Thundering Herd of North Faces Oregon First Undefeated

DECEPTIVE PLAYS SET

Vandal Line Light, Hard Hitting; Crowds to Watch Pederson

By PAUL E. JONES, Sports Editor Idaho Aragonought.

Having disposed of their first three opponents in a comparatively easy fashion, 33 Vandals arrived in Portland yesterday and worked out on Multnomah field in preparation for the toughest contest to date against the University of Oregon team here today. The game is one of Saturday's crucial contests and present indications are that the football supremacy of the northwest is likely to hinge on the outcome.

Coach Leo Calland's "thundering herd of the north" will be at top strength for the test as all of the regulars are in condition and the lineup that faces the Oregonians today will probably be the strongest that has started this year.

The Vandals have realized one of their early season ambitions—to face Oregon undefeated. Just how long they can retain this distinction depends on whether Oregon is able to stop the Vandal power attack which wrought havoc with the supposedly impregnable Montana line. On the other hand, the Vandal defense, which was somewhat doubtful in the two non-conference tilts, smeared play after play behind the Montana forward wall and either knocked down or intercepted all but one of the 14 Grizzly passes, holding Milburn's men to two first downs, one of which came from the only completed forward pass thrown by Montana.

So far this season the Vandals have used little but straight football, power and speed to roll up 99 points against their opponents' 13. "Big Bill" Kershnik, Idaho's 215-pound sylph-like halfback, and Fred Wilkie, fullback, have been furnishing most of the power while "Pete" Pederson, a Parisian born Dane known as the "Galloping Swede," Herbie Owens, Kenneth Barrett and Johnny Norman

'Rip-Snorter' Says Manager About Play by Very Little Theatre Group

ARTHUR GRAY, who was a Guild hall star while attending the University of Oregon, will direct "Cock Robin," a mystery comedy, to be presented by the Very Little Theatre Group of Eugene in the Heilig theatre November 7th, announces Kenneth Shumaker, business manager, and an English instructor at the university.

"The play is simply a rip-snorter," he declares.

Dealing with the murder of Hancock Robin, it is an amazing labyrinth of suspects and false clues involving a clever and satisfactory solution.

Members of the cast includes: Mr. Gray, who is playing the part of "Cock Robin," as well as directing the production; Clara Fitch, a former campus

Coaches 'Em

Here's Leo Calland, head coach of the University of Idaho Vandals, who has taken his men to Portland for the Oregon tilt.

Freshman Co-ed Breaks Records In Psych Tests

'33 Class Rating Expected To Fall Short of Average

Girls Rank Higher in Test Of English

A freshman girl has broken all past records by tying the highest scores made in the psychological tests given to the entering freshmen of the university this year. The highest score previously made was that of one male student. This year there are two highest, one girl and one boy.

C. L. Constance, assistant to Dr. Howard R. Taylor, director of the new personnel bureau of the university, compiled the information. This information is relative to the annual tests.

It is expected that the class average this year will be below that of other schools due to the fewer number of high scores. Last year one freshman boy had a score topped by only three others in the United States, and it was mainly due to this fact that the class as a whole maintained an average on a level with that of 30,000 other freshmen in universities and colleges over the country.

It has been found that girls almost invariably rank higher in language and English, while boys take the prize in arithmetic. In other tests it has been found that the average has been the same.

player who has returned from a year in Europe; Gerda Brown, Beatrice Beebe, and Florence Shumaker.

Dr. F. W. Buchanan, another old Guild hall star from the University of Oregon, will play the role of the heavy in the cast.

Andrew Fish, of the history department of the university; Easton Rothwell, of the University high school; Kermit Stevens, William Tugman, and Professor Walter Myers of the university are also included in the cast.

The Very Little Theatre Group, which is mostly composed of people that are permanent residents of Eugene, plans to present a play sometime during the winter term and one in the spring term.

Oregon Frosh Swamp Indian Gridders 42-0

Redskin Team Fails to go Through Yearling Line; Babes Look Good

WATTS SCORING STAR

Dashes 85 Yards for Final Score of Fray; Hughes Shines on Defense

By JACK BURKE

Running up a total score of 42 points against the Chemawa Indians' nothing, the Yearling football team had no difficulty in scoring a victory in their first game of the 1929 season.

Almost the entire squad got into the game at one time or another and taken as a whole the freshman team looks to be one of the strongest in recent years. The reserve material which was for a time of somewhat doubtful strength showed to good advantage and succeeded in scoring two touchdowns while the regulars warmed the bench during the second and third quarter.

Lineup Same

Callison started the men as they have lined up in practice for the past week and the showing they made proved that he had made no mistake in his choice. Within three minutes of play the frosh got under way and in short order Jack Rushlow crashed through a beautiful hole in the center of the Chemawa line and scored. The try for point by Watts was successful. After the ball had been kicked off again the Indians tried a few tricks without avail and passed. Cliff Garnett was on the ball and after intercepting the toss ran some fifteen yards before being downed. After a series of gains by Don Watts and Rushlow, Garnett packed it over. Watts again connected on the try for point. The remainder of the quarter was very similar to the above recital, 20 points in all being scored.

Substitutes Scoreless

After the regulars had been removed from the game, the Redskins' defense stiffened and the substitutes were unable to score in the third period. However, at the start of the last period they sneaked one over and in the latter part of the last quarter after the starting team had swarmed on the field, Don Watts, who by the way is all that has been promised and more, took the ball on his own 15 yard line and with beautiful interference ran the whole 85 yards to a score. Though this was the outstanding run that Watts made there were many others though not so long nor spectacular were equally good.

Many Gains Made

Jack Rushlow in the backfield was the work horse as was predicted. He carried the ball on about every other play and with the aid of the trio in the center of the line made some very good gains.

The line from end to end played a good brand of football and were very strong on defense. In the center Bernie Hughes stood as a "Rock of Gibraltar" and was sure to be on the bottom of the pile when things were straightened out. The ends, Johnny Hare and Red Decker, showed to good advantage and were seldom boxed. Another end who showed promise was Les King who went in to replace Decker. On pass plays he

Take your pick, folks, here are a trio of huskies, two Oregon backfield men and one Idaho lineman. Kitmiller, the "flying Dutchman," is expected to bear the brunt of the Oregon attack, while Johnny Donohue will be held in reserve. Hjort, Idaho guard, has made a name for himself as an aggressive lineman.

Y. W. C. A. Gains Large Increase In Membership

Committee Active Among Frosh Women and New Students

An intensive effort by the membership committee of the Y. W. C. A. to acquaint campus women with the work of the organization, has resulted in a membership increase of 250. Dorothy Shaw, head of the committee, reports.

No campaign for an entire campus membership was made. Instead the committee organization endeavored to acquaint students, particularly frosh, with the work of the Y. W. and to secure women who were interested in the work.

"We want membership to be entirely voluntary and to be the result of vital interest in Y. W.," explained the committee chairman yesterday. "It has been an educational drive more than anything else," Miss Shaw added.

Not quite all of the cards sent out for membership have been returned but the figure will not run much beyond 250.

Working on the committee for the past several weeks with Miss Shaw were Sally Holloway, Marian Camp, Mary Katherine Fenton, Josephine Dammasch, Nell Patrick, Gladys Haberslach and Harriet Kane.

CHEMISTRY OFFICE HAS NEW HELPER

Mrs. Leo Friedman is now the part time secretary for the Chemistry department, working in Dr. O. F. Stafford's office. She is taking the place of Miss Diana Deiningner, who held that position last year.

Obsidian Club Schedules Hike Over Week-End

Group Goes to Lost Creek This Afternoon For Trip

An overnight hiking trip is scheduled for today and Sunday by Obsidians, Eugene outdoor club. Men and women who wish to go will provide their own transportation to the cabins one and one-half miles above Lost Creek ranch, at the foot of McKenzie Pass, about 60 miles from Eugene.

The group will meet at the cabins and camp there overnight. At 7:30 Sunday morning they will drive to Lava lake, near the summit of the mountains, and proceed on foot across the lava fields to the summit of Belknap crater.

Each person should provide himself with appropriate bedding and clothing, and good heavy shoes. Food for four meals should be taken. There is a charge of 25c for the use of the cabins.

Any one who has adequate equipment is invited to go, and should start from here tomorrow afternoon. Mr. J. E. Turnbull, of the Shelton-Turnbull-Fisher Co., is the leader of the expedition, and additional information may be obtained from him.

Uncle Sam's Origin Lies in Pageant of 1851

HERE'S one to spring on the "ask me another" pros: "Who originated Uncle Sam, of cartoon fame?" Few, indeed, are those among us who can remember the origin for it was a goodly number of years ago.

In 1851 George Buchanan of Woburn, Mass., took the part of Uncle Sam in an outdoor pageant given in Amesbury, while a local citizen played the part of John Bull.

Mr. Buchanan appeared in a large beaver hat, around the

Well Matched Teams To Start Drives for Championship Crown

Elevens to Clash in Crucial Fray on Multnomah Field This Afternoon

Coach Names Starting Lineup for Idaho Battle; Two Teams Left on Bench for Use in Varying Onslaught Against Spud Digger Outfit

By JOE BROWN

As the football is torn from its moorings on the 40-yard line on Multnomah field today at 2:30, two of the most colorful teams of the Northwest will charge into each other, urged by tens of thousands of frenzied rooters, mostly Oregonians.

The championship of close to a million square miles of territory may be at stake in this combat between Oregon and Idaho, representing respectively the east and west sides of the Cascades.

After two weeks of careful deliberation, Webfoot coaches have decided on a starting lineup. The ends will be Jack Erdley and Woodie Archer; tackles, George Christensen and Austin Colbert; guards, Marshall Shields and Jerry Lillie; center, George Stadelman; halfbacks, Captain Dave Mason and Al Browne; fullback, Ed Moeller; and quarterback, Johnny Kitmiller.

The Oregon reserves will number more than two teams. Perhaps over twenty Webfoots will get into action this afternoon.

The nucleus of the Oregon team is the line from tackle to tackle. Substitutions in this section are usually made because of injuries or weaknesses and do not affect greatly the style of play.

It is in the backfield and on the ends that substitutions talk the plainest language to spectators and to the opposing coach.

Modern football demands a greatly varied attack, and coaches like McEwan use different backfield and end combinations for each style of play, thus capitalizing on the distinctive types of men on the squad.

Robinson, Kitzmiller, Mason, Londahl, Walt Browne, and Steve Fletcher working with a heavy halfback or fullback synchronize well into a passing, punting, and open play attack.

For steady power plays require

Seven Hundred Students Enroll In 'Army'; Successful Year Seen

WITH an enrollment of almost 700 students, which is in excess of last year's enrollment by about 130 men, the department of military science is looking forward to a very successful year, according to Major Frederick A. Barker, who is in charge of the department.

No changes will be made in the training program this year and the work will be carried on according to the program followed in past years. As has been the rule in the department lately there are more students wishing to take upper division work than there are vacancies to fill. This is, however, a healthy condition, according to Major Barker, and this allows the officers to exercise their judgment in choosing candidates for the upper division courses.

Of particular interest to upper division students who enjoyed their primary military training under the tutelage of Colonel Sinclair is the advice that he is, according to Major Barker, at the present time accumulating his first million, being affiliated with a bond house in Galveston, Texas.

For the benefit of those interested in the recreational side of the department, rifle marksmanship and shoots, Captain C. H. Bragg has received announcements of the William Randolph
