Boynton, head of the department of physics, who is on leave of absence; Timothy Cloran, professor of education; Dr. James H. Gilbert, dean of the college of literature, science and the arts; Dr. E. L. Packard, professor of geology; Dr. P. A. Parsons, dean of the school of sociology; Dr. George Rebec, dean of the graduate school; Dr. Edwin C. Robbins, former dean of the school of business administration; Dr. F. G. G. Schmidt, head of the department of Germanic languages; Dr. Warren D. Smith, head of the department of geology; Orin F. Stafford, head of the department of chemistry; Gertrude B. Warner, director of Oregon museum of fine arts; and the late Frederick G. Young, dean of the school of sociology.

The two Oregon professors whose names appeared in the 1926-27 edition but who later left the university are the late Colin V. Dymont, former dean of the college of literature, science and the arts, and William G. Hale, former head of the law school.

Eugene ranks second among the cities of the state having persons listed in Who's Who. Portland is first, with 98; Eugene second, with 24; Salem third, with 21; McMinnville fourth, with 14; and Corvallis fifth, with 11.

STUDE'S PROGRESS...

A Satire : By Wilfred Brown

So, in my dream, I saw Coedia continue to order one item after another of the fare of the tavern until the table where they sat would not hold all the dishes which the waiter brought unto them. Coedia partook of it heartily, for the food was truly excellent, but Student ate slowly and mournfully, looking over and anon at his bag of scrip.

Presently, as they were all but finished with their repast, the waiter appeared before them and tendered unto Student the reckoning for that which they had ordered. Student went apart to the host of the tavern and poured before him all the scrip from his bag beside the reckoning which the waiter had tendered unto him. The scrip sufficed for the amount of the reckoning and left to Student one coin over to continue on his journey toward the Golden City of Education. Whereupon he sorrowfully departed from the tavern with Coedia, after having wrapped her in his great cloak and taken up her burden on top of his own.

Presently, as they journeyed along the way, they came upon a great burial ground, where were laid away the deceased of the inhabitants of the Land of Collegia, and where the living of the land are wont to go and disport themselves. A pleasant spot it was, with beauteous groves of trees and green bushes scattered about in the midst of the graves.

COEDIA: Ah me, I am so weary, Student, from the toil and travail of the road. Let us turn aside, I prithee, and sit ourselves down and rest us in the shelter of some of the pleasant trees there. The grass is green and is like unto a bed in softness.

STUDENT: But dost thou not think that 'twould be a sacrilege to go among the dead with any but reverent thoughts in our minds?

COEDIA: The dead are dead, and dead men tell no tales. If they did, alas, I fear me the inhabitants of the Happy Land of Collegia should be much shamed in the eyes of the world.

STUDENT: Let us go. But we must not be dallying here for long. We must needs be on toward our goal, the Golden City of Education. And Coedia led Student into the burial ground unto a pleasant little grove of juniper trees with overhanging branches. They entered into the green bower, as did the prophet Elijah of old.

Five hours later it was in my dream when I saw Student and Coedia emerge from under the juniper trees in the burial ground of the Happy Land of Collegia. Now they both did tremble, for the ground was damp and chill at that time of the year.

COEDIA: Ah me, thou art chilled, Student. Thou must come with me unto my dwelling place, the worthy Kappa guild, and warm thyself once more before continuing once again on thy journey.

STUDENT: But shall I be welcome there? Is it fitting that I should go there?

COEDIA: Assuredly. Thou must meet my sisters.

"Good Smoke!" Says Hubby "O. K." with Wife

Brooklyn, N. Y.
August 4, 1928

Larus & Bro. Co.,
Richmond, Va., U. S. A.

Dear Sir:
Going to take the pleasure and drop you a few lines to say that my favorite tobacco is your Edgeworth. I have been a user of it for the last eight years and find it's the only tobacco for a real good smoke.

For the last five or six months I have been trying several other kinds but I find Edgeworth is the only tobacco for me.

If I am smoking any other brand my wife will tell me, as she likes the smell of only Edgeworth. When I'm smoking others she opens all windows and doors.

The reason for writing this letter is that I had a card party last night, and most all of the party asked me what kind of tobacco I used.

So I told them Edgeworth.
Yours very truly,
A smoker of Edgeworth

Lipman-Wolfe to Be Run By Students on May 23

May 23 is the date set for "University Day" in the Lipman-Wolfe department store, according to David E. Faville, dean of the business administration school. The merchandising class will be in charge of the entire store on that day, and the advertising and journalism students will handle the newswriting and publicity.

H. F. Wendall, president of Lipman-Wolfe and Company, is an enthusiastic supporter of this undertaking.

The students will go up to Portland the night before, report at the store at 8:30 for the regular buyer's meeting and then assume their positions for the day.
