Frosh Still Unpaddled
 THE CLOCK tolled 12:30 yesterday noon and soon its hands rested at the hour of 12:40, the time set for the paddling on the library steps of frosh breakers of traditions. Not a guilty green-capper was in sight.

The truth is, the slips were not ready to be handed out by the Oregon Knights to the offenders as was planned and the Order of the "O" had nothing to do. Meanwhile, the frosh on the campus are going right on breaking these traditions.

When the Knights and the athletes took it upon themselves to punish the first-year men it was not expected that they would wait until the term was more than half over before starting in.

If the traditions are worth defending at all they should have been enforced from the start. Both organizations have had a month to make their plans for this paddling session and probably have made them. But their laxness in getting things started is unjustifiable. At the least, it will look sort of odd to start enforcing age-old traditions the middle of fall term when the way of enforcing them is little different from any previous systems.

The freshmen themselves will have small respect for traditions which their superiors in university rating enforce so weakly.

Tennis, Swimming Are Orphans
 STILL the university is without a swimming and tennis coach. After turning out a championship net team and an aquatic aggregation which carried away northwest honors last year, Ed Abercrombie, coach, resigned last summer to work on his master's degree.

When school started this fall the athletic department was still casting about the bushes for a mentor for the two orphan activities. Two major sports without a coach and the term half over! Stephenson Smith has taken over the destinies of the tennis squad and will act as a director until a coach is procured.

But swimming, which should have started fall practice by October 1, is still on the shelf. Prospects are good for another winning team with many lettermen back. They have been champing their bits for the past month, waiting for the signal to go.

John Anderson has taken a hand with the swimmers, but he can not do much. He is one of them, not their coach. The time is ripe. If Oregon expects to have another brilliant year in tennis and swimming a coach should be on hand to start the ball rolling.

On the Trail
 LAST Wednesday, it seemed, Opportunity sat unnoticed in the Oregon grand-stands and the Oregon band was not there to welcome it. He may have received a deep affront, but after all he is not that jealous, avenging, bald-pate he is said to be, but rather a gruff old gentleman with a twinkle in his eye, who sometimes slackens his pace so that one may walk beside him.

All that is brought to mind by the sight of the band a night or two ago, marching out over the drill fields with only the major and a drum to keep them in step. (Bands, too, should be in step.) Perhaps they were hastening to catch the departing guest. Who knows? They were out of sight immediately, but it is a pleasant fancy to think of them deploying to right and left, searching for old Opportunity.

And if they overtake him, could it not be as he drifts through the stadium again for Dad's Day, and could they not curtsy and bow in the manner of bands, and spell out a Welcome sign for him? Would the Dads mind? No need to wonder, for they know him themselves, and a band successful in pursuit, Dads, and Opportunity would join, don't you believe, in a mightier Mighty Oregon?

The students of the university will have a chance Saturday afternoon at the football game to show their rural or urban tendencies when the university institutes the announcement by radio loud-speakers of the plays that are taking place on the gridiron. This system is much in vogue in California and spectators do not comment upon it.

Bulletin, from state board of health in Kansas: Never kiss in crowded places or in a poorly ventilated room, but if you must kiss, take a hot mustard footbath and avoid drafts in case you feel "all in" afterward. Sounds like the advice of witch doctors.

The University of Texas has banned the sale of apples at football games because the students pelted the band down at the bottom of the grandstand with the cores. Maybe their music had something to do with the rain of cores.

STANFORD EXAM TO BE GIVEN HERE
 The psychology test required for entrance to Stanford university will be given in Eugene, March 22, and in Portland on March 15, for the benefit of those wishing to enter Stanford next year, according to Dr. Howard R. Taylor, of the psychology department, with whom the California school is arranging to have the test.

The test will be given here and in Portland, Dr. Taylor said in explaining the plan.

LEMON TODDY
 GOOD MORNING, EVERYBODY, EXCEPT THE GUY WHO DRANK MY COFFEE LAST NIGHT. THE McDONALD TICKETS ARE STILL WAITING AT THE ALTAR.

Nero was a great man as every Roman nose.

AT THE COLLEGE SIDE
 "Newt"—Alright, Bub, how'll you have your coffee, too hot or too cold?

CLASSIE CASSIE
 She calls the boy friend "Breathless" because he comes to see her in such short pants.

AMONG OUR SOUVENIRS
 Dear Dad,
 I am very ill and have no money. Expectantly, your daughter,
 Billie.

Dear Daughter:—
 I am feeling well and have lots of money.
 Hopelessly yours,
 Dad

TODAY'S PUTRID PUN
 "Pulley" in a sentence.
 That guy has so much pulley never has to work.

Frosh (at dinner dance)—Who's that awful looking hag over there?
 Senior—That's your blind date, big boy.

Lemon Toddy Suggestions for the Emerald shopping column contest—a—Shopping for Sox with Samantha.
 b—Shoplifting with Sophronia.
 c—Foxing the Floorwalker with Fanny.
 d—Foolish Nothings for Flighty Pi Phis.
 e—Sadie, the Silver Squanderer.
 f—A Scotch Expedition to the Sample Rooms.

Quoted from yesterday's Emerald:
 "Scientists tell us that it is alcohol in the leaves that makes them turn red and fall to the ground."
 Some of the profs with red noses will probably be seen holding them tightly as a result.

CONFIDENTIAL GUIDE FOR FRESHMEN
 It's never too late to change (your sox).
 ENGLISH DEPT.—Coach McEwan teaches a course in this dept. and Howe! God's gift to the pledges trying to make their grades. All literature too dirty to be published in the papers is read in the classes, but nobody's supposed to know it.

Stolen Trophy To Be Returned
 Washington Students Send Back Oregon Horn

The Oregon trophy horn is to be returned.
 A story in the University of Washington Daily for last Tuesday states that the horn, stolen from the Oregon rooting section last Saturday at Seattle by a group of Knights of the Hook, has been mailed to the Sigma Nu house, who own the instrument. The return of the noise-maker was "requested" by the Washington student president, Gaynor Langsdorf.

Although the horn is supposed to have been sent south Monday or Tuesday, it had not arrived last night, according to members of Sigma Nu. However, George Stadelman, president of the fraternity, received a letter yesterday from the Washington chapter, stating that the return was promised.

Oregon students will remember the horn as the source of the awful noise at the rally before the Washington game, when the band and nearly everything else was drowned out by the raucous tones of the instrument.

A moment of war days, when it was used in the trenches to warn doughboys of gas attacks, the horn has been in the possession of Sigma Nu for several years, and was resurrected for the Washington fray. Probably it will be heard again.

HORSE FEATHERS
 Prof: Which is correct; a herd of camels or a drove of camels?
 Stude: I always thought they came in packs.
 —Scalper.
 Jimmie: What did she say when you kissed her last night?
 His Friend: She said I should come on Friday hereafter, as that is amateur's night.
 —Medley.
 "So this is Paris," said the leg to the garter.
 —Pelican.
 "Do you like indoor sports?"
 "Yes, but father won't let them stay long."
 —Jade.
 Motorcyclist (in smash-up to couple in car): Why don't you put your arm out when you take a corner.
