Bryson Appears In Excellent Recital Program

Delivery Is Serene and Without Physical Effort; Tones Are Full

By Alice Gorman

The song recital of Roy Bryson at the auditorium of the music building last night showed an excellently selected program, a serene pleasantness throughout the delivery, and an appalling lack of physical effort. Mr. Bryson but opens his mouth and the full tones come forth. If Mr. Bryson were a modern poet he would most likely adhere to that type who write without set forms and capitalizations and who allow the reader to imagine his own interpretations. With a bit more expenditure of energy, Mr. Bryson would be a tenor, for the placement of his upper voice is more pleasing than the lower.

The first two eighteenth century airs of Torelli and Arne, Mr. Bryson delivered in the rather melancholy and quiet spirit typical of the latter part of the Renaissance. The following two numbers were in the German and lacked some of the vigor we are accustomed to associate with that language. The Ellblad is the tragic story of a hopeless ecclesiastic love. It was a very interesting number not often found on song recital programs. "Retreat" (La Forge), and "Alone" (Bagley) were the two numbers that displayed the full and even qualities of Mr. Bryson's voice to the best advantage. Carl Sandburg's poem "Briek-layer Love," adapted to song by Hughes, Mr. Bryson sang like a love song. A substitution was made in the fourth group of the "Pauper" which was enthusiastically received and may be said to have been the favorite of the program.

The last number consisted of Leoncavallo's Prologue from Pagliacci. We missed the laugh and a bit of the bitterness that has famed the Martinelli "Pagliacci," but still this made a good ending for this well selected program.

Meiji Team Entertained By Four Fraternities

Members of the Meiji baseball team were entertained at dinner Tuesday night by four fraternity houses, Sigma Nu, Phi Delta Theta, Beta Theta Pi, and Kappa Sigma.

There was one English speaking student with each group, but since their guests could not all talk with them, the fraternities entertained by singing Oregon and fraternity songs.

The Japanese replied by singing their college songs. One of them sang "Blue Heaven" in Japanese. At the Beta Theta Pi house they were taken up the mill race, and at the Kappa Sigma house, the hosts offered to throw a man in the mill race to demonstrate the technique. Although this is the twelfth school the Meiji players have visited this is the first time that they have had an opportunity to see American college life at close hand and have a personal contact with the students.

Fireplace hours -

This spring weather makes it almost too warm for fire in the furnace. However, the big, airy living room is bound to be chilly and there is nothing more hospitable and cheery than a big roaring fire in the fireplace.

Now is the time to get your wood stored for next fall. Have it all-in, dry and waiting for you, when you come back.
