Combined Pleasure and Learning

BEFORE the college student can develop intellectuality to any great degree he must discover to himself the true meaning and use of the school library. The college library is not a place for unpleasant cogitation upon disagreeable assignments; nor is it a place for fraternal gatherings or frivolity. The atmosphere of the library should be, and usually is, dignified, cultured, and refined.

Upon the library shelves may be found the world's finest literature. All that time has marked with the indelible stamp of greatness is there, to be had for the asking. Through them one can converse with the greatest intellects in history, and contained in them are the noblest thoughts that the human mind is capable of; recorded in burning print are the thoughts and meditations, the emotions and problems of humanity. By the intelligent reading of good books are we made more perfect.

The library affords the highest form of combined pleasure and learning that a college can offer. In a condensed and easily accessible form is that which, presumably, we all are seeking—knowledge. To the hours spent within its confines the college student owes whatever pretense of learning or literary appreciation he may attain. Time spent in the library is never wasted, and the student always leaves richer in wisdom than when he entered.—St. Mary's Collegian.

English Department Announces Assistants

New appointments to the position of graduate assistant are Celia Stoddard, Ruth Jackson, and Frances Bacon, who will graduate this year; John Scheffer, a graduate student; and Bertram Jessup, who received his degree from the school of journalism a few years ago.

Students to Hear Chester H. Rowell

ure has probably cured this evil," he concluded.
Dr. Rowell has been cast attending conferences. He has travelled 25,000 miles since the fifth of January, and he plans to be in Hawaii, Japan, and China before the year is up. He is connected with the Pacific Relations Institute and will do work in Japan, China, and Manchuria for the next three months in preparation for the conference of the Pacific Relations Institute to be held in Kyoto. This institute is composed of representatives from all people on the Pacific, and nations having sovereignty there.
Dr. Rowell is a speaker of force and distinction, according to Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, who is personally acquainted with him. He was editor and publisher of the Fresno Republican from 1898 to 1920, and has been active in political work as well. His interests and experience take in educational, civic and political subjects. The lecture is open to the general public, as well as to college students.

Strawberry Sundae To Cool Campus Folk

Fresh strawberry ice-cream sundaes, by the dozens and dozens to cool the throats of campus folk after they dance to the strains of George Weber's orchestra will be sold Wednesday, May 29, by the members of W. A. A. on the faculty tennis courts by the library.

The first strawberry festival was held four years ago in 1925. The Women's Athletic association sponsored it to defray expenses of Play Day when girls from O. S. C. came to Eugene to visit for one day. There was a nice day, a big crowd, and plenty of strawberries to make this first festival a success. Everybody ate early and left the table "dessertless," so they had plenty of room for the strawberries and ice cream.

This is probably the last campus dance before the exams, and the final "frolic" of the campus year 1928-1929. Heretofore, festivals have been well attended, and it is expected that this one will also meet with success.

New Books Added to Library Collection

Just a few more new books may be found today at the main library with which students so desiring may entertain themselves.
"Angels and Earthly Creatures," by Eliner Wylie is the first of the interesting new volumes. This book was Eliner Wylie's last work as she died before she had completed arrangements with her publishers for the printing of it. It has been published since her death and was recently placed on the market.
"Destinies" by Maurian looks like an entertaining novel. It is translated by Eric Sutton.
Morand Paul's "Black Magic" is the third addition to the group. It is translated from the French.

Jordan Book Bought By University Library

"The Trend of the American University" by David Starr Jordan was purchased recently by the university library.
The book contains essays on the change and progress in the curriculum of American universities and colleges. They are "Evolution of the College Curriculum," "An Apology for the American University," and "The American University System Past and Present."
This particular volume is autographed by the author and is the 36th copy out of a limited autographed edition of 250.

MOVIES TO BE TAKEN OF TODAY'S AUCTION

Sale of Books on Library Steps Takes Place at 11:00

One of the most important scenes in the campus movie will be "shot" this morning on the library steps just before the assembly, if there is one. The occasion will be an auction sale of books owned (not stolen from the library) by Theta Sigma Phi, women's journalism honorary. There will be books by Havlock Ellis, Shakespeare, and other modern writers, according to Dot Baker, president of the Theta Sig.

Scott Milligan is expected to "double" for Vern Elliot. Dot Burke may or may not be present. As large a crowd as possible is asked to gather for the scene in order that the movie may show the true Oregon spirit.

AL & LU.

AND HOW ABOUT IT, AL & LU? WHAT'S THIS WE HEAR ABOUT YOU SITTING ON THE SENIOR BENCH AGAIN. NEITHER OF YOU IS A SENIOR.

Dear Cook,
You're a newspaper man and ought to appreciate my version of an old definition. If a co-ed paints her cheeks, that isn't news, but if she blushes easily, that's news. Believe it or not, I've found such a co-ed. If you doubt my word, I'll give you her phone number and you can investigate for yourself. Actually, you can almost feel her pink cheeks over the wire.

Chapman Passes Exam Toward Ph. D. Degree

Harmon Chapman, who took his M. A. degree at Oregon last June and has been holding a scholarship in philosophy at Harvard during the present year, has passed the preliminary examination for his doctorate, and before the end of this month will sail for Europe to study for the next two years. On his return he proposes to submit his thesis to the Harvard graduate council and take an examination on it. The successful passing of this will entitle a Ph. D. degree.

Education School Will Train Grade Teachers

Final permission has been granted by the university board of regents to the school of education to offer a four year course for the training of teachers for elementary grades. A detailed curriculum for the new course is being worked out by the education faculty, and the first classes will meet at the beginning of the fall term.

Heretofore education classes have been confined to instruction in high school teaching, and the new course is designed to allow students who wish to teach in the elementary grades a chance to combine liberal arts education with their professional training. The full four years will have to be taken before a student will be granted permission to teach, according to Dean Sheldon.

Library Secures New Books on Many Subjects

Some of Popular Writers Are Ripley, Dinclous And Bereovici

Again, the library has secured some new books for the benefit of anyone interested in current writings. There is a long list this time, covering a wide range of subjects.

An interesting series of books translated from the Swedish dealing with life in the northern parishes has been completed by the recent addition of "Grandson" by Hildreth Dinclous. The other two of the series are "The Minister's Daughter" and "The Sep."

"The Story of the Gypsies" by Konrad Bereovici is a colorful history of the life of the gypsy bands. Bereovici is one of the foremost popular writers on this subject as he has traveled on the road with gypsy bands for many years.

Then there is "Believe It or Not" by Robert L. Ripley. Ripley is the man who draws those fascinating cartoons of unusual and unbelievable happenings in the world for the New York Evening Post; and whose drawings subsequently are printed in a number of papers. He has traveled in 64 countries and declares that he can prove the truth of all his statements from the one that says there are trees that eat men to the one about the flying snakes.

This book is a collection of his cartoons and queer tales.

"Road to Oregon" by W. H. Ghent is an interesting chronicle of the great emigrant trail.

Two new additions dealing with science and study are: "The Building of Culture" by Roland B. Dixon, which is a discussion of the special civilization of races and nations; and "Our Changing Civilization" by John Herman Randall, which deals with the influence of science and machinery on our modern life.

Other new books of varying topics are: "America Challenged," by Lewis P. Carr; "You Can't Print That" by George Selde; "Why the Weather" by Charles Brooks; "American Philosophy of Equality" by T. V. Smith; "The Ship Sails On" by Nordahl Grieg, which is translated from the Norwegian; and "Victim and Victor" by John R. Oliver.
