students' tribution to editorial literature and was sufficiently interested vote should have presented the matto consider a little further than did the editorial.
