

31 Heed Call For Freshman Casaba Team

Leslie Starts His Men Out at Fundamentals Of Basketball Play

Daily Practice Time Set For 5:00 in Afternoon

Thirty-one men turned out for the first regular freshman basketball practice at McArthur court last night. Spike Leslie, frosh mentor, started them out on the fundamentals—passing, pivoting, dribbling, shooting, and conditioning exercises. This work will be continued for the rest of this term, and the entire squad will be carried for that length of time.

The players will work out every night. Practice will start at 5:00 o'clock until the donut tournament is closed, and then it will begin at 4:00.

Those who turned out last night were: Gerald Murray, Otto Maner, Malvin McCarty, James McCue, Charles Teague, all from Eugene; DeLaney Brown, Halfway; Jesse Bradley, Klamath Falls; George McFarland, Portland; Kenneth H. Seales, Portland; Richard Kneeland, Portland; Don Baird, Portland; Lew Harris, Summer Lake; Howard Dietrich, Medford; Everett McGee, Ashland; Howard Dirks, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Oregon's Hopes Against Husky Harriers Rise

Jensen's Recovery From Flu Peps Up Hayward; Will Select Five Men

Though for a while after the O. A. C. meet it seemed out of the question to Bill Hayward to enter the cross-country team in the northwest meet at Seattle November 29, Ed Jensen's rapid recovery from the flu which kept him on his back most of last week somewhat brightens the prospect.

Oregon is better off with a five-man team such as they will have to take to the Washington meet than with a larger one, Bill Hayward explains, because though the squad is small, there is keen competition among its members, and its size does not indicate the caliber of the leaders. It was demonstrated in the meet Saturday that if Jensen and Clarence Hill, who broke his leg during the race, could have finished in their usual style, Oregon would have taken three of the first five places—perhaps even the first three.

The course at Seattle is four miles long, while the one at Corvallis is two and one fourth. Jensen has a week to get back into condition. Twice already he has kept right up with the squad on a four mile stretch.

The first four men on the team are to be chosen from those who make the best showing, but Mr. Hayward intends to hold a tryout for fifth place. Men turning out are Ralph Hill, Leonard Steele, Pat Deal, Ed Jensen, Bill Winter, Henry Fitch, and Mervin Simpson.

Celebrities of Campus Endorse Jamboree as A Time for Hilarity

Friday Night Masquerade 'Hat' Affair, They Say

The Journalism "Shack" Inc., an old firm, is now almost exclusively interested in the business of getting ready for the Journalism Jamboree after the rally tomorrow night at the men's gymnasium. The "Shack" is not alone in the preparations, for everyone that has ever attended one of these sessions is digging out some sort of a costume.

By grapevine telegraph the words that many of the old grads are coming back all hopped up about getting to go to the Jamboree. Messages have been sent out to them asking their opinion of the affair. They should come in in time for tomorrow's paper. At any rate while wandering through the "Shack" Jamboree talk is about all that is heard.

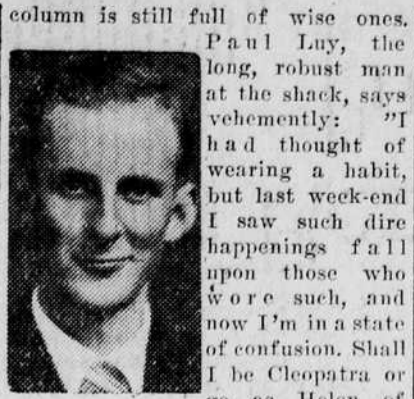

Art Schoeni, managing editor of the Emerald and connoisseur of curves—he's a baseball pitcher—stroked his blond maceel and spoke touchingly, "I suppose I'll have to wear a wig for everyone will know me if I don't. Say, you know I had a heck of a good time last year. You can rat-race all you want to at the 'Jam'."

The president of the Woman's league, likewise a journalist, paused a moment in her thoughts of weighty things and spoke. "This is what Edith Dodge said: 'Why my dears, of course all you little freshmen are going. It's just as much fun as the April Frolic, and then you have the added incentive that the Frolic lacks.'"

Arden Pangborn, editor of the Emerald and married, isn't here, but we know what he would have said. "Sure I'm going, does the editor rate a couple of tickets? Huh? Why last year I know Ray didn't pay to get in. Well, I'll come anyway for it really is worth the coin. Slip me a couple of pastebords, boy. Do you take checks?"

The president of Theta Sigma Phi, women's honorary journalism fraternity, is none other than Dot Baker. Dot says she is coming and she says it emphatically. "For three years now I've gone to the Jamboree and I'm going again. Think I'll get a piece of canvas and go as a tent."

The ex-editor of the Seven Seers

Walter Coover, president of Sigma Delta Chi, men's journalism fraternity, issues this welcome. "Come one, come all, and be at the men's gym at 9 masked. You're darned right I'll be there too, with bells on. Shall I ring you up? And so on, and on, far into the night—"

Co-op Manager Given Post in Book Conclave

Salesmen's Group Slates San Francisco Meeting To Be Held in Spring

A conference of all book sellers west of the Rocky Mountains will be held in San Francisco, April 15 to 17, 1929, for discussion and mutual exchange of ideas.

Marion F. McClain, manager of the University Co-op, has been chosen on the advisory committee by Paul Elder who is perhaps, next to J. K. Gill, considered the greatest pioneer bookseller. Several years ago Mr. McClain was appointed, by the western division of the American Book Sellers' association, to attend a conference for national college sellers at Atlantic City. On this trip he had the opportunity to visit 24 college stores and call upon various manufacturing houses.

Owing to the impossibility for representatives of the West to attend the national conference of American Book Sellers' association, it has been necessary to form the Western Division. He will be in charge of all college discussion which will take place at this conference.

Eleven Pacific coast colleges are members of this division. Membership is confined to those stores which are owned or operated by the school. They are: University of Southern California, University of California at Los Angeles, State Teachers College at San Jose, Stanford University, University of California, Oregon Agriculture College, Washington State College, University of Washington, University of British Columbia, Bellingham State Normal, and University of Oregon.

Faculty Group Study Methods of College Teaching

Committee Reported On Experiments Wednesday Dean Sheldon Chairman

The first regular meeting of the faculty committee on the investigations of methods of college teaching was held Wednesday afternoon. Reports were made of the controlled experiments in college education made here last year and of the projected work for this year.

Dean H. D. Sheldon is chairman of the committee. Other members are: Dr. Ray P. Bowen of the romance languages department, Arthur B. Stillman of the school of business administration, O. F. Stafford of the chemistry department, Dean Charles E. Carpenter of the law school, Dean Ellis F. Lawrence of the school of architecture and allied arts, H. R. Taylor of the psychology department, Dean Henry J. Gilbert of the college of literature, arts and sciences, and Stephenson Smith of the English department.

Last year the committee carried on a series of experiments in different departments in the university to determine the values of different types of instruction in classes of college grade. The results of these experiments are being published by the University Press in a book entitled "Studies in University Methods of Teaching." The book contains a foreword by President Arnold Bennett Hall, "The Relative Importance of Teaching in College and University." Each chapter contains the statistical and scientific information compiled from each experiment.

The chapter titles are: "Controlled Experimentation in the Study of College Methods of Teaching" by Earl R. Douglass; "The Value of Extra Quiz Sections in the Teaching of English History" by Donald G. Barnes and Earl R. Douglass; "The Relative Effectiveness of the Problem and the Lecture Method in Principles of Economies" by Victor P. Morris and Earl R. Douglass; "Project Teaching in College Courses in Educational Psychology" by Harold Saxe Tuttle and Earl R. Douglass; "Problem Method in Psychology" by Howard R. Taylor; "The Relative Effectiveness of Lecture-Recitation and Supervised Individual Methods in the Teaching of Unified Mathematics in College" by D. R. Davis and Earl R. Douglass.

Committees Appointed For Advertising Club

Work on the organization of an advertising club, membership of which will be open to every student on the campus interested in advertising, has been begun by the appointment of four committees.

Such an organization will enable everyone to have an active interest in advertising, and give them an opportunity to have actual experience.
