Other victories for Oregon this season include those over Nevada, Washington State, and Idaho.

Small Crowd Grets Final Appearances

Underwood and Evans Gain Approval

By BARNEY MILLER

From the opening measures of the "March of the Boyards" by Halvorsen to the closing notes of the "March and Chorus from Tannhauser" by Wagner, the joint concert presented by the University Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Rex Underwood, and the University Symphonic choir, under the leadership of John Stark Evans, at McArthur court last night, was, at least to the ears of the rather small crowd, well nigh flawless.

The only criticism which might be offered is that on the final number "March and Chorus from Tannhauser" by Wagner which was rendered by the orchestra and choir combined, was that the orchestra played a trifle too loudly and at times seemed to almost drown out the singing.

If there were any other errors or discrepancies in the performance, they remained unnoticed by the audience, which in its enthusiasm and surprise at the superior quality of the program, was quite above paying attention to such details.

The orchestra displayed a finish, a polish and a general interpretive skill which was quite above the ordinary. Every member seemed to be a well trained part of a machine, each part working in perfect co-
