

Game Monday To Pick Donut Champ Rivals

Betas Will Settle With Elimination Winner; Fast Tussle Expected
Quantity of New Material For Varsity Discovered

By ALEX TAMKIN
...at Monday at 4:10 o'clock the Independents, winners of league B and C will match their prowess against Alpha Tau Omega, champs of league D, at the men's gym. On the following day Beta Theta Pi, who whizzed through Phi Kappa Psi in a cataclysm of points, will meet the best team of the Monday tilt for the championship of the intramural basketball conference.

If a contemplative all-donut team is to be picked there'll be nothing but squawks emanating from all over the campus if this or that man will have been slighted, and the beauty of it all is, that they'll all be righteous ones.
Leading Frosh Named
Just for the kick of it all, glance over some of the leading freshmen who have had active service in casaba pushing this season. There is for example Vincent Dolp, Betas center, who has piled up so many points in all the matches that shortage on score books ensued. His team mate, Kenneth Seales, forward, who hails from Sandy high school, gave him a run for his money. Then there is Don Ragon, Phi Kappa Psi, forward, from Lincoln high, Portland, Heinz Sponckes, Kappa Sigma forward, from Commerce high, same city.

The A. T. O.'s have Ivan Kafoury, Salem high, Chester Knowlton, all-state guard from Tillamook, and Claude Mahan, another all-state man from the cheese binding section. Estill Phipps, Medford representative for all-state honors in the center position, played great ball for Phi Sigma Kappa. The Phi Deltas have two sweet boys in Earl Alexander, forward from Kelo, and Kermit Stevens from University high, Eugene.

McFarlan Good
S. A. E. has a lone delegate from Washington high school, Portland, who played good ball all the way through. George McFarlan, S. P. T. forward, and Don Baird, Kappa Sig center showed the kind of basketball stuff that Franklin high, Portland, puts out.

Independents and Delta Epsilon, babies of the intramural leagues have two representatives apiece who'd look like champions on any team. The former has Gerald Murray, forward from Eugene high, and Carl Moore, guard from University high. They were vital factors in bringing their team into the finals. Sol Director and Henry Levoff of Delta Epsilon, guard and center respectively, come from Lincoln high. Last year both boys on the A. Z. A. team, from Portland, took the trip to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, to play for the national championship. Their quintet smothered all opposition, and Director was chosen all-American A. Z. A. guard, and Levoff received the center berth on the second team. Director, by the way, was also chosen captain of the Portland high school's mythical five, last season.

So there you have the best looking freshman mob of basketweavers in many a season. The outlook looks prosperous for the frosh and varsity.

More Frosh Needed To Sweep Out Igloo

Houses Asked To Furnish Men for Clean-up Work

If the freshmen don't show a little more pep, the Homecoming dance is very likely to be held in an atmosphere of paper plates and wooden spoons, according to the cleanup committee. Only about 35 frosh have volunteered their services for the luncheon dirty work so far, and it looks like the slave drivers will push brooms along with their charges.

The committee needs at least 25 more men to aid in clearing the Igloo floor before the game today. All men's organizations are asked to send their idle yearlings around to McArthur court at 12:45 noon; brooms and other accessories will be furnished.

Every house on the campus will be represented on the committee and it is a good chance for first year men to get acquainted. The work requires only about 30 minutes of each man's time and will in no way interfere with getting seats at the game. All freshmen who can possibly help are again requested to get in touch with "Dutch" Holland at Theta Chi or with Hugh Miller at Phi Kappa Psi immediately.

Thanksgiving Vacation Is Practically Assured

A Thanksgiving vacation to university students is a virtual certainty, is the view taken by Karl W. Outhank, executive secretary.

A rumor has been prevalent on the campus for some time concern-

Directors for 1928 Homecoming Week End

Plans for the 1928 Homecoming celebration at the University of Oregon, November 23 and 24, have been completed by this group of undergraduates.
Back row: Walter Coover, Portland, publicity; Kenton Hamaker, Klamath Falls, features chairman; Joseph Holiday, Pendleton, decorations chairman; Robert Hynd, Portland, assistant general chairman; Roy Herndon, Freewater, general chairman of Homecoming.
Two members of the directorate, Beatrice Milligan, Eugene, chairman for welcoming and accommodations, and William Eddy, Oakland, Cal., rally chairman, were absent when the picture was taken.

ing the fact that, owing to the large number of influenza victims on the campus, there would be a quarantine similar to the one last year.
"The Thanksgiving holidays will be observed as usual," says Mr. Outhank. "There is no apparent reason for depriving the students of this privilege, especially since the epidemic is not increasing at any great rate."
"Of course," he goes on to say, "there is such a possibility, but it is very remote. If the disease develops in the state such action may be necessary, but it is highly improbable."

Special Guests Of Prominence Now On Campus

Governor and Secretary of State Are Listed Among Other Visiting Notables
A number of prominent people in the state, and friends of the university, are here as special guests of the administration.
The list, as given out by Karl W. Outhank, executive secretary, includes Governor and Mrs. I. L. Patterson, George Alexander, state prohibition officer; Frank E. Andrews, vice-president of the Oregon "Dads" and a member of this year's legislature; Homer D. Angell, a prominent alumnus; Edward F. Bailey, state senator, and a former football player at Oregon; W. W. Banks, on the executive committee of the Oregon "Dads"; A. G. Beals, on the board of higher curricula; Colonel Bowen, in charge of the military department here during the war; E. E. Brodie, editor of the Oregon City Enterprise, and former minister to Siam; Phillip R. Brooks, prominent Portland banker; Denton Burdick, in the 1929 house of representatives; Allan A. Bynon, also in the coming session of the legislature; Ralph Cronise, editor of the Albany Democrat-Herald; Marshall Dana, of the Oregon Journal; Dean Dillehunt, of the Medical school; Mrs. George Gerlinger, a member of the board of regents; Major John D. Guthrie, Portland; Hal E. Hoss, new secretary of state; C. A. Howard, state superintendent of schools; Walter W. R. May, advertising manager of the Oregonian; Gus Moser, a state senator; W. K. Newell, state prohibition commissioner, and former director of the university's gift campaign; A. W. Norblad, state senator, and on the executive committee of the Oregon "Dads"; J. A. Ormandy, assistant traffic manager for the Southern Pacific; Fred Fisk, member of the board of regents; Judge G. F. Skipworth, also on the board of regents; Isaac E. Staples, state senator; John C. Veatch, Portland; Harvey Wells, in this year's legislature; F. H. Young, on the editorial staff of the Oregon Voter.

Student Co-op Grows Rapidly in Five Years

During a Homecoming exactly five years ago, the University Co-op moved into its new building at Thirteenth and Kincaid, to make possible the accommodation of its growing stock.
Its former location was the small wooden structure in which the Best Cleaners are now established. This building which was originally facing Thirteenth, was moved back and turned to face Kincaid.
When business began to grow and supplies began to "bulge out the windows," a new location became necessary. Since that time, business for this student managed institution has increased approximately 50 per cent.

Holiday Ball Plans For Portland Frolic Given Out by League

The list of committees for the Christmas college ball has been completed, according to Teddy Swafford, general chairman. The heads of committees were appointed a few days ago: Florence McNeerney, patrons and patronesses; Dorothy Kirk, publicity; and Gladys Clausen, finance.
Others to help with plans for the dance are Jane Gullers and Eleanor Flanagan, finance; Margaret Clark and Levina Hicks, publicity; Agnes Palmer and Wilma Enke, patrons and patronesses.

The Christmas college ball is an annual affair given in Portland under the auspices of the Women's league and is for the benefit of the foreign scholar fund. It is regarded as one of the main big affairs of the year in Portland. December 29 is the date of the dance which is to be held in the grand ball room of the Multnomah hotel.
Tickets will be placed on sale in Eugene and representatives named to sell them on the campus, as well as at several places in Portland to be later designated. Posters will be placed in the high schools of Portland and in some of the large stores to inform the people of the benefit dance.

Oregon Ahead On Comparative Scores Basis

Five Wins, Two Losses in '28 Schedule; Montana Takes 1, Drops 4, Ties 1

Since the 1928 gridiron season started Oregon has won five games and dropped two to opponents, both California teams, amassing a total of 159 points to the foes' 45.

Coach Milburn's Montana Grizzlies have not fared so well in this year's conference race, having won but one game, and that not a conference clash, while they lost four and tied one. Their total so far is 32 to the opponents' 116.

Sickness Keeps Dean In Bed at His Home
Dr. John Straub, the beloved dean emeritus, will be missed by returning "grads" at the game this afternoon.
Dean Straub has been ill with the "flu" all week and will be unable to go to any of the Homecoming affairs.
His temperature, which has been as high as 104 degrees, is now down to 100, though the patient is still in bed, according to Mrs. Straub. She says he feels "pretty blue" about not being able to go to the game and meet the homecoming alumni.
